DENY HANDLING ANY MONEY

Messrs. Chase and Myers Deny Smoking Room Allegation.

DID NOT THEN KNOW GAMEY

Mr. Myers Tells About Gamey's Visits to Mr. Stratton.

Hon. J. R. Stratton's Private Secretary Spends a Lengthy Period in the Witness Box—A Very Rigid Cross-Examination in Which His Memory Is Put to Severe Tests—Mr. Stratton's Days in His Office and the Work That Was Done—Toronto World Apologizes to the Royal Commission For Contempt of Court.

Toronto, May 1.—The Gamey Commission resumed at 10 a. m. yesterday, the case of The World newspaper, for alleged contempt of court, occupying first attention.

Mr. Baird—Your Lordships, I had the advantage of being in court Wednesday and hearing the argument in connection with The Mail and Empire case. Our article was not as strong and it was published without any disrespect to the court. We have no desire to injure any person in connection with the Commission, nor have we any desire to attack the dignity of the court or be disrespectful.

The Chancellor—Your article is not weaker.

(Reads head lines of article which had appeared in The World newspaper.)

If you say it will not be repeated in the future and you withdraw it and you regret it, then the same action will be taken with regard to it as was taken with regard to the case yesterday.

Mr. Baird—Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Hamlin, Vessel Owner.

R. W. Hamlin, vessel owner, said he knew both Gamey and Frank Sullivan. On the Saturday following Mr. Gamey's story in the House, he and Frank Sullivan and David Wheelihan were standing talking in the Walker House. He saw "Cap." Sullivan there. Gamey came in from the Front street door and beckoned to Frank Sullivan as he went through to the wash room. He had hardly been there a minute till he came back and beckoned to Frank Sullivan the second time. He went to the Front street door and out into the street. Frank Sullivan in consequence of something witness said to him went out and on his road went to where his father was standing.

Not the Same Interview.

Q.—Now, Mr. Gamey, in describing this interview, put it this way. The question is, "And you say he insisted upon speaking to you? A.—Yes. He came just as I was going into the telephone cabinet in the Walker House, he came up to me and said I want to speak to you, and I said I do not want to talk to you now?"

Mr. Blake—That is not the same interview.

Q.—Where is the telephone cabinet in relation to the wash room? A.—It is near the Front street entrance, and the wash room is near the dining-room.

Q.—The time that Sullivan went out with him where did he go? Right past the telephone cabinet? A.—Yes.

Q.—It is right at the Front street door? A.—Yes.

Q.—I want to know if that is the same interview?

The Chancellor—What are you reading from?

Mr. McEvoy—I am reading from Mr. Gamey's evidence.

Mr. Ritchie—He says he went to the telephone cabinet and this is a case of going to the wash room, which is an entirely different thing.

Witness, continuing, said he did not see him go into the telephone cabinet, but thought he came in at the front door. The telephone cabinet and front door stood beside one another.

Cross-examined by Mr. Ritchie, K. C. Witness said he saw Mr. Gamey come in the front door at Front street, and go direct to the wash room. He didn't see him go into the telephone cabinet, and didn't hear Gamey say anything; nor did he hear Gamey and Sullivan talking together. It was between 12 and 1.

David Wheelihan of Campbellville was the next witness. He was there but could throw no light on the interview.

Dr. Strouthers of Sudbury.

Dr. Strouthers, of Sudbury, an old acquaintance of Mr. Gamey's, was called, and related a conversation at the Walker House on the night of September 9, when the member for Manitoulin asked his advice about supporting the Government. Gamey said it would cost him $1,200 or $1,500 to contest the protest against his return, that he could not stand the cost, and that he thought the protest could be arranged if he agreed to become an independent supporter of the Government, and that he would receive the practical patronage of the riding. He said he had done nothing to disqualify him. Strouthers, although a Liberal, advised him against such a course, and told Gamey that he had been elected in his opinion as a Conservative and everyone would say he was bought. The latter indignantly repudiated the idea of financial consideration.

After Globe Interview.

After The Globe interview he met Gamey on the train, and in discussing the situation Gamey said he thought he had followed the only course open to him, and that it was necessary from his point of view that the riding should be represented on the Government side of the House. Between these two conversations he met Gamey near Sudbury, and Gamey said Mr. Whitney was not a successful leader, but spoke highly of Mr. Ross.

Had Gamey Sold Out?

Cross-examined by Mr. Macpherson.

Dr. Strouthers said he had probably told Dr. Arthurs, his medical partner, that he believed Mr. Gamey had gone over to the Government.

Q.—What position did you take with Dr. Arthurs—did you take the position that Gamey had sold out to the Government or not; I want your answer to that, yes or no? A.—I cannot answer that question unless you tell me what you mean by sold out?

Q.—That he had arranged to go over to the Government side. I want to know what you told Dr. Arthurs? A.—I cannot tell.

He said he supported the Government and Dr. Arthurs did so also. Questioned whether his politics had been productive of anything financially in his practice, he said, "Not to mine." His partner, however, Dr. Arthurs, was jail surgeon, physician to the Indians, and C.P.R. surgeon, while he himself was a coroner.

"Deal" About the Protest.

Witness testified that Capt. Sullivan introduced him to his son, Frank, at the Walker House on Sept. 9, but their names were not mentioned by Mr. Gamey. Gamey seemed to be worrying about the protest, saying he believed any person could be unseated if money enough were spent, but that he knew of no reason why he should be disqualified. He said he couldn't afford to fight another election. The doctor advised him to resign, and run on an independent platform as the honorable course. In the conversation, the word "deal" was used, but he explained to Mr. Johnston that the only deal he understood was relative to the withdrawal of the protest and the giving of the patronage of the riding. Gamey said that the patronage of the riding was to be given to him if he turned over.

Mr. Johnston asked that steps be taken to enforce the attendance of A. A. Bowen, of Kemptville, whose name was called but who will not answer.

Smoking Room Story Denied.

Mr. Chas. Chase, messenger at the door of the Executive Council room, said he never saw Mr. Gamey until two days before the House adjourned for this invesigation. He never did any messages for any department but his own since appointed in 1886. He never spoke to Frank Sullivan more than a couple of times. In September last he lived at the old Parliament buildings, and was in the habit of leaving for lunch at 12 or 5 minutes to 12, and returning about 1.20. He could not remember being at the door any day at that time about 12.30. He never delivered any package or letter from Mr. Stratton or Mr. Myers to the smoking-room, and during September he never delivered any money from Mr. Stratton to anyone. The statement that he left a letter or parcel on the table in the smoking-room on Sept. 10 to 11 was not true.

A plan was produced showing the position of his seat in the corridor, and the wash-room and the smoking-room mentioned by Mr. Gamey in connection with the alleged payment of $3,000 to him. None of the Ministers every spoke to him about this occurrence.

Mr. Chase and Mr. Stratton.

"I understand that, for reasons I need not go into, there is no confidence between the Provincial Secretary and yourself?" queried Mr. Johnston.

"There is not," acknowledged Chase.

Q.—Rather the other way? A.—Yes; rather the other way.

"Well," said the counsel, "we need not go into that."

No Love Between Them.

Cross-examined by Mr. Ritchie as to his relations with Mr. Stratton, Chase said: "There has never been much love between the Hon. Mr. Stratton and myself," and asked "And no enmity," replied: "No." "I respect him as the head of the department, nothing more nor less." If he had been asked to deliver an envelope for Mr. Stratton he would have refused, since he was not employed to work for twenty departments, but only for the Premier, the Attorney-General and the Cabinet in session. On one occasion he refused to carry a message for Mr. Harcourt. Mr. Myers never asked him to deliver a parcel, and he would not deliver it if he was asked. He said he had not delivered a parcel from Mr. Myers on the 10th or 11th Sept. to the smoking room or anywhere else. He never saw Mr. Gamey to know him until after the opening of the House. He did not recollect that Mr. Hammond, of The Globe, was around the corridor the night before The Globe interview, but he might have been. He did not recollect Frank Sullivan on January 29. In fact, there was nothing to fix that day in his mind. Asked whether he had told his landlord, Mr. Keenan, that he was the man who had carried the money, Mr. Chase stated that he had said he wan the person accused, and no more. He had seen Mr. Jones frequently about the Buildings.

Myers, the Next Witness.

Mr. Elgin C. Myers said that he was stenographer and typewriter in Mr. Stratton's office during August and September last. His position was in the outer office, and at that time there were in that room Mr. Burrows, the private secretary, and also Mr. Costello, the messenger. He said that Mr. Stratton was not there on Monday, September 8th, but was there Tuesday, September 9th. He did not know Mr. Gamey, and did not see him in September. He took no correspondence from Mr. Stratton on the 9th. He took the dictation for the Aylesworth letter, subsequently signed by Gamey, on September 10th from Mr. Stratton. This was just before he went to luncheon. Mr. W. I. Boland was present, and was still there when he left for luncheon at 11.45. He did not see Mr. Gamey that day or the day before. Neither did he see Mr. Gamey on September 11th. He became acting private secretary to Mr. Stratton when Mr. Burrows was taken ill on Oct. 4, but did not receive the appointment to that position until Jan. 1 this year. He never took any parcel to the smoking-room on those days, and knew nothing about it. He never took any parcel or money or letter of any kind in September and gave it to Mr. Chase to be taken to the smoking-room.

First Saw Mr. Gamey in October.

The first time he saw Mr. Gamey was about the end of October, when he came in and asked for Mr. Stratton. The messenger ushered Gamey in, and he was there about 20 minutes. He never took Mr. Gamey to a room on that occasion, or any other occasion. At Mr. Stratton's request he mailed to Mr. Gamey the letter which Mr. Gamey afterwards sent the Premier about his position. The next time he saw Gamey was on January 13th. Mr. Vance was with Mr. Stratton, and when he came out the messenger ushered in Mr. Gamey. The witness also went in at the same time. Dr. Chamberlain came in four or five minutes later. Mr. Gamey was speaking about a lock-up keeper at Little Current, who was also a hotelkeeper, and it was about this that Dr. Chamberlain was called. After about 25 minutes or half an hour, Mr. Gamey came out of Mr. Stratton's office first, leaving Dr. Chamberlain there.

Next Appointment With Gamey.

The next appointment with Mr. Gamey was towards the end of January. The day before The Globe interview Mr. Gamey telephoned, asking for an appointment with Mr. Stratton. He told Mr. Stratton, and the Minister spoke to Mr. Gamey over the telephone. He did not see Mrf Gamey that day, not till the afternoon of the next day. A little after two that day he was shown into Mr. Stratton's room by Costello and remained fifteen or twenty minutes. He saw The Globe reporter and told him Gamey was there. When coming out, Gamey, said he was not ready to give him the interview now, that he would make a few changes, and would go down town to look it over and come back. He told Mr. Hammond this.

In Mr. Stratton's Office.

Myers said that at about 6 o'clock on the 29th January he saw Gamey in the corridor and told him Mr. Stratton was in, and he went into Mr. Stratton's room. He was there 15 or 20 minutes and came out into witness' room. He and Mr. Hammond then had a chat, and when Mr. Gamey came out they moved over to a table in the corner and sat down. Mr. Gamey went back to the Minister's room after he got through with Mr. Hammond. He was just a minute there, just in and out again. Mr. Gamey and the Minister could not have had an interview in the lobby without his seeing them. Mr. Gamey came straight through his room and out at the door.

Didn't See Sullivan.

He didn't see Sullivan on that occasion. Somebody opened the door from the hall into his room, but he did not know that it was Sullivan. He went to the Minister's room immediately after Gamey left, and Mr. Stratton was coming out with his hat on and the evening papers in his hand. Mr. Hammond told him that the Minister told him to have the interview signed for his own (Hammond's) protection, and that he (Hammond) was glad to have it signed as a guarantee. As far as he knew, Gamey was never there on other occasions, except those mentioned. He never saw Frank Sullivan there with Gamey. He never saw Frank Sullivan in the Minister's room, and saw him perhaps four times in his own office.

Private Way to Stratton's Office.

Cross-examined by Mr. Ritchie, K. C.

Mr. Myers explained from the plan the relations of the private room of the Minister with the lobby and his own. There was a door direct from the corridor into the lobby to the Minister's room. It was always locked, but it could be unlocked by anyone in the room. Mr. Stratton could open it himself if he chosed to do so, and anyone could get into his room from the corridor, without coming through witness' room at all. He had noticed people go in from that private entrance. Mr. Herbert Burrows was secretary up to the fourth of October, but during September was in poor health, and did not do much work.

Letter Wasn't Copied.

Witness said that up to the beginning of October of last year letter press copies were made of the letters. They had two letter books running then, one purely official and the other private. All letters marked private and confidential went into the private book. These were Mr. Stratton's letters not departmental letters at all; but they got up in the letter books and the system was discarded in favor of duplicate letters. This change was made after he became acting secretary. He said they had the files of the duplicate letters, and on being asked to produce them said it was an immense letter case. Counsel said he would like to see for himself if this particular letter of the 10th September was copied in the letter book, and witness said the letter was not copied at all, as it was not apparently a letter written for the Minister or himself to sign, and they only copied such. He had made only one copy of the Aylesworth letter of the 10th Sept., and he knew it was not copied because when he handed it back to the Minister he never saw it again.

A Month or Six Weeks.

Q.—When you gave that back to Mr. Stratton how long was it before you saw a copy of it? A.—A month or six weeks later.

Q.—Under what circumstances did you come to see the copy? A.—He handed it to me and said, "Mail that to Mr. Gamey at Gore Bay."

Q.—Whose typewriter was it written on? A.—I don't know, it was not mine.

Q.—Is that the copy that he gave you? A.—Yes, as nearly as I can recollect; I merely glanced over that one.

Q.—Do you know where he got that copy from (exhibit 13)—copy of letter September the 10th? A.—No.

Q.—Do you recollect whether these words written in ink were there. A.—I don't think there was anything in ink at all.

He put the letter with the letters that were to be mailed, and had no doubt it was of the date Mr. Gamey says.

Opened Stratton's Mail.

He saw Mr. Gamey the day he came in, the 23rd Oct., but did not see him afterwards. Around noon of that day Mr. Stratton asked him to mail the letter to Mr. Gamey. He always opened Mr. Stratton's mail, private or otherwise, and usually took it in to him when he first rang. That day the Minister was busy with inspectors, and he had not seen the mail when Mr. Gamey came in. He went to lunch at a quarter to 12 on the 11th and did not get back as the Minister had gone down town. He had not discussed, but had a general reference to the case with Mr. Stratton. When he saw things in the papers he asked Mr. Stratton about them.

The Explosion.

Mr. Myers said that he was at the gymnasium when the statement was made in the House by Mr. Gamey. He went over from the gymnasium on Yonge street to the Parliament

THE NEW ASSESSMENT

This new assessment, as will be seen by the figures in another column, shows an increase of $205,501 over last year. Practically all the increase comes from income and personal property, the amount levied on lands being lowered by more than $70,000. Supposing that the tax rate this year would be the same as last, the city's income from taxes this year would be about $4,625 more than last year.

It must not be forgotten, however, that there is the Court of Revision yet to reckon with, and, after that body, the judge. You could hardly throw a brick on Front St. these days without hitting an irate taxpayer who proposes to appeal against this assessment. Some find fault with the result and others with the methods used to obtain the result.

One gentleman said: "I would like to know, and I think the taxpayers generally have a right to know, upon what basis the Assessment Commission arrived at its conclusions, and upon what basis the Court of Revision will revise those conclusions. We look to the journalists to tell us."

It may be stated that the Assessment Commissioner says he has simply carried out the provisions of the Statute. It will be for the Court of Revision to see if those provisions have been properly carried out. If they have, then the methods can certainly not be complained of. There is, of course, a certain amount of personal judgment to be used, by the employees of the Assessment Commission, in carrying out those methods. There, it seems to us, lies the crux of the whole matter. There is no denying that some of the changes have been radical ones. Some of our citizens seem to think that they are entitled to an explanation as to how the new results have been obtained, and, inasmuch as they pay the taxes which go to pay the Assessment Commission, they should receive, free of charge, an explanation of the whole matter. We must confess that this request seems to us a reasonable one. Can the Assessment Commissioner find time to answer this question through the press, or failing that, can the City Council see to it that the answer comes through the City Solicitor? It seems to us that this would be the easiest way to straighten out the tangle and perhaps do away with what now looks like a serious cause of dissatisfaction.

Chocolate Fudge

There is nothing else like this Chocolate Fudge of ours. It is in a class by itself. It is so soft, rich and creamy that it is more like a chocolate Ice Cream than a Candy. And yet it is not too soft, nor too rich. Just try it once and you will want more.

J. ARTHUR MARSH.

TARTE "GIVES AWAY" HIS FRIENDS.

Hon. J. Israel Tarte, in his speech on the Budget, made some very grave reflections on the Government. He is out flat-footed against Sir Wilfrid Laurier's policy, and he has thrown considerable light on the methods employed by the Administration. He related how members of the Cabinet, while proclaiming a policy of Free Trade in 1896, had gone to Montreal and made a secret deal with the manufacturers to not only maintain the duties of the Foster tariff but to raise them when an opportune time arrived. Moreover, Mr. Fielding had promised a year ago to revise the tariff, and he was now running away from the issue. These are pretty straight statements, and they are uncontradicted. They show how absolutely lost to a sense of decency members of the Cabinet have become. In private they make secret arrangements which are a direct violation of their open promises, and hope to mislead the people as to their intentions. Mr. Tarte has torn aside the mask and shown up the Administration in its true light. Can the public be so dead to political rectitude that they will allow this double game to go on? It is hardly Canadian to think so. The Government will sooner or later find that such a course cannot hold the confidence of the people. Free Traders of the old school will find very little comfort in this outrage thrust upon them, by the betrayal of their cause.

TIMELY TOPICS.

A Hamilton clergyman, in an address, said some hard things about the way the Liquor law was violated in that city. One of the License Commissioners, in an open letter, demanded proof or an apology. The clergyman cited as proof the fact that he had seen ten drunken, staggering men on Sunday morning, while he was on his way to church. That seems to put it up to the License Commissioners.

The Montreal Star wonders where Frank Sullivan will get his next job. Is the machine going out of commission?

In the Canadian Magazine for May there is an interesting article by U. L. McDougall, Auditor-General of Canada, entitled, "A Quarter of a Century's Audit." The Auditor-General, by the way, is called "The Watchdog of the Treasury." He does not keep down expenses, but he shows exactly how and for what purposes all money was expended. It will thus be seen that public men who care anything for public opinion and have consciences of their own will beware of extravagance and useless expenditure, knowing that Nemesis, in the shape of the Auditor-General, is on their track. Not many years ago a celebrated Grit politician returned to Canada after a trip to France. He was welcomed with bands, fireworks and illuminations galore. It was, the Grit papers said, "a wonderful and spontaneous demonstration." When the Auditor-General's report came out it was seen that all the bands and fireworks and illuminations had been paid for by the Government, which had coolly used the people's money for that purpose.

• • •

The article in question, "A Quarter of a Century's Audit," is a description of the methods used by Mr. McDougall in his department, and, in brief, a history of the department from its inception up to the present time. It is well worthy the perusal of everybody interested in Canadian public affairs. Some of Mr. McDougall's reminiscences are interesting, particularly to Belleville people, the following in reference to Sir Mackenzie Bowell, and, as Sir Mackenzie is just now attending his sessional duties at Ottawa, the article can be published without any suspicion of bad taste. After paying a warm compliment to Sir John A. Macdonald, the Auditor-General says:

To show how warm I was assisted in the same direction by Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who, it is true, was my personal friend if my political opponent, while we were in Parliament together, let me say that it was a common practice of his, when on his way from the western block to the Council Chamber in the eastern, to call at my office and say quite abruptly: "What the devil are you doing now?"

"About what?"

"About so and so."

After my explanation he would usually add, "Ah! that isn't quite as I heard it. Perhaps you aren't very far wrong."

In nearly all of these cases, which, as I mention, were quite frequent, he made the explanation in Council with the effect which might be expected. On one occasion the question was: "Why do you treat us differently—on a certain point—from what you did your own friends during the time they were in office, after you began your work here?" The answer was: "I did not begin the duty here with an undertaking that I knew everything about how all the parts of the work should be done. I did what my experience and judgment told me was right. As soon as I changed my mind I changed my practice. What do you do when you find you are on the wrong road, do you follow it or change to the right at once?" His reply came immediately: "There is nothing more to be said."

The first time I met him after the election of 1887, he said: "I have found out at last that there is some use to be made of you. When I was conducting my campaign, an opponent charged me with having caused an improper payment to be made." He said: "I answered, now Tom, you are an infernal Grit, but the Auditor-General is a worse one if possible, and he delights in letting the public see all our little sins. Wouldn't he have had this one, with the rest, in his book, if it had ever been committed?" He added: "I had the fellow that time."

I naturally cannot restrain the tendency to acknowledge my obligations to this straightforward politician whenever his name is mentioned in my hearing. He seems to have the intuitive faculty of being on the honest side wherever money is involved.

OBJECTED TO LONG ADJOURNMENT

SIR MACKENZIE BOWELL THINKS SENATE SHOULD DRAW HALF PAY IF IT WORKS HALF TIME.

Ottawa, April 30.—In the Senate to-day, after Mr. Gibson had moved for copies of correspondence on labor matters, Mr. Dandurand moved that the House adjourn from to-morrow to May 26.

Mr. Scott hoped the majority were not in favor of the resolution. There was a great quantity of private bill legislation.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell was glad Mr. Scott had relieved him of enquiring whether he had retired from the leadership. The Senate know their duty. Railway and other bills of the most important character were railroaded through the Commons, and considered more carefully in the Senate. There was often a rush of bills at the end of the session, and it had been threatened that the Senate would remain a week to properly consider the bills. He would, for one. If any member had such important business at home let him go home and transact it, whilst his place was filled by some one who would attend to the business of the country. If they only worked half-time let someone introduce a bill to reduce the indemnity one-half. Let them do nothing to lead the people to think that the Senate was unnecessary.

After vigorous speeches on both sides the motion to adjourn for a month carried by [illegible] to 23.

IS YOUR BACK LAME?

Does it hurt to stoop or bend down? Have you a heavy, dull pain at the base of the spine? If so, the best remedy is Nerviline; it will invigorate the tired, sore muscles, make them supple and strong. Nerviline will drive out the pain and make you well in no time. Nothing so good as Nerviline for lumbago, stiff neck, rheumatism, neuralgia and sciatica. Buy a 25c bottle of Polson's Nerviline to-day and try it.

Bancroft Times: In a letter to The Times from Carnduff, Assa., under date of April 11th, Mr. Cyrus Bartlett says:

"When I arrived here on March 27 the thermometer was down to about zero and the snow had not begun to move, and now seeding is started, with the ground fairly dry. This is a splendid part of the prairie. It is very level and clear of scrub, with plenty of good water, but the wind is sometimes terrific, and there are already clouds of dust, so what will it be like when it gets dry? As for me, I am not in love with the prairie, but I intend putting the summer in here. Farm wages are $30 a month, and all kinds of labor accordingly. Land is high here. Wild prairie land is from $9 to $15 an acre, and building material is out of sight. As for wood, there is none available. Fruit is out of the question, and timothy or clover hay you never see. But they have wheat in abundance, and when I say that I have sold it all, for wheat is all they depend upon. My advice to anyone who is comfortable in Ontario is, to stay there, for a man can spend as much getting started in this country as he can live on comfortably in Ontario."

FAIRLY GONE MAD!

is a modest way of telling of the torture that thousands of people have suffered from Skin Diseases—before they learned of that wonderful healer Dr. Agnews Ointment.

But "gone wild with joy" only faintly expresses the deep meaning in the thankful hearts that have been relieved from skin tortures by this greatest of skin healers. Have you Piles? Salt Rheum? Eczema? Ring-worm? Pimples? Has baby got Scald Head? Have you any eruption of the skin? One application of Dr. Agnew's Ointment will help—a few will cure—it never fails. 35 cts. 63

Lieut. Johnson Improving

In a letter written from the Military Hospital, Colchester, England, on April 20th by Mr. James Johnson to his brother, ex-Mayor Johnson, of this city he says, regarding Lieut. Johnson, R.E.: "Great improvement in Gordon and looking infinitely better. He is quite cheerful and bright, and is anxiously anticipating Wednesday, when he will be allowed to sit up for a short time. The Chief Medical Officer has just been in his room and reports most favorably. His temperature and pulse have been normal for some time, and he will get some substantial diet soon. The officers' wives have been very kind and attentive, calling to enquire for him and sending him flowers, books and delicacies, and his brother officers, with whom he is a favorite, have been unremitting in their attention. I took tea with three of the nurses in the Hospital yesterday—one English, one Scotch and one Irish, a happy combination. Gordon will get two or three months' leave when he quits the hospital, which he will likely spend with our relatives in Ireland."

GREATLY ALARMED

By a Persistent Cough, but Permanently Cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. H. P. Burbage, a student at law in Greenville, S. C., had been troubled for four or five years with a continuous cough which he says, "greatly alarmed me, causing me to fear that I was in the first stage of consumption." Mr. Burbage, having seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised concluded to try it. Now read what he says of it: "I soon felt a remarkable change and after using two bottles of the twenty-five cent size, was permanently cured." Sold by all Druggists.

Miss Naylor's Funeral

The remains of the late Miss Nina Naylor, who died in Rochester, N.Y., which arrived here yesterday, were interred this afternoon. The funeral, which took place from the residence of Mr. Harry Naylor, South John street, was attended by many relatives and friends. Services were held at the house, conducted by the Rev. M. W. Maclean. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. Some being contributed by friends in Rochester. The bearers were: Frank Hurden, Delbert Black, Thos. Blaind, Fred Wallace, Milton Campbell and Bert Carr.

On a Saturday Afternoon.

The trolley goes where the railway company says, and you can travel by it only where it goes. Same with a railroad train. Even steamboats stop only at stated points. With a bicycle one starts when one is ready, goes where one wants to, stops when one pleases and comes home when one feels like it. A bicycle brings the rider to unfrequent dells and nooks of the country, to the quiet of nature's reposeful beauty without dust, jostle, noise or confusion. For a Saturday afternoon jaunt the bicycle has a railway, a trolley, or even the crowded after deck of a steamboat beaten out before it starts.

ALL DRUGGISTS WARRANT EVERY BOTTLE.

If troubled with rheumatism, give Chamberlain's Pain Balm a trial. It will not cost you a cent if it does no good. One application will relieve the pain. It also cures sprains and bruises in one-third the time required by any other treatment. Cuts, burns, frostbites, quinsy, pains in the side and chest, glandular and other swellings are quickly cured by applying it. Every bottle warranted. Price, 25 and 50 cents. For sale by all druggists.

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

If thy friend is honey, do not lick him up altogether.

HAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickerson, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

Over 250,000 copies of Charles Dickens' novels are sold annually.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed 'Perfection.'

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Signed, JEAN VALCOURT,
Wotton, P.Q. General Merchant

A woman never knows where the match box is.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to affect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly, subdues the pain and disease.

Use the safe, pleasant, and effectual worm killer, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator; nothing equals it. Procure a bottle and take it home.

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

The best wheel of fortune is honest labor.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

Attend no auctions if thou hast no money.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes; "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

Coral is a talisman against thunder and evils by flood and field.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Many a man's self-conceit is due to his ignorance.

Do not despair of curing your sick headache when you can so easily obtain Carter's Little Liver Pills. They will effect a prompt and permanent cure. Their action is mild and natural.

Well Trimmed Clothing

The trimming of clothing has much to do with its success or failure in the eyes of careful dressers The money the manufacturer saves by cheapening the trimming of his clothing is not to the interest of the wearer. The best trimmed ready-made clothing in Canada is Sanford's of Hamilton, which is sold in Belleville exclusively by ourselves. In this, as in all other respects, it is like first class made to measure. But it costs only half as much, and this recommends it to men who want to be economical, as well as fashionably attired.

Times Have Changed

Not many years ago a ready-made suit could be distinguished from one made-to-measure "a mile off." But brains and money can do wonders, and to-day we can show you a suit all ready to put on, at $10 that would do credit to the best merchant tailor in town. It bears the label of the W. E. Sanford Co., whose garments have a reputation the country over for high quality and correct style. No man who desires to dress well at a moderate expense should refuse to consider the claims of "Sanford" clothing.

The Final Stages of Locomotor Ataxia

ARE ABSOLUTE HELPLESSNESS, LOSS OF ALL POWER AND COMPLETE PARALYSIS — PREVENTED AND CURED BY

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Locomotor ataxia is a form of paralysis which is becoming frightfully common these days, because of the nerve-exhausting habits of the present age.

Probably you have seen victims of this ailment, walking with a jerking motion, and putting their feet down in an awkward manner, and wondered what ailed them. It was locomotor ataxia, or paralysis of the nerves and muscles which control motion.

There is a peculiar numbness of the feet and legs, an uncertain feeling when you start to walk, when you go up or down stairs or around corners. The limbs no longer obey the commands of the brain, the soles of the feet seem to have lost their feeling, and you feel as though you might topple over or move backwards instead of going ahead.

The final stages of locomotor ataxia are absolute helplessness, loss of all power, and complete paralysis of the nervous system.

The time to begin treatment is when the first symptoms of nervous exhaustion become apparent. When you find that you do not sleep well, start up suddenly, have difficulty in concentrating your thoughts, suffer from headache, indigestion, and irritability, it is time to take prompt action to restore the vitality of the blood and nerves. For this purpose there is no more satisfactory treatment than Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Nervous diseases never get well of themselves, nor can they be cured in a few days, but Dr. Chase's Nerve Food assists nature in restoring vitality to wasted nerves, acts in accordance with nature's laws, and is certain to do you good, because it forms new, rich blood and nerve cells. Fifty cents a box, six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

Montreal, April 30.—Since yesterday morning there were brought to the city for sale about 900 head of butchers' cattle, 2500 calves and 400 sheep and lambs. The supplies being in excess of the demand caused a drop in the prices of all kinds of stock. Prime beeves sold at from 4¾c to 5c per lb., medium cattle at from 3½c to 4½c and the common stock at from 2½c to 3½c per lb. Milkmen's strippers were numerous, and sold at from 3c to 4c per lb. Calves sold at from $1 to $12 each. Sheep sold at from 3½c to 4½c per lb. Lambs sold at from $2.50 to $5 each. Fat hogs are plentiful, and good lots sold at about 6¾c per lb., weighed off the cars.

DAISY GORDON'S FOLLY

—OR—

THE WORLD LOST FOR LOVE'S SAKE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY,

Author of "The Crime of Hallow-E'en," "The Flirtations of a Beauty," "Willful Gaynell," "Little Leafy," "Only a Mechanic's Daughter," etc.

CHAPTER I.

Daisy—The Spoiled Darling of the Family.

There was a great flutter of excitement in the Gordon farmhouse one lovely June morning, and it was all caused by the letter Hetty and Olive Gordon, the farmer's two pretty daughters, were reading together.

"Oh, it will be perfectly delightful!" cried Hetty, shaking her dark curls back, her eyes sparkling, and a wave of color, like the heart of a great red rose, flaming up into her dimpled cheeks.

Farmer Gordon pushed back his spectacles, and looked from one lovely, eager face to the other.

"I dunno as I understand this thing," he said; "read the letter again, Hetty, from beginnin' to end."

"I'm sure it's perfectly easy to understand, papa," pouted Olive, impatiently. "It's an invitation from Colonel Ruthven's wife for Hetty and me to spend two weeks at Briar Hall, in Briarvale, to welcome Mrs. Ruthven's niece, a great heiress, who is to arrive in time for the great lawn fete on the 20th.

"The hall has been closed since that awful event happened, it is true, and the grounds show neglect everywhere but the lawn is to be trimmed with bunting, and fairy, colored lamps are to be lighted in the evening, and——"

"Let me see the letter," interrupted the farmer. "Strange that your sister Daisy wasn't asked; the lass will feel terribly cut up about it. That's hardly fair."

"Well, she wasn't," declared Olive. "There's to be just a certain number of young gentlemen invited at the hall, and a certain number of us girls. So, you see, Daisy would have been one too many; she would have had no escort at the boating parties, horseback rides, and all that."

"Bless you, the child wouldn't mind that one [illegible]!" maintained the farmer, good-naturedly. "She could have gone along with either one of you, and your beaus."

Two pairs of black eyes flashed angrily, and two pretty faces flushed to the roots of their dark curls.

"That chit of a thing!" cried Hetty Gordon, contemptuously. "And father"—reddening a little—"you shouldn't try to force the youngest daughter into society until the elder two are married off. There's time enough for Daisy. You must remember I am twenty-two, while Olive is twenty—and Daisy is only sixteen."

"I almost believe you two are getting jealous of little Daisy," laughed the farmer, uproariously, "ever since she declared she would soon be old enough to cut you out with your beaus."

"There she comes now!" cried Olive, hurriedly thrusting the letter into her pocket. "Promise us not to let her know anything about this affair, until we are started and on the way. Then she cannot tease to go."

"Bless little Daisy," said the farmer, gently, as he turned toward the open window, and saw his favorite daughter—his pretty, willful, motherless Daisy—a slim girl, with flying yellow curls, and a face flushed with excitement, hurrying through the clover-field toward the house.

It was no secret that the honest old farmer loved his youngest child best; she was his darling, his idol, this bonny, golden-haired little Daisy. He could never endure having her a whole day out of his sight. He guarded his treasure too well, and that was why he came to lose it.

Over the fields, flying like a bird, came Daisy, and in another moment the young girl had sprung through the vine-wreathed doorway, out of breath, pell-mell into her father's arms.

"Heyday, what's the matter now, Daisy?" he said, laying one rough, toil-hardened hand on the tumbled curls, and looking down into two lovely, blue-bell eyes, swimming in great, big tears.

"Oh, papa," panted Daisy, "is it true that Hetty and Olive are going down to Briar Hall to stay two weeks, and that I am not to go? Oh, please, papa, let me go too," and the lovely, flushed face was raised eagerly, appealingly to his. "And there's to be a grand lawn-party there. Oh, papa, do let me go."

"No doubt you'd enjoy the frolic, pet," rejoined the farmer; "but you can't go, child; you wasn't asked."

"Even if she had been invited, she couldn't have gone," broke in Hetty. "Who would there be to help Margy and look after your meals, father, if she went?"

"Look after his meals," repeated black eyed Olive, with a little laugh and a shrug of her shapely shoulders. "Precious little looking after anything she'll do. She spends all of her time chasing butterflies, or sitting up in the peach tree."

"It's none of your business if I do," blazed out Daisy, wrathfully shaking back her yellow curls and stamping a little mite of a foot. "That's not half so bad as standing in the peach orchard and quarreling over which of you Aleck Hamilton comes over to the farm to see."

And a peal of merry laughter, bright and joyous as a mocking-bird's, fills the old sunny kitchen, much to the amusement of the farmer and the discomfiture of the two girls, who put in an angry disclaimer at once, muttering something about "shocking fibs."

"You shall not go now anyhow," said Hetty, turning angrily away. "If you went I should stay at home."

"So should I," said Olive.

"That would make the picnic, or lawn-fete, or whatever it's going to be, ever so much pleasanter," declared Daisy, with a gay laugh that startled the robins under the eaves from their nests.

"Don't quarrel, girls," interrupted the farmer, hurriedly. "You all know how it makes me feel, and your mother a-layin' in her grave."

"Poor papa!" cried the impulsive Daisy, throwing her soft white arms around his rough neck, and kissing his sunburned face. "I'm awfully sorry I said anything to Hetty and Olive before you. I'll stay at home if you want me to, papa; I wouldn't do it for them, though, mean things."

Like a flash Daisy had torn herself from her father's arms, and was hurrying across the clover-field to her favorite nook, the low branches of the peach tree, to have a real, good cry, for it was a disappointment a bitter, grievous disappointment to this sweet sixteen year old little Daisy, that she must stay at home alone for two long, dreaded weeks, and miss the grand lawn fete, too, where there would be dancing and feasting, mirth, music and merriment Oh, dear, oh, dear, how could she ever stay away?

It would break her heart, and poor Daisy sobbed aloud.

Ah, there was no one to warn her that it was the hand of fate trying to prevent her from going to Briar Hall.

Daisy's eyes were so blinded by tears, she did not see the handsome young man approaching until she ran directly into Alexander Hamilton's arms.

"Dear me!" she cried, persistently turning her tear-swollen face another way. "Is it you, Mr. Aleck?"

"What is the matter, Daisy?" he asked anxiously, attempting to take the little, slim, white, fluttering hands which covered her face, in his; "you've been crying."

"I haven't!" flashed out Daisy, defiantly, "and there's nothing the matter," but somehow the rebellious tears would trickle through the slim fingers.

"Daisy," he said, earnestly, still endeavoring to capture the little hand; "I have something to say to you—something to talk over. Come, let us walk on through the orchard, I——"

"I know all about it, and I don't want to walk," cried Daisy bitterly. "If you go on up to the house you'll find Hetty and Olive there ready enough to talk to you about it."

"But it's you I want to talk to, Daisy," said handsome Aleck Hamilton, eagerly. "I am sure you haven't heard about it, and don't know about it," but before he could finish his sentence Daisy had left him and was half-way across the orchard.

"I almost wish I had told Mr. Aleck all about Hetty and Olive's meanness in teasing papa to keep me at home—mean things," she sobbed.

Alexander Hamilton had walked slowly on to the fields where he espied Farmer Gordon, who had returned to his plowing.

"I'm right glad to see you, Aleck, my boy," said the farmer, extending his toil-hardened hand to the young man. "Have you been around to the house? I reckon you'll find Hetty and Olive there."

"I haven't been to the house; my visit this morning is to you, Mr. Gordon," replied the young man, modestly—fairly blushing to the roots of his bonny dark curls.

"To me, eh?" returned the farmer, good-naturedly.

"Yes, sir," said Aleck. "I leave the village today. I am come to say good-bye."

"Well, well," exclaimed Farmer Gordon, in astonishment; "rather a sudden notion, ain't it? I hope you ain't leavin' for good."

"I am afraid I shall have to be gone a year, sir. I will make a confidant of you, Mr. Gordon, for I know it will go no further. I am going to see how a speculation I have on hand turns out. Every dollar I have earned since I was a boy—pushed out into the world to battle for myself—has gone into it. If I lose, I will bear it like a man. I can commence life anew; thank God, I have strong hands and a stout willing heart."

"That you have, lad," exclaimed the farmer, heartily.

"If fate favors me," continued Aleck, "I will come out with a fortune, sir."

"I hope you may, lad," returned Farmer Gordon. "I've allus stuck to farmin' myself. I don't know much about makin' and [illegible]in', but I hope for your sake you'll come out at the top of the heap."

"Thank you," said Aleck, warmly—adding in a rather embarrassed way: "I have a great incentive to make money now, and return to the village as quickly as possible, for I—I—shall leave my heart behind me."

"Eh?" said the farmer in astonishment.

"It is quite true," said handsome Aleck, paling a little, yet going on bravely. "I leave all that the world holds dear to me in this village—ay, on this farm. Can you not understand, Mr. Gordon?—surely you must have seen that I love one of your daughters."

"No young girl could gain the love of a worthier man," returned the old farmer, slowly. "I never dreamed you cared for either of my girls or that either one of 'em cared for you, but which of 'em is it, young man?"

"You speak as though you have but two daughters, sir," said Aleck, smiling confusedly.

"That's all I have—only two that would be likely to think of love or lovers," returned Farmer Gordon complacently.

Redistribution Bill

SPEECH ON THAT MEASURE BY MR. W. B. NORTHRUP, M.P., IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

And on the strength of that and the other statements in this state paper, the Minister of Justice of that day came to the conclusion that inasmuch as it was doubtful whether the Parliament of Canada had the power to carve out a province from Prince Rupert's Land, it was wise to have Imperial legislation to legalise what the Parliament of Canada had done.

The Minister of Justice. And Imperial legislation was passed.

Mr. Northrup. Certainly.

The Minister of Justice. Where, then, is the argument?

Mr. Northrup. It is this, that the Imperial Parliament a year or two later, passed an Act to legalize what the Parliament of Canada had done, and what the hon. gentleman says the Parliament of Canada had a right to do without any Imperial Act. If the statement be true that the Parliament of Canada had the power to carve out the province of Manitoba from Rupert's Land, the Rt. Hon. Sir John Macdonald and the officers of the Crown of that day were wrong in applying for an Imperial Act, and the Imperial Parliament and the law lords were wrong when they passed an Act of the statute to legalise what the Dominion had a right, of its own accord, to do without any Imperial legislation.

The Minister of Justice. But we are speaking of the present time. What was done at that time was legalized subsequently.

Mr. Northrup. I am speaking of the statement in the report of the hon. gentleman that the province of Manitoba had been carved out of Rupert's Land by legislation of the Parliament of Canada. But on referring to the record, I find that while the Parliament of Canada had attempted to do so, the Minister of Justice of that day doubted its power, and the Imperial Parliament passed a piece of legislation, which was not at all necessary except on the ground that the Parliament of Canada had not the power to do what it professed to do. I am justified, therefore, in my contention that in an important statement of fact the hon. gentleman is not accurate, and that when he says that the province of Manitoba has been carved out of Rupert's Land by legislation of the Parliament of Canada, he should have qualified that statement by pointing out that so doubtful was the power of Parliament to do this considered, that an Act was passed by the Imperial Parliament to legalize what the Dominion Parliament had done. Therefore I submit that is not a fact on which the conclusion arrived at by the Minister of Justice can be based. Further in this report of the hon. Minister of Justice, he says, that British Columbia and Prince Edward Island came into the union under the same section 146 of the British North America Act, and that they were admitted into the union with practically equal rights. On page 6, these are the words he uses:

"Where new partners are admitted into the union, with practically equal rights, one would expect to find the relation of the population of each province to that of the whole Dominion to govern this representation in the popular Chamber."

But as a matter of law is it the case that British Columbia and Prince Edward Island were admitted into the Dominion with practically equal rights? In this very state paper of the hon. Minister of Justice, I find on page 5:

"British Columbia is entitled to be represented in the Senate by three and by six in the house of Commons, the representation to be increased under the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867."

and I find that, according to this same paper, page 5:—

"The terms of union with Prince Edward Island contain a provision to precisely the same effect as clause 10 of the terms of union with British Columbia and the following provisions as to representation:—

"That the population of Prince Edward Island having increased by 15,000 or upwards since the year 1861, the island shall be represented in the House of Commons by six members; the representation to be readjusted from time to time under the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867."

But in the case of British Columbia, the representation was to be not readjusted, as in the case of Prince Edward Island, but increased. It will hardly lie in the mouth of the hon. gentleman to say that the two expressions 'readjusted' and 'increased' are synonymous terms, because in 1892, when the last Redistribution Act was before the House, hon. members opposite, including the present leader of the Government, admitted that under the terms of union, the representation of British Columbia could not be decreased below six. It was not contended then that the representation of Prince Edward Island could not be increased or decreased according to this method of readjustment. And therefore, sir, we find that, as a matter of fact, as a matter of law, of the two provinces, both of which came in under orders in council, in the case of one it is guaranteed that the number of its members can never be less than six, while the other may be reduced to one or none. And yet, the Minister of Justice, in this report on so important a question, a report which, if followed, may lead to a state of affairs never contemplated, and which never could be desired, says that these new provinces were admitted to the union with practically equal rights. I submit to this House could anybody on either side contend for a moment that when one province comes in with six members, which number cannot be decreased, and another comes in with six members, which can be decreased, it is not a mere abuse of language to say that the two provinces came in with equal rights?

THE REASON WHY.

Heals the throat, cures the cough, makes breathing easy,—that's why Angier's Petroleum Emulsion is prescribed by physicians for bronchitis, acute or chronic. It is pleasant to take, agrees with the stomach, and is better than emulsions made from fish oils or other fats.

Maid of All Work.

In Mr. Dooley's new volume, "Mr. Dooley's Opinions," there is an entertaining chapter on "The Poet's Fate." Practically it is an essay about Mr. Kipling, and Mr. Dooley blossoms forth this time as Mr. Kipling's admirer:

"Roodyard Kipling is a diff'rint kind iv a pote. He don't keep pothry f'r style so that he can turn out behind it an' say, 'Boys, what d'ye think iv that f'r high-stheppin' verse?' Comfort an' not display is his motto. Whin he asks what Hogan calls th' Muse f'r to come up an' spind a week with him, he doesn't expict her to set all day in th' hammock on th' front stoop singin' about th' bur-rds. She's got to do th' week's washin', clane th' windows, cook th' meals, chune th' pianny, dust th' furniture, mend th' socks, an' milk th' cow be day, an' be night she's got to set up an' balance th' books iv an empire. Whin this Muse has thrown up her job at Kipling's, she'll be as good a second girl as anny pote wud want to hire. So Roodyard Kipling's pomes is in gr-reat demand. They're warranted not to tear or shrink or r-run in th' wash, an' guaranteed to fit all sizes an' ages."

Men's Spring Suits

The Newest of all.

The more exactingand particular a man may be about exclusiveness in fabrics and patterns, even if he insists on all the advantages he expects from a tailor, then the more these new suits, which we are showing for the first time, will appeal to him.

He will find in them all the style and satisfaction he would in garments that the best tailors could buld to his measure, though they cost a little more than half the tailor's price and the same as he would pay elsewhere for ready-made clothes, that would not prove as satisfactory.

Throughout these splendid garments the tailoring will be found to be faultless; it is of the highest character known and if anything a little more exacting and thorough than is found on the tailor's best productions. And of more importance than all, they possess that well-brod air the tailors have a knack of giving to the clothes they turn out.

Needless to say, the styles as they are found here are correct, that is expected, or that a perfect fit is assured in every case—we are more particular about that than you could be.

Fine suits—the new single and double-breasted styles—of fine Blue and Black Cheviots and Serges, Black insheared Worsteds, Fancy Imported Cassimeres in the latest colorings and overplaid effects. Fancies that are exclusive with us and the tailors .... $6.50, $7.50, $10.00, $12.00, $13.50, $15.00.

BUSH FIRES NEAR BANCROFT

TIES ON TRACK BURNED AND TRAINS DELAYED.

Bush fires have been raging for the past two days in the Township of Dungannon and Faraday, in this County, and considerable damage has been sustained. Yesterday the fire reached the line of the Central Ontario Railway, nine miles this side of Bancroft village, and burned the fences and rails on the track so that trains could not pass over it. The train from the north, which is due at Trenton at 5.25 p.m., had not been able to reach that town at 9 o'clock this morning. A special train from Trenton was this morning despatched to the scene.

THE EVILS OF CONSTIPATION.

This dangerous condition causes sick headache, abdominal pains, and in severe cases insanity and apoplexy. The most agreeable and satisfactory remedy is Ferrozone, which makes the bowels so well ordered that natural and unassisted action is established. It is mild and certain in action and never causes distress or inconvenience, and may be taken as long as required. Pains in the stomach and intestines, piles, biliousness and headache disappear at once when Ferrozone is used. Recommended and sold by druggists, price 50c. Sold by J. S. McKeown. No Pills like Dr. Hamilton's.

G. T. R. Notes

Traffic on the line of the G. T. R. is at present very brisk, both as to passengers and freight.

Mr. J. R. Donnelly, locomotive foreman, yesterday had the yard here sprinkled, which was greatly appreciated by the travelling public.

Mr. O. E. Dewey, of Toronto, General Freight Agent, and Mr. D. O. Wood, of Toronto, representative of the Thomson line of steamers, were in the city yesterday and were shown over the offices and shops here by Mr. T. H. Coppin, local agent.

A special train load of emigrants for the west passed through here yesterday.

DYING BY SLOW DEGREES.

Although not always aware of it yet thousands die by slow degrees of catarrh. It first attacks the nose or throat, then the lungs, and finally spreads all through the system. Catarrhozone is the only remedy that will immediately prevent the spread of this awful disease. Every breath from the Inhaler kills thousands of germs, clears the throat and nose, aids expectoration and relieves the pain across the eyes. Catarrhozone eradicates every vestige of catarrh from the system, and is highly recommended also for bronchitis, asthma, deafness and lung trouble. Price, $1.00; trial size 25 cents, at all druggists. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

FIRE IN TRENTON

WHICH WAS FANNED BY THE FIERCE GALE OF YESTERDAY.

During the gale yesterday afternoon a fire occurred in the town of Trenton. The beautiful residence of Mr. James B. Murdoff, situated on Dufferin avenue, caught fire in the basement, and before the flames were extinguished much damage was done to the building and contents. There was no insurance upon the furniture but some on the building. Some parties who were boarding at the place lost considerable of their effects. During the course of the fire Mrs. Murdoff was overcome by smoke, and after being carried out of the building did not revive for some time.

In the Justice Shop

Trespass Case.

An old man named Richard Bailey was charged with trespassing upon property belonging to Miss Templeton. It appears that there are some vacant lots on Charles street and the accused had been pasturing his cow on them. He had permission to use one lot, but not Miss Templeton's lot. His contention was that he did not know who owned the property, and he was, therefore, an innocent trespasser. Case enlarged for a week. Mr. Wright for plaintiff and Mr. O'Flynn for the defendant.

SPRING AND SUMMER UNDERWEAR.

To be convinced that Quick & Robertson are selling underwear cheap take a look at the north window and see what is being offered at 25c each. Being in a position to handle large quantities, we took advantage of a mill offering and purchased at a ridiculously low figure, something over 300 dozens. Our advice is to buy early and secure best choice.

A FARMER CURED OF RHEUMATISM.

"A man living on a farm near here came in a short time ago completely doubled up with rheumatism. I handed him a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and told him to use it freely and if not satisfied after using it he need not pay a cent for it," says C. P. Rayder, of Pattens Mills, N. Y. "A few days later he walked into the store as straight as a string and handed me a dollar saying, 'give me another bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I want it in the house all the time, for it cured me.'" For sale by all druggists.

CITY FATHERS SEE NEW AIR BRAKE

INTERESTING EXHIBIT AT THE STATION YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

The members of the City Council and Board of Trade were yesterday afternoon invited to the Grand Trunk Railway station for the purpose of inspecting the air brake instruction car, which has been here for some time, and left to-day for Little York. Mayor Graham, Ald. Pope, McFee and Galbraith were all that responded to the invitation. These gentlemen were cordially received by Mr. Albert Wright, who is in charge of the car, and who gives instruction and lectures.

The car is primarily for the instruction of engineers, firemen, conductors, brakesmen, baggagemen and all employees who have anything to do with trains. This particular car is, without doubt, one of the finest in the world. Its weight alone is about 58 tons, while the average passenger cars weigh only about 4,500 pounds. The equipment is equal to the equipment of an engine and 21 cars, so the men are shown the working of a whole train in a single coach. All the different injectors and lubricators are fully explained. The interior is arranged with all the air brakes for cars, engine, etc. There is a large boiler in one end, and in which the power is generated. On the left are all the air brakes, and on the right are the benches for the men, and also the air brakes in sections so that the men can see every portion, and how they are put together. The lower end of this car is devoted to seats for the men, where they sit while the lectures are going on. The final examinations are oral.

The sessions, or schools, as they really are, are usually held twice a day, in the morning and evening. The men, after the course of instruction has been given to them, are expected to pass an examination of 90 per cent.

In answer to an enquiry as to the quick stopping of a train through the use of these brakes, Mr. Wright stated that a test had been made and a train running 65 miles an hour had been stopped in 28 seconds, or in about 1,300 feet.

Every part of the working of the air brake system was fully explained by Mr. Wright, who was heartily thanked by those present, and who were fully repaid for visiting the car and seeing its operation.

Mr. G. H. Wray is an able assistant to Mr. Wright.

Mr. Wright, who gave instructions to a number of Central Ontario Railway employees, was, in recognition of his services, presented with a beautiful illuminated address, accompanying which was a handsome gold ring, suitably inscribed.

Vital Statistics

The vital statistics of the city for the month of April, as per register of the City Clerk, were as follows: Births 23, marriages 3 and deaths 22. Of the latter, 4 occurred outside of the city, the interment taking place here.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING COMMENT.

Bobbie Mercer, the star goaltender for Port Hope last winter, who recently went to Peterboro to work has left that town already. He says he'll be back there to play next winter, but they doubt it.

Sporting men of this city would like to see the Belleville Lacrosse Club and the Crescent Baseball Club amalgamate and thus form a nucleus for a local athletic association. The idea is a good one. There is excellent baseball talent in the city, and it would be easy enough to get home and home games with Peterboro or Kingston teams. Get together, boys.

They say that "Winnie," the hockey player, is an excellent shortstop. Perhaps that's the reason he's thinking of cutting his stop in Belleville short. Don't go, Win. It's only a little while till next winter, and we'll need you then.

What about those trophies for the road races which are to be pulled off soon. The trophies are all right, but who's going to ride for 'em? There are plenty of fast young men in town, but they don't appear to be riding bicycles. Brace up, boys, and get in training. One of those tear-jugs would look nice on mamma's sideboard.

The sails for the new cup defender, Reliance, are to be made by Ratsey, an English sail-maker, who has a branch establishment in New York. The great international event will soon have nothing international left about it.

Port Hope Times: The Cobourg Baseball club are after Kennedy and Marks who played hockey with Belleville last winter. Marks put Belleville out of business and if he comes to Cobourg he will make a pair of marks.

To use the language of the sailor, the night on the Bay was one of the "dirtiest" on record. The only live thing on it was the Str. Aletha. The gale was so fierce that she had to tie up for nearly two hours at Deseronto dock.

A "shirt waist" assembly is on the programme of distractions in a neighboring town. Ladies and gentlemen are expected to wear shirt waists.

Buildings about 6 o'clock. The ministers were in Council when he got there, and he did not see Mr. Stratton until after dinner that evening.

Mr. Ritchie—Q.—Did you have a discussion with him then about the Gamey question? A.—I asked him what it was all about.

Q.—You knew what it was about? A.—I heard of it.

Q.—You knew your name was involved in it? A.—Yes.

Q.—What discussion had you with Mr. Stratton? A.—I asked him what there was in it. He said Mr. Gamey had made the statement, and he said "It's going to be fully investigated and you will have to make your statement to the solicitors."

Q.—He said you would have to make your statement to the solicitor—what solicitor? A.—I do not think he said who it was at the time. I understood next morning it was Mr. Johnston.

Q.—You understood that night you were expected to make a statement, and did you go and make the statement next morning to Mr. Johnston? A.—No.

No Conversation With Minister.

Mr. Myers said he made his statement to the solicitor on the Friday after the Wednesday that Mr. Gamey made his statement. Up to that time he had had no conversation with Mr. Stratton about the matter as to what he knew about it. No one went with him to Mr. Johnston's office, and Mr. Stratton never asked him about his statement at all. Mr. Stratton had gone down town when he came back from lunch on the 10th October, and he did not think he was at the office except for a minute or two that afternoon. He was in for a minute about 2.30, through his room, but he did not see him go out.

Sullivan's Visit.

Mr. Myers said he did not see Frank Sullivan on the 10th Oct. He had not seen him to know him before the 10th September. The only time he saw him in Mr. Stratton's office was around the 1st of November; they were having some bells to connect the Minister with the departments put in. He had been in witness' room four or five times about electric bells or telephones, which were in charge of the Public Works Department. He pledged his oath that Sullivan could not have been in Mr. Stratton's office without witness knowing it.

Might Have Been There.

In reply to Mr. Ritchie's question—"Frank Sullivan says both he and Gamey were in Mr. Stratton's room on the 10th September?" Mr. Myers said he understood counsel to mean after he had charge of the office.

Mr. Riddell said it was the 9th Mr. Sullivan said he was there.

Witness—I was ready to allow he might have been there. If Mr. Gamey said they went in at the private door he was not prepared to contradict him. He knew that Gamey and Sullivan were there on the 9th or 10th September; on that day they might have been in and out a dozen times. He would not swear the Minister was never there when he was not, and it was possible for Gamey and Sullivan to be there when he was not in the office. He didn't connect Mr. Boland with the letter he took from the Minister and afterwards typewrote on the 10th Sept., and they were still together when he left for lunch.

Wasn't There Then.

On the 11th Sept. Mr. Stratton went down town around a quarter past 10. He went to lunch at a quarter to 12 and didn't get back until 20 minutes past one. While he was gone he could not say whether Mr. Stratton was in the office or not. He did not know where Mr. Stratton went on the morning of the 11th Sept., but he went out with Mr. Boland that morning. He did not see Mr. Stratton again that day until after lunch. He had no recollection of Mr. Boland being there again until the Friday after, but he could not say the day. He could not tell without seeing the letters what was done in the office on the 11th.

Gamey-Vance-Stratton.

When Mr. Gamey came on the 13th January, Mr. Stratton was not in, but came in afterwards through the private door. He remembered Vance and Gamey speaking together just after he came in. He knew Vance quite well. He had been often to see Mr. Stratton during the three years he was there. On this morning Vance stayed with Mr. Stratton for about 20 minutes, and Gamey had to wait that long to see Mr. Stratton. Mr. Gamey came in about a minute before Mr. Stratton came in. The Minister rang for me just after Mr. Vance came out, and Costello showed Mr. Gamey in as Vance came out. Then Dr. Chamberlain was rung for and the talk was about the lock-keeper at Little Current.

Testing His Memory.

Witness didn't remember whether Mr. Stratton was in the office during the week between Christmas and New Year's. Mr. Stratton was back after the election contest in Perth on the 6th Jan. He didn't know where he was on the 8th, but on the 7th he was in the office all day. He didn't remember anything particular in February, but thought Mr. Stratton was in the office every day the first week in March. He could not tell about the first week in April, but he had been there from the 13th. The second week in April the Minister was in the office. On the 2nd Oct. he left for Halifax, and he was away till a week from next Monday.

The Telephone Message.

Mr. Chamberlain's office was connected with Mr. Stratton's, and he did not send Costello to notify Dr. Chamberlain that the Minister wanted him on the 13th Jan.

Mr. Gamey, he said, telephoned him on the 28th January, but a discussion arose when Frank Sullivan's evidence was referred to, he having said he made an appointment for Gamey with the Minister by telephone for 2.15 that day. Mr. Myers still said it was Gamey telephoned, and it could not be Sullivan unless latter said he was Gamey, and then he said he knew both voices and was still pretty positive.

In connection with this point the Chancellor suggested that the witness could do no more than state his belief.

Mr. Ritchie said that his method of answering was important as showing the manner in which he was tendering his evidence, and the Chancellor replied that, so far as he could see, witness was giving his evidence fairly.

The afternoon session concluded with the statement by the witness that he did not know that any fixed appointment for Gamey was made on the day in question, because he had merely connected Gamey with the Minister over the latter's private 'phone and did not hear the conversation.

THE DEAD NUMBER 83.

An Official Account of the Disaster Which Overwhelmed Frank, N.W.T.—Some of the Awful Details.

Ottawa, May 1. — Mr. William Pearce, Inspector of Government Surveys, who went to Frank Wednesday to act for the Government and decide what relief measures could be arranged, wires as follows to the Deputy Minister of the Interior:—

"Frank, N.W.T., April 30.—Eighty-three killed, of whom about fifteen are women and fifteen children.

"It is thought there will be no trouble from damming of the river.

"Rock slide about four thousand feet long, extending from the highest point of Turtle Mountain; westerly end of slide 33 feet west of mouth of tunnel, extending across the valley and up the opposite bank for one and one-quarter miles from front of Turtle Mountain, and spread out fan-shaped, so that at extreme end of slide it was nearly two miles wide.

"No trace of river for one mile, but water now going through rock as fast as coming down.

"Place very orderly this morning. Men that were drunk and disorderly yesterday morning gone to Blairmore, fearing further slide.

"Not probable there will be further slide of any consequence.

"Twelve police and two officers here; plenty to maintain peace and order and for necessary purposes.

"No earthquake or volcano. All working in mine except two escaped."

The Catastrophe.

Frank, N.W.T., May 1.—This place was visited Wednesday morning by the worst disaster that has ever been witnessed in any community in western Canada. What was either a slip of land or rock of such gigantic magnitude as to be utterly inconceivable to the mind of any whose eye has not beheld it, or a slide induced by a seismic upheaval, killed seventy-five persons, destroyed the plant of the Canadian-American Coal and Coke Company, did a vast amount of damage to the mine, and completely devastated about ten square miles of the finest and most picturesque section of the Crow's Nest Pass.

When the Town Was Asleep.

The happening of the catastrophe came at fifteen minutes past 4 o'clock, when residents of the town were awakened by a deafening tumult and a shaking of buildings, which it seemed would rattle them into complete demolition. Of all the town inhabitants, numbering nearly 1,000, no one professes to have reached the outside of his domain in time to see any part of what took place, but when day dawned it was seen that the whole side of Turtle Mountain had fallen away, and that the country extending from the eastern edge of the town for two miles down the pass, and entirely across the pass, a distance of two miles or more from the mountain, lay buried beneath rock and debris of various kinds for a depth varying from 25 to 100 feet.

Demolished Everything.

In its sweep the great slide, if slide it was, or upheaval, if that be the more proper characterization, demolished and carried away the entire operating plant of the coal company.

The Canadian Pacific Railway is a heavy loser by the disaster. Two miles of line were buried from 50 to 100 feet deep, and a new line will have to be located and built.

The Government experts declare to the contrary, and ridicule the idea of an earthquake; but it is hard to convince the people of Frank that such was not the case. However, the problem is an intricate one.

Ex-Senator Carmichael Dead.

Ottawa, May 2.—A despatch from New Glasgow, N. S., states that ex-Senator Carmichael died there at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. He had been well and was out the day before as usual. He got up yesterday morning, apparently in his usual good health, but just before 9 o'clock complained of feeling weak, and suddenly expired. Mr. Carmichael, who was 93 years of age, resigned his seat in the Senate last week, and was succeeded by J. D. McGregor of New Glasgow.

Accorded Magnificent Reception.

Paris, May 2.—King Edward arrived here at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and was accorded a magnificent reception by republican France.

HE DESTROYED NOTEBOOKS

Mr. Stratton's Private Secretary and Original Documents.

NOTHING BUT PATRONAGE.

According to the Evidence of Dr. Chamberlain This Was All That Gamey Was Promised—Other Witnesses Reveal Talks They Claim to Have Had With Manitoulin's Member—Ontario Government's Jail Surgeon Dr. Arthur of Sudbury Was a Positive Witness.

Toronto, May 2.—Elgin Myers, Mr. Stratton's secretary, was again placed on the stand, when the Royal Commission to enquire into the Gamey bribery charges opened yesterday morning. Mr. Ritchie questioned him closely about the events of the 29th of January, when the interview was given to The Globe. Gamey was in and out of Mr. Stratton's office several times that day. The interview was handed to Hammond, the reporter, about half-past six. The latter, after getting it, went away, and Gamey immediately went into Mr. Stratton's room, and was with the Minister for a minute or two before he went down town. Mr. Hammond returned in a few minutes and went to the Minister's room and was with Mr. Stratton about five minutes.

The Patronage Question.

Mr. Ritchie then questioned Mr. Myers about Frank Sullivan's statement that he asked him to intimate to Mr. Bastedo, Superintendent of Fisheries, that Gamey was going to have the patronage in the Manitoulin District. This was in connection with the pound net license, applied by the Messrs. Noble, of Collingwood. The patronage was not in a general sense at all. Myers said he told Bastedo what Sullivan said, but did not take in the meaning of it. The substance of what he said was: "Mr. Gamey does not want the Nobles to have the license." He said that since the revelations were made he had had several conversations on the matter with Frank Sullivan, but Sullivan never told his side of the story.

Mr. Johnston.—Q.—He reserved that for The Telegram reporters? A.—Evidently.

Destroyed Manuscript Notes.

Continuing, he said he opened Mr. Stratton's confidential as well as official letters, and never read anything suspicious in them. With regard to The Globe interview, there was nothing private. The notes of it were in the handwriting of Mr. Stratton's clerk, Mr. Yokome, of Peterboro', so that Mr. Stratton, Mr. Yokome, Mr. Hammond, Mr. Gamey and himself all knew about it before publication. The manuscript notes he had destroyed, as were all note books, as, since the rule was that letters were on file, there was no further use for them, and they had not room to contain them.

Gamey Called Only Once.

Francis Costello, messenger in Mr. Stratton's office, followed Myers. He swore that, on September 9, Mr. Gamey came with Frank Sullivan to see Mr. Stratton, and did not come back again that month. This interview began about 10.15 and lasted about 25 minutes. He usually went to lunch, he said, between one and two. Costello explained that he fixed matters in his mind by the Conservative Convention of September 10. He swore that Frank Sullivan had never been to see Mr. Stratton prior to September 9. He said that there was nothing unusual in a Conservative member's visiting the Department. He could not give the name of any other Conservative member who visited Mr. Stratton in the month of September. He could not fix the date of Mr. Gamey's next visit more exactly than that it was some time between September 9 and January 1. On one occasion after the statement in the House Frank Sullivan said to him, "I will tell the truth." He stated that James Vance, the Liberal organizer, always had the entry to Mr. Stratton, and held precedence over all other visitors. Costello said that he sometimes went out of the building on errands for Mr. Stratton.

Next Visit a Month After.

To Mr. Johnston he said he never delivered any parcel or letter to Gamey or Sullivan in the smoking-room, and knew nothing about any letter containing money in connection with them. It was a month after the interview of September 9th that Gamey had the next interview with Mr. Stratton, and he never had interviews on two days in succession.

Gamey Asked Interview.

Dr. Chamberlain, Provincial Inspector of Jails and Penitentiaries, testified to having been called to Mr. Stratton's private office on the morning of January 13. Mr. Gamey was present, and witness was called as to the lock-up at Little Current, which the member for Manitoulin complained was in bad condition. Witness was ordered to make a report. The appointment of a License Board, and a place for Gamey's brother, were discussed. Mr. Stratton said they would have to consult their friends. Gamey said, "I am a supporter of the Government." Stratton spoke up sharply, and said it did not look like it after his going into North Perth. Gamey declared that he had to do it. Stratton urged him to make a public declaration, and Gamey requested the Minister to draw up an interview with The Globe for him. Mr. Stratton took some notes and promised to do so. The instructions given by Mr. Gamey agreed for the most part with the text of The Globe interview. He had remained with Mr. Stratton for a few minutes after Mr. Gamey left to speak to the Minister about coal for some of the public institutions.

The Patronage.

In cross-examination he said that the only reference to patronage was Mr. Stratton's statement that if Mr. Gamey supported the Government his recommendations would receive the same consideration as those of any other supporter of the Government. He did not understand the interview was for one paper only, but to be distributed broadcast.

Stratton Spoke Sharply to Gamey.

Dr. Chamberlain said that Mr. Stratton spoke very sharply to Gamey about his going into North Perth. He absolutely denied having taken part in any election for the Legislature during the fourteen years since his appointment. During the interview in which the notes for The Globe interview were taken, Gamey said, "I believe that the Ross Government are going to carry on their development scheme in New Ontario." Stratton suggested nothing for the interview in his hearing. Gamey said, too, that he would support the Government on votes of want of confidence. Because he thought his constituency would receive large benefits from the new development policy, Gamey said that in that respect it would be his duty to support the Government. Gamey had also asked for an appointment for his brother. The court adjourned for luncheon.

Well Founded Objection.

Arthur A. Bowen of Kemptville swore he saw Mr. Gamey on the nights of Sept. 5 and 6. He slept in the same room with him and Mr. Martin. Asked whether he heard any conversation between Mr. Martin and Mr. Gamey, he said he did not take part in the conversation, but heard Mr. Gamey say that "the Ross Government was giving the Manitoulin Island good legislation excepting in a few minor matter, and he would have to support the Government of Mr. Ross." He said he had seen The Globe interview.

Mr. Johnston—Q.—Did you notice any particular difference in that from what Mr. Gamey had said to you?

Mr. Blake—I object to this; he has told us all he knows.

The Chancellor—We think the objection is well founded.

Good Grit All His Life.

Cross-examined by Mr. Macpherson, he said he had been "a good Grit all my life and supported the Government all the way through." He could not recollect what Mr. Martin said to draw the political reference he had given from Mr. Gamey.

At a Conservative Caucus.

Dr. R. H. Arthur of Sudbury, partner of Dr. Strouthers, said he knew Mr. Gamey well. Witness was an active Reformer during elections. Mr. Gamey was a Conservative. They were intimate; and agreed to disagree on political subjects. They had business associations that threw them much together. Gamey came into his office on July 3 of last year, after he had returned from a Conservative caucus in Toronto. Witness asked him about the political situation, and Gamey replied: "Well, Arthur, I think Ross is going to rule for the next four years." Gamey then told him many of the Conservatives were much discouraged, and took a gloomy view of the prospects of their party. Gamey said that he would not have been a candidate if he had not thought Whitney was going to win; that he did not want to sit four years in Opposition like A. F. Campbell; that he would give Whitney the first vote, but after that he would support the Ross Government, and that there were others who would do the same.

Protest and Disqualification.

Gamey was angry that they were going to protest his election, and said that he knew there was not an election held that could not be upset if the details were got out. Witness said, "Probably they would want to disqualify him," and he said, "Oh, they can't do that."

Got Liberal Votes.

Another reason Gamey advanced for supporting the Ross Government was that scores of Liberals voted for him. He told Gamey if he intended to support the Government the more honorable course would be to resign and run over again as an independent. Otherwise the people would say that he had been bought. Gamey replied that this would cost money. He replied that it would be cheaper to run over again than to fight the protest against his election.

Gamey he said had characterized Whitney's speech at Sudbury on the mining policy as childish, and he also said that Whitney didn't seem to understand the wants of New Ontario. He spoke about his railway passes, and said that Col. Clarke had explained that it was not customary to grant passes to new members before the House met, and in his case it was a new constituency altogether that the railroads had no cognizance of.

In January of this year after the bye-election Gamey was in his office and Dr. Strouthers was present. Dr. Strouthers had told him what Gamey had said to him in Toronto. He expressed surprise at reading that Gamey was speaking for the Conservative in North Perth. Gamey said it had been arranged that he was to speak in Listowel, but that Whitney had upset the whole thing, because Whitney was jealous of anyone who attracted any attention. Gamey said he spoke about New Ontario, and that interested the people. Whitney's speech was the same old scold, he said.

Accentuating His Flop.

On January 13 or 14 Gamey told him in Toronto that Mr. Stratton had sent for him, and was annoyed that he spoke in North Perth. Witness told him he had done wrong, that he was really accentuating his "flop." Witness said it was bad policy for him and the Government too, for people would say that he had been bought if he made so quick a change. He indignantly denied that he had ever received or had been promised anything.

Gamey also told him there was trouble in the island, and he wanted to get back home, and showed a paper which he was going to get the Conservative farmers to sign in support of his position, and then he would with their votes and the Liberal vote defy the professional politicians in town.

Minister of Mines.

Gamey on several occasions with him on the policy for New Ontario also spoke of the prospects of the Conservatives winning out, and about dividing the Crown Lands Department, and that he would be Minister of Mines, although witness would not swear positively that he said that, and Mr. Miscampbell that of Crown Lands in that event.

Witness said he got $150 a year as jail surgeon at Sudbury from the Ontario Government, and that the Dominion Government paid him to look after the Indians.

Cross-examined by Mr. Macpherson, he said he had no official connection with the Liberal party organization now, although in the past he had been president of the Nipissing Federal Reform Association. He took part in all elections going, and did in the last general Ontario elections on the Liberal side.

Is It a Sore Throat?

Q.—And either have cherished or now cherish ambitions to be the candidate in the Liberal interests? A.—I think I have none now.

Mr. Blake—Is it a sore throat? A.—No, nor a sore spot. I was talked of one time for the Commons.

Mr. Macpherson—But the varnish has worn off, has it? A.—Yes.

Witness said he would swear positively to the dates he had given of the various conversations he had with Gamey, but that between the 7th and 12th of January, Gamey had told him that he had learned while in Toronto that a protest was to be filed against him. He would not swear positively that Gamey told him the protest was filed against him on the 12th July, but he was sure he told him it had been filed. Witness repeated, as the Chancellor said, the sixth time, the interview with Gamey on the 3rd July, and said there was no one present at the conversation.

Witness could not say he would be surprised to know that Gamey was not at the Conservative Convention in June. He said he did not say he had, but was swearing to what Gamey told him. He said he would be surprised to learn that Gamey had not been in Toronto for two weeks before that, but even so he would still adhere to his story that Gamey had told him what he had related.

Witness told Gamey, but he had no authority for it, that if he resigned the Government would not likely oppose his re-election.

Witness Recants That Far.

Witness said that Gamey told him he was present at Whitney's meeting at Sudbury, and that he afterwards told him Mr. Whitney's speech on the mining policy was childish.

Q.—I am instructed that not only does Mr. Gamey say that he did not tell you that, but I am further instructed that he was not present at Mr. Whitney's meeting? A.—I told you I was not present.

A.—But you swore he told you he was present? A.—I swore he told me in the way that we had the conversation about that, and that he said anything more childish than that speech at Sudbury was not to be found, but possibly he did not absolutely tell me he was there; I inferred that he was there.

Q.—Are you going back on the statement that he was at the Whitney meeting at Sudbury? A.—Yes.

Q.—You will recant that far? A.—Yes, sir; if he says he was not there, I was not there, and did not see him.

Not Mixing Things, He Said.

Witness said the last time Gamey spoke to him of the passes was to tell him that he had got them. That was on either the 13th or 14th of January in Toronto. He had conversations with him on both days. Counsel said he was instructed that Mr. Gamey left on the night of the 13th and was not back here until the end of January, but witness said his memory was that Gamey was here on both 13th and 14th. Asked if he was not mixing up some things Dr. Strouthers said, he said he was not, and that he still thought Gamey was here on the 14th Jan.

Witness said he had spoken with Mr. Stratton on the 14th Jan, 1903, and on the 30th or 31st Oct., but he had not discussed Gamey with him. Asked what he thought of the relationship between Mr. Stratton and Mr. Gamey that would entitle the Minister to scold Gamey for going into North Perth he supposed his conduct appeared inconsistent to Mr. Stratton.

"Cap." Sullivan's Opinion.

He knew Capt. John Sullivan very well and Frank Sullivan very little. He had had a conversation with Capt. Sullivan this forenoon, but not with reference to his evidence. Before that he had seen Capt. Sullivan in Sudbury on the 9th of April, when both he and his son were in The Witness office. Frank Sullivan was not subpoenaed in his office, but he knew of his having been subpoenaed during the day. Capt. Sullivan had told him on that occasion, with reference to the present case, that there was nothing in it. Witness, however, did not want to go into the case and did not lead him on.

Gamey Had Some Patronage.

Capt. Sullivan was in his office for half an hour, he did not hold a watch on him, but knew it was not three hours. Capt. Sullivan in August last told him Gamey was going to support the Government. He was aware that Gamey was exercising a certain amount of patronage, for he told him so himself, but Capt. Sullivan did not say he had been offered any inducement.

The court adjourned till 10 o'clock Monday.

FOREST FIRE'S VICTIM.

Charred Remains of a Farmer's Daughter Found at Aylmer.

Ottawa, May 2.—Miss Addie Perry, daughter of a Hull Township farmer, was burned to death in the forest fire north of Aylmer Thursday. Her charred remains were found yesterday morning. She was 28 years of age.

40 Families Homeless.

Buckingham, Que.—Bush fires have swept the country on the east side of the Lievre, some 40 families are homeless and destitute as a result. The village of Notre Dame de la Salette narrowly escaped destruction.

ALASKAN BOUNDARY CLAIMS.

Cases of British and U.S. Governments Formally Exchanged.

Washington, May 2.—The case of the United States, which is to be laid before the Alaskan Boundary Commission, has been completed, and was yesterday delivered at the British Embassy here. At the same time the British case was turned over in London to the American Embassy. The United States case makes a volume of no less than 650 pages.

The next step will be the preparation of the counter cases, and these must be delivered, one in Washington and one in London, July 3 next. All this is preparatory to the meeting of the Joint Commission, which will take place in London, Sept. 3.

The Montreal Strike.

Montreal, May 2.—The teamsters of the city have gone out in sympathy with the striking longshoremen, and the teamsters employed by the freight forwarding companies refused to work on the wharves yesterday, resulting in the goods being left on the quays up to a late hour last evening. There was no trouble on the wharves, the strikers closely following the advice given by their chief by maintaining a sullen silence.

Afraid to Repeat the Dose.

A local clergyman was engaged in conversation with a number of friends the other day, says the Duluth "News Tribune," when each started telling stories of weddings he had performed. One of the party had this to offer:

Some time ago a great big fellow, roughly dressed, and a wee mite of a young woman came to him. They had no witnesses, and, in fact, did not care to have any. Nevertheless a bridesmaid and groomsman were selected from the household, and the ceremony began. They had promised to love and obey and all the rest of the service, when the preacher announced: "Kiss the bride."

The groom, on bended knee, hesitated a little, tried to say something and couldn't.

"Kiss the bride," said the pastor.

"Why, parson, I did, afore I come here at all," replied the groom, whose face had taken the color of a June rose.

MR. NELSON, OF BUFFALO.

Virtuous Grit contemporaries are making strenuous efforts to discredit the Nelson confession by the claim that he is a bad man by self-admission. Well, members of the Grit machine do not exactly go to the churches when they are looking for creatures to carry out their designs. That crooked work under the Liberal banner of "purity" has taken place in riding after riding, the records of the courts abundantly demonstrate. Mr. McNish, the Liberal member elect for West Elgin, in his signed confession, as to the personation, ballot-box stuffing, and ballot switching, which took place in his constituency described the men brought by the Reform organisers as "strangers," and Buffalo has more than once been spoken of as a favorite recruiting ground for securing such blackguards. Nelson gives names and details to an extent which would be utterly impossible did he not know the constituencies in which he says he and his eight associates were paid to debauch the electors.

TIMELY TOPICS.

A church in a town in Connecticut advertises for a preacher. They want "a live, energetic pastor, capable of raising large sums of money, smoothing out difficulties, etc." What they want is a promoter, not a pastor.

Perennial Miss Braddon is still grinding out new novels. One may well wonder, will she ever "run down?" Of her work, W. L. Alden writes from London: "When Miss Braddon has left us we shall probably find from the newspapers that she was a novelist of unusual merit and that her books do not deserve the comparative neglect into which they have fallen. Perhaps it would be as well to say this during the novelist's lifetime." How many novels has Miss Braddon written? It is doubtful if she herself knows, but her invention never seems to flag, and she writes at least as well today as she did thirty years ago.

Very terse and truthful was the statement of the darkey preacher in North Carolina, who prefaced the passing of the collection plate with the statement: "Salvation's free, brethren, salvation's free! It don't cost nothin'! But we have to pay the freight on it. We will now pass aroun' the hat an' collect the freight charges."

• • •

Hon. Mr. Ross, in his budget speech, claimed a surplus, but the accounts show that the total expenditure was $52,982 more than the revenue. Where does the surplus come in, and why cannot Hon. Mr. Ross be honest and call a spade a spade?

Talking about the new assessment, now, the idea of having it printed for public distribution seems to meet with general commendation. Several ratepayers have spoken to us upon the subject, and all say it should be done, as it would not cost much and the outlay would be money well spent. The plan, as before pointed out, has worked excellently well in other places.

Henry George, jr., has a new lecture entitled, "No taxes; pensions for everybody." Couldn't he be persuaded to come to Belleville and deliver that lecture? It would be very timely just now.

William R. Hearst, proprietor of many newspapers in the United States, and a Congressman, is after the Coal Trust with a very big club. Not many will grieve if he catches and crushes it, and incidentally the innumerable small fry who pillage the public under its wings. In a recent copy of one of his papers, the Chicago Examiner, Mr. Hearst says, in part:

"The persons who compose the Coal Trust are not business men at all, but law-breaking monopolists, who are peculiarly the enemies of the business men of this country. The Coal Trust is a perfect specimen of the criminal trust. I intend to smash the Coal Trust. And it is in process of being smashed before the Interstate Commerce Commission in responses to my petition of October 29th. And when the Coal Trust goes down in ruin no other pillaging combination in this Republic will feel safe. That is the end towards which I am working, and every man in the United States, whether millionaire or day laborer, who is a patriotic citizen, preferring prosperity to hard times and democratic institutions to government by predatory wealth organized into lawless trusts, should be with me."

ODE TO SPRING

By Kudyard Ripling. (Rights Reserved.)

What man forgets that anguish
That marred his mind's repose
When first he found himself arrayed
In slop work fitting clothes.

Where e'er his steps did wander
Alarm was in his eye,
He felt that he was noticed
By every passer by.

He endeavored to look pleasant
But he couldn't hide a frown,
When a news boy shouted out
Just see that hand me down.

He tried to sneak from notice
In back streets of the town.
But in his ears kept ringing
Just see that hand me down.

He chanced to turn a corner,
When he met a loud tirade
Some boys did call and fairly bawl
Get on to "that ready-made."

He started from the spot,
And for home he made a raid.
He could not travel fast enough
To shed "that ready-made."

But time has brought its changes
And to our mind's repose
For the Globe Clothing House
Has perfect fitting clothes.

They cut from those proportions
That gauges fat and thin,
And clothes from the Globe Clothing House
Fits like the sausage skin.

About their perfect measure
Remember it's the plan
That enables the Globe Clothing House
To fit a hump-backed man.

Such coats are made with caution,
The shoulders built out square,
So that a close observer
Can't tell a hump is there.

We'll whisper to the bow-legged man
Who for fits he prays and begs
To trust to their Rep. Dulmage,
To fit his crooked pegs.

And those whom old Dame Nature
Has furnished with knocked knees
Must buy at the Globe Clothing House,
Their pants are sure to please.

And those with sloping shoulders,
That toil has made so round,
Will find they can be suited
If they'll only call around.

Their goods are simply perfect,
They offer to the trade
In material, styles and finish,
They surpass the tailor-made.

By making suits in quantity,
A thousand, more or less,
Must cheapen the production,
The public must confess.

Their suits for style and finish
A tailor can't excel,
But his charges will be double
For the same material.

They search in foreign markets
For goods the very best,
And trust to thorough finish,
And prices for the rest.

For protection of the public
The prices they arrange,
And woe betide a salesman
Who dares to make a change.

They will not suffer salesmen
To change the price of goods
And cheat an honest toiler
Away back from the woods.

They buy their stock in quantity
Which gives a lower rate,
And in dealing with the public
They give the same rebate.

The prices that they mention
Are based on cost of stock
And the margin that they figure
Makes prices bottom rock.

They draw a happy medium,
And make the prices fair,
And guarantee in all their clothes
You will find the value there.

Nothing can mark the gentleman
Or his place in life disclose
So much as the style and finish
And the cloth that's in his clothes.

On those with shallow natures
Loud patterns you will find
Connected with the loud laugh
That speaks the vacant mind.

While those with courtly manners,
And dignified in mien
Will be found in quiet colors
Wherever they are seen.

A gent with neat and flashy dress,
And with a diamond star
Denotes he finds his calling
Behind the public bar

The gent with sombre aspect,
Whose coat far down does reach,
You'll notice Sabbath morning
He goes forth to preach.

They know the clothing business
And the wants of every man.
And they keep the minstrel, Duimage,
To please you bet he can.

Laid Up With Kidney Disease

BACKACHE, LUMBAGO, AND CONSTIPATION—YEARS OF SERIOUS ILLNESS—A PERMANENT AND THOROUGH CURE BY

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Such cases as the following cannot but prove interesting to all who suffer as the writer did from kidney disease, and its many distressing symptoms. This is merely an example of the great good Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are accomplishing almost daily in nearly every community in the land.

Mr. J. G. Kirkby, head miller in the large flour mills of Munro and Roantree, Thorold, Ont., states: "I can scarcely say too much in praise of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Some years ago I was laid up by a severe attack of kidney disease, which was later complicated with other bad symptoms, such as headache, lumbago, backache, constipation, indigestion, and insomnia. I became reduced in flesh and was very much discouraged. Professional medical treatment was of no avail; other remedies were resorted to, to no purpose. My appetite diminished, and I was losing hope of recovery.

"Fortunately my attention was called to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I derived much benefit from the first box. By the time I had used four boxes I was again enjoying my former good health and vigor, as the bad symptoms all passed away, and I was then able to resume work. That was in 1899. I have waited now for about four years to see if the cure would be permanent, and now am convinced that it is, and feel justified in giving this testimonial for the benefit of others."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills positively and promptly cure kidney disease, liver complaint, biliousness, backache, lumbago and constipation. One pill a dose; 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto. 8

Life has no blessing like a prudent friend.

Doing good is the only certainly happy action of a man's life.

Young courage and old caution make a strong pair.

Redistribution Bill

SPEECH ON THAT MEASURE BY MR. W. B. NORTHRUP, M.P., IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

And I would refer to another part of the report of the Minister of Justice. At the beginning of his report he refers to the contention on the part of the Parliament of New Brunswick that Canada under the 51st section is Canada as originally constituted by the British North America Act, and he shows, on the other side, the contention which the Government supports, that Canada means Canada as it exists to-day. We know that Canada means under the British North America Act—the original four provinces. And we know what Canada means as it exists today, stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific. And the difference between the province of New Brunswick on the one side and the Dominion of Canada on the other is which of these interpretations is correct. The fourth subsection of section 51 is the clause which is under discussion, and concerning which the question arises whether it means Canada as it was constituted under the British North America Act, or Canada as it exists to-day. I find, in this statement of the Minister of Justice the clause which bears on this point and gives the information on it. He said:

"The terms of union and the Manitoba Act are to be looked upon and construed as in effect Imperial Acts amending the British North America Act, 1867. It will be observed that, in each of them it is provided that the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867, except those answering a certain description which section 51 does not answer, shall be applicable to the new province——

And the words following are underlined:

—in the same way and to the same extent, as they apply to the other provinces of the Dominion, and as if the new province had been one of the provinces originally united by the said Act."

And it goes on:

"Section 51 is also in each case specially declared to be applicable subject to the exceptions which for the present purpose are immaterial."

"The words underlined——"

Those to which I have just referred.

"—seem to dispose of the suggested view as to the construction of the Act as untenable. Suppose one of the colonies had been one of the provinces originally united, how must section 51 have then been read and construed. In the opening paragraph 'four provinces' would have been 'five provinces'; the word 'province' throughout the section would be applied to the supposed additional province, as well as the others and can it be doubted that the word 'can' in paragraph 4 would have included all five provinces."

So the hon. gentleman's argument is that as these provinces came in from time to time they became part of the Dominion on the same terms as did the original provinces, and therefore the British North America Act should be read, as each came in, as though it had been part of the Dominion when the British North America Act was passed. Then, let us see, this being admitted, how clause 5 of the British North America Act will read. Making the amendments necessary for the hon. gentleman's argument it would read as follows:

"Canada shall be divided into seven provinces, named Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Manitoba and British Columbia."

I think the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) will admit that that is a fair reading of clause 5 of the British North America Act as amended by his argument, that as each new province came into the Dominion it acquired all the powers of the original provinces, and that the clauses of the Act were to be read as if it had been admitted as part of the Dominion originally. But this would make Canada consist only of the seven provinces enumerated. If I had not had the pleasure of meeting the hon. gentleman in the North West Territories last fall, I would have thought that he was under the impression that a person stepped from Manitoba directly in to British Columbia. Under his argument, the North West Territories form no part of the Dominion of Canada, for Canada consists only of the seven provinces. Under that argument, when we seek to find what each province should be arrayed against in order to calculate its representations, we find that it would be Ontario, or whatever other province may be considered, against seven provinces, not against the Dominion of Canada.

SCHOONER BALLOU ASHORE

STRUCK BY A SQUALL AT KINGSTON AND BLOWN ON TO BARRIEFIELD SHORE.

Kingston Whig: The schooner Ballou (Capt. Alfred Thomas) suffered by last evening's squall. She was unloaded at the M.T. company in the afternoon, and then dropped anchor out some distance. Between six and seven o'clock the squall struck her, and she was blown clear over to the Barrifield shore opposite the cottages. The Donnelly Wrecking company was engaged to float the schooner.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

MR. JOHN HASLIP, OF TWEED, HAD A NARROW ESCAPE FROM LOSING HIS LIFE AT IVANHOE.

Tweed News: Mr. John Haslip, who has been employed on the C. P. R. as section man for a few weeks past, met with a serious accident on Thursday evening last while returning to his home at Tweed. He was riding on the local passenger train which arrives shortly after nine p.m., and as the train pulled into Ivanhoe yard he attempted to get off. Evidently the train was going faster than he thought for in some way he was thrown under the train. The wheels passed over his right hand, mangling it in a terrible manner, and the arm above the elbow was broken in three or four places, also the collar bone on the opposite side. The train stopped for only a moment at Ivanhoe and the accident was not noticed until after it pulled out. The young man, who is about 25 years of age and has a wife and young child, was brought to Tweed by a freight about an hour later. He was taken to Dr. Tuttle's office where the arm was dressed, after which he was taken to the home of his father-in-law, Mr. Wesley Rodgers. Friday morning it was feared that he would not recover from the shock of the accident, but on Saturday morning he was taken to the hospital at Toronto. Word has since been received that he is getting along nicely and that there is a possibility of saving the arm. The C. P. R. Company are seeing that he gets the best care and attention. The unfortunate young man was formerly a hostler at Huyck's hotel.

MALIGNANT LUMPS AND TUMORS

Are Readily Cured by Our New Constitutional Treatment Without The Necessity of Operation.

Many people are afflicted with lumps or tumors in various parts of the body. Tumors, it must not be forgotten, are serious, and should not be neglected for several reasons. In the first place, their growth may involve or impair some vital part of the body, in the second place they constitute a drain on the system, and in the third place they frequently develop into cancers. Few people care to have these growths removed by the surgeon, as they dread the pain of the operation. With our pleasant home treatment, it is different. You simply take the remedy internally. It goes through the system, searching out and neutralizing and destroying those poisons from which tumors and cancers develop. After a time you will notice the tumor lessening in size, and gradually disappearing until it is completely cured. Send two stamps and we will mail you our treatise and testimonials. B. I. DAISY GORDON'S FOLLY

—OR—

THE WORLD LOST FOR LOVE'S SAKE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY,

Author of "The Crime of Hallow-E'en," "The Flirtations of a Beauty," "Willful Gaynell," "Little Leafy," "Only a Mechanic's Daughter," etc.

"But Daisy," said the young man, drawing nearer.

"Little Daisy! why, she's only a child," broke in the farmer, with a cheery laugh, that rang out heartily over the waving cornfields.

"But it is Daisy whom I love," said Alexander Hamilton, in a low voice. "I love her with all my heart and soul. I have watched her and loved her from her cradle up. Life would not be worth living to me if I had not the hope of winning her. Oh, Mr. Gordon, if you could but realize how dearly I love Daisy."

Farmer Gordon had grown strangely white, he laid one hand heavily on the young man's arm.

"Have you said anything about this to little Daisy?" he asked, huskily.

"No, sir," returned Aleck, promptly. "I should not think of doing so without consulting you first."

"Quite right, lad, quite right," responded the farmer, in the same husky voice.

Then he stopped short, and a dead silence fell between them that seemed the length of eternity to the handsome, impatient young lover.

"What do you say, sir?" he asked, unable to bear the suspense any longer. "Can I speak to Daisy?"

"Listen to what I've got to say, lad," replied Farmer Gordon, earnestly. "I am older than you—I know the ways of the world—of women-folk. I have that to say which mebbe you won't like to hear, but you must defer to my judgment. Wait until you come back; you can speak to Daisy then—not before. She will be past seventeen then, and even that's too young for a lass to think of a lover."

"But, sir, think of the many things which might happen that might part us!" cried Aleck, in dismay, "unless her promise was given to me before I went that she would be mine. To lose her would be death in life to me. Ah sir, what if she should meet some one else in that year to whom she might give her heart—the future would be a wreck for me, and I would curse the hour in which I left her here without trying to win her for my own."

"Nothin' of that kind could happen," declared the farmer, positively. "A year passes quickly."

"Ah, but something might happen," responded the disheartened young lover.

"Mark my words, Aleck, if the child should promise to marry you now, ten to one she would repent of it afore you were out o' sight; a lass o' sixteen never knows her own mind. No, no, the love of a lass o' sixteen is but a fickle fancy—quick to light into a flame, and as quick to die out.

"Leave the child unfettered, fancy-free; come back in a year from now, fortune or no fortune, and I will have a different answer for you. You must not tell Daisy one word of this, even when you bid her good-bye, nor shall I mention it, even to the girls."

Despite all Aleck's pleadings, Farmer Gordon was firm, and handsome Alexander Hamilton felt in honor and in duty bound to obey that stern decree.

There was a great flutter of excitement when he bade Hetty and Olive Gordon farewell.

In their dismay they did not notice how low he bowed his dark, handsome head over little Daisy's white hand, or how his mustached lips quivered and his hands trembled.

He turned suddenly, made his adieus quickly, and hurried away.

"One moment more, and I could not have left her so," he muttered. "If anything should come between us during the year I am forced to be away—heaven forgive me for saying so—I believe I should curse Farmer Gordon for keeping us asunder, by preventing me from telling her of my great love for her, and pleading with her—praying her to be mine."

Had a premonition of the future cast its dark, horrible shadow over him?

CHAPTER II.

Pretty Daisy in Peril.

Left to herself, Daisy walked slowly on, through the orchard, down to the rippling river that skirted the farm.

Her little boat, the Nixie, lay rocking on the waves, and mechanically Daisy sprung into it, picked up the white painted oars, and with two or three determined strokes from the slim, white arms, the skiff shot down the stream.

"Don't go far, Daisy," cried the farmer from the brow of the hill, as he saw the boat floating down the tide with its solitary occupant. "Thar'll be a storm."

The fickle wind carried the farmer's voice in quite an opposite direction, and pretty Daisy did not hear.

The golden sun climbed higher and higher in the blue sky and crossed the meridian ere Daisy recollected that it was time to turn back. Glancing about her, she gave a perceptible start.

"Good gracious!" she cried out, "why I'm almost abreast of Briar Hall. Who would have dreamed that I had come so far? Yes, that must be Briar Hall; I know it from the description."

She glances up curiously and wistfully at the grim pile of granite, with its gables and towers half hidden from the sunshine by the heavy growth of ivy-vines and scarlet creepers; at the magnificent grounds glowing with rich, red roses in full bloom that surround it; at the fountain and the statuary gleaming amid the leafy foliage beyond.

"A grand old place," murmurs Daisy. "Oh, how dearly I would love to go through the grounds and gather some of those roses! I love flowers so." She threw back her yellow curls with a mischievous laugh. "I will!" she cried: "there's no one at the Hall yet: the place has been shut up for years. Who is there to care!"

Suiting the action to the word, Daisy sprung from her boat, secured it to a slender sapling, ran nimbly up the steep, mossy bank, and through the high, arched gateway into the grounds.

The wilderness of bloom seemed like a veritable paradise to Daisy. She was loath to leave it, even though an hour had passed. She stood in the arched gateway looking back at the grounds, her arms full of roses, trying to imagine what the scene would be like on the night of the grand lawn-fete.

The sight of that bright, laughing young girl with her arms full of crimson passion roses, standing just within the arched, vine-wreathed gate would have startled any one.

It startled the tall, dark-eyed young man hurrying past. He stopped suddenly in the path, his eyes met hers—those dark, laughing, magnetic eyes that few women ever yet had the power of resisting. He raised his hat; then, as though some subtle force drew him toward her, he left the path and came quickly over the long, green grass toward the gate.

A rabbit darted across the thicket, a bird flew away from its nest in an over-arching beech-tree with a startled cry. The breeze seemed to die out over the water with a low wail, but neither the bird nor the breeze could warn Daisy to beware of the handsome stranger.

She might have had a happy enough life of it if her path had never been crossed by this young man.

The instant his eyes had rested upon her standing within those arched gates, he had started violently back.

"The heiress!" he muttered under his dark, curling mustache. "Yes, of course that must be Miss Ruthven, the heiress to three millions," and he drew his breath hard as his quick eyes took in the first rapid glance every lineament of that pretty, dimpled, girlish face.

All in an instant his conversation with the landlord of the tavern at the village below occurred to him. One week before he had come in on the midnight train, and the name he had signed on the hotel register was, Harold St. John.

His handsome guest seemed nervous and ill at ease, the landlord might have noticed, but he did not; but he did notice the he inquired particularly about the arrival and departure of all trains that stopped at the crossroads, which were two miles below, and if many strangers stopped off there generally.

As he paid liberally, the landlord was loath to lose so generous a guest.

"I'm afraid it will be a little dull just now," the landlord had replied apologetically; "but within the next fortnight the village will be busy enough. Colonel Ruthven and his wife have just returned to Briar Hall after a five years' absence, and a jolly party of young folks is invited there to meet the colonel's niece, Lillian Ruthven, who is expected on every train. A most fortunate girl, she is, sir; heiress to three millions of money, and she's young and pretty, too, they say."

Harold St. John had caught his breath sharply; he had been most anxious to get away on the first outgoing train; now he changed his mind suddenly, and during the week that followed he fairly haunted the vicinity of Briar Hall.

Quite unexpectedly, in one of his ramblings, he had chanced upon the lovely maiden coming out of the arched gate, and he jumped to the conclusion at once that this was Lillian Ruthven the heiress.

He approached, lifting his straw hat from his dark curls with a low bow.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "I have been unfortunate enough to lose my way. Will you tell me which road I must take for Briarvale?"

"If you follow the river road, just the way you were going, you cannot miss it," she answered.

One glance of admiration, full of fire, full of passion, seemed to flash from the depths of his eyes to hers.

He saw the pretty, dimpled face grow crimson, and then he dared not trust himself to look again. But that one glance had sufficed to trouble the calm, still depths of Daisy's young heart.

The stranger was wise enough to know that another word would have been an impertinence. He bowed low and passed on, but he left the memory of his handsome face and dark eyes behind him.

The roses fell unheeded from Daisy's hand at the gate as she watched the tall form receding down the serpentine road.

"Such nice gentlemen as he will be at the lawn-fete," she murmured. "Oh, it was cruel of Colonel Ruthven's wife to invite Olive and Hetty and not ask me!"

She hurried down the green slope, and into her little boat again, a cry escaping her lips as she noticed how low the sun was dipping in the western horizon.

A Cheerful Prophecy.

THE animal that cannot be trained to keep its wits about it on the approach of a motor car must disappear. Its stupidity, filth, sloth, fear of everything and useless size prove to the most conservative that it must go. The horse that will not stand a motor car may be the delight of its owner, but it is a public nuisance and a public danger, and ought to be shot like a mad dog. Horsemen have no right to bring unmanageable brutes into the public highways, to the public danger, and it is time this elementary justice should be recognized. The motor is going to become the means of locomotion for all light transit, and by the ordinary roads as they exist to-day. It is the pedestrian and the horse that have got to give way. The horse in traffic, if he chooses to bolt, is uncontrollable. The motor, from the lightest bicycle to the heaviest car, is perfectly controllable, occupies half the space, and travels now through the congested streets at double and treble the speed of any horse-drawn vehicle. The only thing the two have in common is that at times they both refuse to go.

The unobservant talk of the accidents that would happen. The accidents will be a great deal fewer in number. A conclusive proof of this, to any one with any sense, is the fact that in the thousand miles tour no one, I believe, was hurt, though the roads were lined with spectators. In the race from Paris to Berlin, three days, and the tour around Italy, ten days, but two children were killed, the result entirely of their own carelessness or that of their parents. Suppose, for a moment, that in France a hundred and ten teams, or, rather, droves, of horses—there were a hundred and ten motors—ranging from fifty in a bunch down to two—this was the horse-power of the machines—had been let loose and driven at top speed for three days on the public roads. Will anyone tell me that thousands of people would not have been killed, that hundreds of drivers would not have lost their lives as well? But that would have been described as sport. . . . The only danger to be feared from the motor car is to its own driver, the only drawback is its own imperfection. Read the reports of automobile accidents: proportionately, these are far fewer than from any other form of locomotion, and in nine cases out of ten the accident occurs to the driver or the occupant of the car; in the tenth case it is owing to the stupidity or the carelessness of the person who gets in front. The average pedestrian has simply got to learn to keep out of the way, and that is the end of it.—Joseph Pennell in "Contemporary Review."

No Breach of Discipline.

THE colonel was entertaining some of his friends with stories of army life, and the talk turned to the inflexibility of orders. That reminded the colonel of Tim Murphy's case.

Murphy had enlisted in the cavalry service, although he had never been on a horse in his life. He was taken out for drill with other raw recruits under command of a sergeant, and, as luck would have it, secured one of the worst buckers in the whole troop.

"Now, my men," said the sergeant in addressing them, "no one is allowed to dismount without orders from a superior officer. Remember that."

Tim was no sooner in the saddle than he was hurled head over heels through the air, and came down so hard that the breath was almost knocked out of him.

"Murphy," shouted the sergeant, when he discovered the man spread out on the ground, "you dismounted!"

"I did."

"Did you have orders?"

"I did."

"From headquarters, I suppose?" with a sneer.

"No, from hindquarters."

"Take him to the guard-house!" ordered the sergeant.—Detroit "Free Press."

Winter Uplands.

The frost that stings like fire upon my cheek,
The loneliness of this forsaken ground,
The long white drift upon whose powdered peak
I sit in the great silence as one bound;
The rippled sheet of snow where the wind blew
Across the open fields for miles ahead;
The far-off city towered and roofed in blue
A tender line upon the western red;
The stars that singly, then in flocks appear,
Like jets of silver from a violet dome,
So wonderful, so many, and so near,
And then the golden moon to light me home;
The crunching snowshoes and the stinging air,
And silence, frost, and beauty everywhere.

—Lampman.

Epitaph.

Here lies Luke Longpenne, the distinguished historical novelist, who died at the age of eleven years in the full height of his fame, three weeks after the publication of his first book.—"Life."

On a Dog.

"They're thinking now of reversing the usual process, and first trying plays in New York before taking them out on the road." "What's the idea?" "Well, if a play succeeds in New York, the rest of the country will know it's rotten."—"Life."

A Matter of Contrast.

"Give an example of how heat expands and cold contracts." "In the summer the days are long; in the winter they are short."—"Judge."

Little Georgie was taken by his aunt to see the newcomer, aged one day. He was duly and profoundly impressed with the specimen, and asked where the little brother came from. "God sent it," answered the aunt, reverently. The answer made a deep impression on Little Georgie, for that afternoon he was seen out in the backyard gazing up into the deep blue sky and spreading his diminutive apron expectantly as he said: "Dear God, please throw me one down, too."—Troy "Press."

First Little Girl—The doctor brought us twins yesterday! Second Little Girl—That's where you made a mistake. You should have had a homeopath!—

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

If thy friend is honey, do not lick him up altogether.

HAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickerson, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

Over 250,000 copies of Charles Dickens' novels are sold annually.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed "Perfection."

The average watch represents but 12 hours of human labor.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Signed, JEAN VALCOURT,

A woman never knows where the match box is.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

Wedding rings in St. Kilda used to be made of worsted.

Use the safe, pleasant, and effectual worm killer, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator; nothing equals it. Procure a bottle and take it home.

When one gets hopping-mad his reason goes on a crutch.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

The best wheel of fortune is honest labor.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

Attend no auctions if thou hast no money.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes: "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

Coral is a talisman against thunder and evils by flood and field.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Many a man's self-conceit is due to his ignorance.

Do not despair of curing your sick headache when you can so easily obtain Carter's Little Liver Pills. They will affect a prompt and permanent cure. Their action is mild and natural.

WHY WE LEAD

Our word stands guard over every transaction in our house, insuring your satisfaction, not merely for the worth of your money, but to the full limit of values. Our word is behind every advertised statement, insuring you of its absolute truth. The throngs of people who visit our store speak for our methods better than we can. It you have nothing else to do—even if you do not care to buy—come and look. It is interesting to watch others, sometimes and you will see with your own eyes and hear with your own ears the whys and wherefores of our leadership.

Ready At All Times

Because it is summer on Saturday and winter on Monday, that need not puzzle you. We are always prepared for warm weather or cold, wet weather or dry. But spring is a coy young thing, only playing with you, happy if she can catch you unprepared on the hright to-morrow.

TIMELY TOPICS

As a pourer of oil on the troubled waters, His Worship the Mayor must be in a class by himself, if, as he stated last night, he is able to pacify most of the people who complain about increases in their assessment. Our Chief Magistrate must be something of a hypnotist.

Ald. Chown prophecies a reduction of two mills in the tax rate if the prospective increase is not cut down too much by the Court of Revision. That sounds very well, if it works out all right. Everybody will sincerely hope it will, but the figures as given do not point to a two-mill decrease. One mill is more like it.

• • •

In the meantime, the bold assertion that "somebody would kick, anyhow," is not a satisfactory argument. People want to know by what methods the results have been arrived at. Who were the valuators who gauged men's incomes and the value of their property, and what are their qualifications? Everybody has not the time to run to the Court of Revision. If the authorities can show that the measurements, valuations, etc., were made by competent men, fully qualified, matters will soon adjust themselves. If not, then let us know on whose shoulders to put the blame.

• • •

The Trenton Electric Company's request, re the street rails, gave some of the Aldermen the chance for delay they were looking for. The Electric company may offer to run the road, and they may run it successfully; there are few things impossible nowadays. The road, if extended to Trenton, would probably be a paying concern. But, as at present constituted, the road could not, many people think, be operated at a profit. But, if the road is operated again, the authorities should see that proper street rails are used. The present rails are a menace to vehicles, and make it next to impossible to keep the roadway in repair.

However, the promulgation of the new assessment may not be responsible for the sudden drop in the temperature.

The License Commissioners can't agree as to which place should lose its license, but it wouldn't take the general public long to make up its mind. But the interests of the general public will not be consulted. By the way, the licenses were supposed to have been granted on the 1st of May. Why the delay?

Newspapers generally agree with Mr. Mathison, superintendent of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, who contends that the local institution should be placed under the control of the Department of Education, instead of, at present, being grouped with the asylums and charitable institutions of the province. The inmates of the well-managed place on the Trent Road are handicapped enough by nature. The authorities might well do all in their power to remove the stigma which attaches to "institutionalism," especially as the cost would be no greater and the results, it is contended, more satisfactory. Mr. Mathison's point is well taken.

THE COAL WAR IN OTTAWA.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

The weather is warm and the average citizen is not thinking of his coal bin, but the local coal ring is doing a lot of thinking for him, if not for his benefit. A representative of the big American trust is in Ottawa enquiring into the local situation as developed by the rate war and there is expected to be something doing. One independent dealer is reported to have his supply of anthracite cut off, and the ring is busy organizing for the campaign against the pocket of the householder. One report says that the ring may shortly dissolve and a general scramble take place to secure business in the course of which the weaker will go to the wall and later on the ring will be reorganized on a more contracted but stronger basis. At midnight the advance of ten cents came into force, but there is some talk of the wholesalers on the other side refraining from exacting the increase until the war is settled here and prices seek their natural level. Strong efforts are being made to interfere with the transportation of coal to the independent dealers, but if these efforts are unsuccessful the ring may enter upon a heavy rate-cutting war with the object of freezing out both the independents and the weaker members of the ring as at present constituted. Should that succeed the survivors will have the Ottawa market all to themselves, and, like the brutally frank Mr. Baer, can exact from the consumers all that they will stand.

JUDGMENT IN AN IMPORTANT CASE

LOCAL MASTER DECIDES FOR THE DEFENDANT IN RABBITTS VS. McMAHON.

Col. S. S. Lazier, Local Master, has made his report on his judgment to the court in the actions brought by Francis Clarissa Rabbitts, formerly the widow of Dr. C. N. Ridley, against W. P. McMahon, barrister, of this city. The actions were brought by the plaintiff against the defendant in the months of November and December, 1897, to take an account of the dealings between them and to set aside certain mortgages given by the plaintiff to the defendant, and also to set aside certain conveyances made by the plaintiff to the defendant. The action came on for trial on the 29th March, 1898, before the Hon. Mr. Justice McMahon, and by consent of all parties—"these actions were referred to the Local Master at Belleville to take an account of the dealings between the plaintiff and defendant, of all disbursements, payments, advances or otherwise made by the defendant for or on account of the plaintiff at her request, and of any and all services rendered by the defendant for the plaintiff at her request, and to fix the remuneration therefor, giving credit thereon for any and all sums received by the defendant for or on account of the plaintiff," etc., etc. "And with like consent, it was further ordered that the said Local Master at Belleville should have all the powers of amendment of a Judge at Nisi Prius. The question of costs and further directions were reserved until after the said Master made his report, which he did on the 21st of April, 1903, in pursuance of the judgment, and his judgment is entirely with the defendant on all points raised in the issue, finding the plaintiff was indebted to the defendant on the 1st of November, A.D. 1897, in the sum of $5,134.66, with interest added to said sum to the finding of his report at $2,1338.75, making the sum due for principal and interest $7,273.41. The master finds the plaintiff was indebted to the defendant in the sum of $1,400.00 for services rendered by the defendant for the plaintiff at her request, at which date the two Conveyances were executed by the plaintiff to the defendant, referred to in the said judgment, the consideration money therefor, $1,400.00, being some $300.00 in excess of what the properties could have been reasonably sold for at the time.

The defendant's costs as against the plaintiff to the filing of report will amount to over $1,500.00. Messrs. Northrup & Roberts for plaintiff; E. G. Porter, Esq., M.P., for defendant.

The Board of Trade and G. T. R. Air Brakes

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—I note in your report in Friday's issue of the interesting exhibition at the G.T.R., that the Board of Trade, although invited, was conspicuous by its absence, and the other local paper contains virtually the same comment. As a member of the Council of this public body, I have on previous occasions had to deny, that any notice had been received of a matter, the omission to attend to which was laid to the charge of the Board, and I now wish to say that I did not receive any invitation of any kind, directly or indirectly, to attend on the G.T.R. on the occasion in question. I am informed by some other members of the Council that they too did not receive any invitation. I do not know who is responsible, but this is a fact, and as you published our absence, it will be esteemed a favor if you will kindly publish this, our excuse.

Yours, &c.,

W. N. PONTON.

Died in London, England

Prof. T. W. Willmott received the very painful news yesterday, from London, Eng., of the death of his father, Mr. Thos. Willmott, who had been ill but a short time. Mr. Willmott was a well-known and very popular man, over fifty years in business. He was managing director of the old firm of Messrs. Willmott & Sons, Limited, bookbinders and machine rulers, which employed over 500 hands. Prof. Willmott only received, just a month ago, the news of his mother's death, which makes the affliction doubly hard to bear.

Accused of Stealing a Purse

Jacob Wrightley, who is accused of stealing a purse containing money from John Storring, was to-day on trial before Judge Lazier. The parties reside in the township of Hungerford. Case not concluded when we went to press. Mr. Anderson for Crown and Mr. Northrup, K.C., for the accused.

MORTGAGE SALE OF WILLIAM STREET PROPERTY.

Under and by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage made by Jason S. Tice, and assigned to the Vendors, which will be produced at the time of sale, default having been made in payment, there will be offered for sale by PUBLIC AUCTION, on SATURDAY, the THIRTIETH DAY OF MAY, 1903, at two o'clock in the afternoon, at the ALBION HOTEL, in the City of BELLEVILLE, the following property, viz.:

All that certain parcel or tract of land and premises situate, lying and being in the said City of Belleville in the County of Hastings, containing one-eighth of an acre, be the same more or less, and being composed of the North half of Lot number Twenty-seven, on the west side of William street, in the said City of Belleville, and which said lot may be better known by reference to a plan of lots laid out upon the south half of lot number Five, in the First Concession of the Township of Thurlow, and now in the City of Belleville, registered in the Registry Office of the County of Hastings, on the twenty-eighth day of June, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and fifty, together with a right of way twenty-one feet five inches wide, extending from the west side of William street and along the Southern boundary of the said land above described and thence westerly to the depth of fifty-one feet four inches, forming a continuous way from William street westerly to the depth of fifty-one feet four inches, the said way to be used in common by the owners and occupants for the time being (their servants, agents and workmen) of the lands on either side thereof forever, a plan whereof is endorsed on the deed from A. B. Falkiner to one Moody, and the same was registered in the Registry Office for the County of Hastings, on the 10th day of August, 1875, as number 3143 Book (M) and was agreed thereby to be construed and accepted as incorporated in and as part of that conveyance.

On the said premises (conveniently situated near and north of Victoria avenue), is erected a comfortable roughcast house with outbuildings.

Ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid in cash at the time of sale, when easy terms for the balance can be arranged.

An Old Feud Buried

That ancient feud between the farmer and the bicyclist has been settled pretty much in the same way those two Kentucky families settled theirs. when the son of the leader on one side married a daughter of the opposing host on the other side. The farmer has taken to riding the bicycle himself. When wheels first came into vogue the farmer looked askance with a jealous eye at what he considered the eventful displacement of the horse. But he has learned that the bicycle has not displaced the horse—that it has merely enabled hundreds of thousands of quondam pedestrians to ride quickly instead of walking slowly. And to-day the farmer leaves his tired horses to rest after a long day's work, while he wheels to the post office for his mail in the quiet of the evening.

The Despot of Vienna.

The citizen of Vienna who does not wish to be out of pocket must keep early hours, for after ten o'clock he is taxed on entering his own house, or, for the matter of that, any house. The "sperrgeld," or door-opening tax, is peculiar to Vienna, as the London "Express" explains. The entire population of that city, numbering nearly two millions, are practically imprisoned in their houses from ten o'clock in the evening until six the next morning. They can go in or out only by paying at least four cents to the janitor or "house-master," as he is called.

Vienna is built on the "flat" or apartment-house plan. Millionaires and working people alike live in houses of this description. The houses are large, having five or six floors, with four flats on a floor, so that it is not unusual to find a hundred persons living under one roof. There is one common entrance from the street, and after ten o'clock at night this door is bolted and barred. From ten until twelve all who go in or out must pay four cents. After twelve the charge is doubled.

The tax must be paid every time one passes through the doorway, without exception. If a man has occasion to go in and out half a dozen times, he must pay every time. One who has dined with a friend must, if he stay late, pay four cents to get out of his friend's house, and four more to get into his own. A telegram in the night necessitates the payment of the tax before the boy can enter.

The house-master also collects and keeps duplicate copies of the forms on which every individual in the house must report to the police his age, birthplace and religion, his exact occupation, and other personal details which the Austrian authorities insist upon knowing. Nor does the power of this important personage end even here. From the little guard-room which he occupies at the foot of the stairs he sees every one who goes in or out. He ascertains with amazing accuracy the amount of each tenant's income, the events of his family life, and the character of his visitors. His far-reaching power enables him to terrorize every servant in the house into entering his intelligence department, and thus he spies on the innermost life of the subjects in his five-storey kingdom.

In some cases the house-master is more powerful than in others. An English resident was obliged to move from an apartment that he particularly liked because he could not venture to speak with any degree of sharpness to the man at the door, even when the man was remiss in his duties. The flat was owned by a railway belonging to the State. This made the house-master a State official, an insult to whom is a very serious offence in Vienna. A reprimand for delaying letters would be construed into an insult, and the Englishman deemed it wise to move to other quarters.

Thousands of people in Vienna live in such terror of the house-master that, it is said, they never make an apple-tart without giving him half.

Buried by a Cougar.

A hunter who was trailing after bear meat in British Columbia reports to the "Western Sportsman" an experience which he calls a "narrow graze." If the incident happened as the hunter tells it, it was indeed a narrow graze; but one cannot help suspecting that some of the invigorating ozone of the North-West has got into the story. Nevertheless, it is worth hearing.

"It was warm and dry, and along in the middle of the afternoon I began to pine for rest and a pipe. It was all quiet and no traces of game, and so when I'd had a comfortable smoke I stretched out for a nap.

"It must have been an hour later that I woke up and found myself covered with two feet of leaves snug as the babes in the wood. I was all tucked in that cosy that nobody else could have done it but a cougar, and most likely a female cougar at that. It occurred to me with some force that I'd been filed away for future reference, and that I hadn't waked up any too soon. It didn't soothe me to figure on that cougar stowing me away as a dog hides a bone.

"It seemed that the best thing for me to do was to countermine that cougar's mine, as it were. So I hunted up a log about my size and covered it with the leaves—a nice fat hump on the ground. Then I shinned a tree close by, assuring myself beyond any doubts or peradventures that nobody had meddled with the working of my repeater.

"The cougar came in such a short time as to show, how fortunate it was that I had waked up when I did, and with her, as I had calculated, were a choice lot of young ones. She had left a dinner located and had been off to get her family.

"Well, that cougar circled around the pile of leaves for a matter of minutes, crouching and picking a nice select place to spring from. When she got satisfied and made the leap she went through the air tremendous, throwing the leaves in a whirlwind and scratching and snarling. It was some of a shock when she found the log, but she didn't display any disappointment. She just took the scent and came to the foot of my tree and looked up, real venomous.

"It seemed to her an awkward job to handle, I having my gun ready so, and the cougar had an inspiration. She went to a tree about ten feet away and started to go up. She was after that meal and not to be discouraged by any trifles. It was her idea to climb up above me on the other tree and then bring me down with a flying leap.

"I didn't lose any more time with experiments or speculations, but let her have it the first time she came round the tree. The ball went through her jaw and breast, and the varmint went to the ground. The young ones were running around, and I knocked them over, too, with the gun.

"Since then I haven't gone to sleep in the woods so careless and casual like."

"Have the letters been duly examined by the hand-writing expert?" "Yes, your honor." "Very well, let the hand-writing expert now be examined by the insanity expert."—[illegible]

Corticelli SPOOL SILK

Admitted by dressmakers to be the best sewing silk made. As Corticelli costs you no more than poor silk, why don't you buy it? Ask for "Corticelli" and politely, but firmly, refuse all substitutes, which some clerk may say are just as good.

Corticelli B. A. ASIATIC DYES Wash Silks

IN PATENT HOLDERS.

The colors are fast—the silk the best. Put up in Patent Holders, which prevents waste by tangling or soiling—keeps each shade separate, and automatically measures a correct needleful.

Recommended as the only proper way to put up Filo and Floss Silks, and used by art societies everywhere. Over 400 different shades of silk to select from.

Corticelli .....Skirt..... Protector

Peculiar Wearing Qualities and Perfectly Straight Selvage.

Corticelli Skirt Protector is of firm and even texture. When soiled a sponge or brush makes it clean again, and no damage done. Corticelli Skirt Protector is a great favorite with fashionable and careful dressers.

Tragedies of the Arctic.

AN extraordinary coincidence has been developed by a recent Arctic tragedy brought about by the expedition of the Duke of the Abruzzi.

When this navigator went on his journey to the North Pole he took with him among others Lieutenant Querini, a Venetian gentleman of an old and noble family. His work over, the Duke returned, but the lieutenant was not with him, for he had lost his life through an accident in the Arctic regions.

Now, at the very time when this accident occurred a professor in the technical school in Trieste, while rummaging in the archives of that city, discovered a manuscript bearing the date 1601, and containing an account of a journey made by one Pietro Querini, in 1431, to the Arctic regions. Querini is not a common name, and a little investigation showed that Pietro Querini was a direct ancestor of the other Pietro Querini who lost his life in the Arctic seas a few months ago.

"Querini," says the old manuscript, "sailed from Candia for Flanders on board a vessel loaded with merchandise and precious stones. When he arrived in Flanders he sold his cargo and started for the Arctic regions. A storm forced him to abandon his ship and to take refuge with his crew in two barks. The wind then carried them to the coast of Norway, but on January 9, 1432, Querini was again shipwrecked near the Lofoden Islands in seventy degrees north latitude, and almost all his companions were drowned."

For some time it was supposed that he, too, had been drowned, but in January, 1433, he appeared in Venice with ten companions, the only survivors of his original crew of seventy-eight men. It seems that he succeeded in gaining the shore after the others had been drowned, and then slowly made his way home through Denmark and Germany.

"Although these two Pietro Querinis," says a French writer, "are separated from each other by five centuries, we find the same destiny at work in the case of each." And he continues, with a dash of playfulness: "Is it not possible that the adventurer of the fifteenth century, desiring to enjoy once more the exciting days of his youth, actually became incarnated as a hero of the twentieth century?"

New York's Fussy Society.

"ALLOWING for a certain difference in the degree of barbarism," says Sydney Brooks in "Harper's Magazine," "Rome in its decline could alone furnish a parallel to New York's Four Hundred. The American aristocracy has no equal in Europe for ability to turn the simplest sort of diversion into a function, and every function into a ceremony. It is not of them I write, though their passion for incongruous artificialities and the glare in which they live have infected all strata. An exasperated Englishman once described the social atmosphere of Manhattan Island as 'rather fussy,' but that was only in comparison with the English way of doing things. The charm of London hospitality is that there is never the slightest strain put upon either host or guest. The American hostess, like the French hostess, feels that she must be continually 'entertaining' her guest; she considers it a reflection on her hospitality if the guest is left a moment alone; she looks upon it as her duty to be continually providing fresh amusements, and is constantly troubled by doubts as to whether the visitor is really 'enjoying' himself. That is one of the reasons why Americans, after the pampering they get at home, are apt to feel themselves neglected in London, and left out in the cold."

A Prophecy Fulfilled.

ON no less authority than that of Mr. Justin McCarthy it is stated that, with the exception of the King of Sweden, a descendant of Bernadotte, whom Napoleon raised from the ranks and later made king, there is not a single important ruler in Europe who is not descended from Mary, Queen of Scots. In "Macbeth," which was evidently written with the idea of courting the favor of James I., the first Stuart ruler of England, Shakespeare puts into the mouth of the witches this prophecy to Banquo, from whom the Stuarts are by legend descended: "Your children shall be kings." Even the most obsequious of courtiers could not have anticipated how literally true this compliment to the Stuarts through King James was to prove. It is certainly a curious historical fact that the dynasty of the Stuarts, "in many ways the worst dynasty," as Mr. McCarthy says, "that ever ruled over England, "should have left so many descendants among the reigning houses of Europe.

Meantime there is for the student of medical anthropology the spectacle of a series of inbreeding intermarriages that demonstrates the dangers and effects of marital consanguinity. Perhaps the lesson of the necessity for exercising more care as regards the relationship and other qualities of marital partners may thus be taught by example, if it cannot be enforced by the legal measures that are now so commonly suggested. In a word, the history of the present reigning families of Europe is an open book in which he who runs may read the evils of marriage where new blood is not constantly introduced to modify the degenerative tendencies of the original stock. The lesson may be learned better from a "horrible example" than from the cold logic of statistics on the subject.

Faith and Works.

A piece of bright class-room repartee comes from a Western college. The professor had been annoyed by the tardy entrance of a student into the lecture-room, and pointedly stopped talking until the man took his seat.

After class the student went to the desk and apologized.

"My watch was fifteen minutes out of the way, sir. It's bothered me a good deal lately, but after this I shall put no more faith in it."

"It's not faith you want in it," replied the professor; "it's works."

Correct to the Last.

"Anyhow," chuckled the somewhat fastidious horse-thief as the regulators adjusted the noose about his neck, "it isn't a ready-made tie."

Men's Spring Suits

The Newest of all.

The more exactingand particular a man may be about exclusiveness in fabrics and patterns, even if he insists on all the advantages he expects from a tailor, then the more these new suits, which we are showing for the first time, will appeal to him.

He will find in them all the style and satistaction he would in garments that the best tailors could build to his measure, though they cost a little more than half thetailor's price and the same as he would pay elsewhere for ready-made clothes, that would not prove as satisfactory.

Throughout these splendid garments the tailoring will be found to be faultless; it is of the highest character known and if anything a little more exacting and thorough than is found on the tailor's best productions. And of more importance than all, they possess that well-bred air the tailors have a knack of giving to the clothes they turn out.

Needless to say, the styles as they are found here are correct, that is expected, or that a perfect fit is assured in every case—we are more particular about that than you could be.

Fine suits—the new single and double-breasted styles—of fine Blue and Black Cheviots and Serges, Black insheared Worsteds, Fancy Imported Cassimeres in the latest colorings and overplaid effects. Fancies that are exclusive with us and the tailors .... $6.50, $7.50, $10.00, $12.00, $13.50, $15.00.

Deseronto Doings

May 1st.

Miss Meta Newton, daughter of Mayor Newton, has obtained her B.A. degree in Queen's University, and on the examination for that degree stood first in her class, gaining the gold medal for history.

The Bay of Quinte Clerical Union will meet in St. Mark's Church on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

P. McCoy, of Deseronto, railway contractor, accompanied by his engineer, was in Tweed on Monday and went out over the route which has been marked out for the extension of the B. Q. R. from Tweed to Bannockburn. Mr. McCoy has completed his contract on this new line between Deseronto and Napanee.

Joseph Thorndyke, of Cookshire, Que., was in town this week. He is a witness in the arbitration proceedings between the Rathbun Company and the Standard Chemical Co., now being heard in Napanee.

Inspector Shaw, of the Customs Department, was in town this week inspecting the new public building.

DYING BY SLOW DEGREES.

Although not always aware of it yet thousands die by slow degrees of catarrh. It first attacks the nose or throat, then the lungs, and finally spreads all through the system. Catarrhozone is the only remedy that will immediately prevent the spread of this awful disease. Every breath from the Inhaler kills thousands of germs, clears the throat and nose, aids expectoration and relieves the pain across the eyes. Catarrhozone eradicates every vestige of catarrh from the system and is highly recommended also for bronchitis, asthma, deafness and lung trouble. Price, $1.00; trial size 25 cents, at all druggists. Runaway Boys

At 5.25 this morning the local police received a telephone message from Trenton to be on the lookout for two lads named Badgley, who yesterday ran away from their homes. The boys were supposed to have come to this city, but no trace of them could be found here.

THE EVILS OF CONSTIPATION.

This dangerous condition causes sick headache, abdominal pains, and in severe cases insanity and apoplexy. The most agreeable and satisfactory remedy is Ferrozone, which makes the bowels so well ordered that natural and unassisted action is established. It is mild and certain in action and never causes distress or inconvenience, and may be taken as long as required. Pains in the stomach and intestines, piles, biliousness and headache disappear at once when Ferrozone is used. Recommended and sold by druggists, price 50c. Sold by J. S. McKeown.

No Pills like Dr. Hamilton's.

Chimneys on Fire

Between the hours of 7.45 and 8.15 this morning the Fire Brigade were called out twice, but in each case their services were not required. Chimney blazes on Albert and Brassey streets were the cause of alarms being sent in.

IS YOUR BACK LAME?

Does it hurt to stoop or bend down? Have you a heavy, dull pain at the base of the spine? If so, the best remedy is Nerviline; it will invigorate the tired, sore muscles, make them supple and strong. Nerviline will drive out the pain and make you well in no time. Nothing so good as Nerviline for lumbago, stiff neck, rheumatism, neuralgia and sciatica. Buy a 25c bottle of Polson's Nerviline today and try it.

COUNCIL DECIDES NOT TO SELL RAILS

Trenton Electric Co. Asks That Action be Deferred for the Present

Tenders Opened for Purchase of Rails--Best Offer Would Realize $3,000

Civic Committees Met at Close of Special Meeting of the Council

A special meeting of the City Council was held last evening at 7 o'clock at which the Mayor and all the Aldermen, with the exception of Ald. Sinclair, were in attendance.

The Mayor stated that the meeting had been called for the purpose of opening and considering the tenders for the purchase of the rails of the street railway.

The tenders were opened, being as follows:

Langbort Co., of Kingston, $16.50 per gross ton of 2,240 lbs.

U. P. Scott, of Toronto, $15 per gross ton.

Peterboro Hardware Co., the sum of $2,000 en bloc.

Quinlan & Robertson, of Crookston, $16.25 per ton.

Sussman & Co., Kingston, $15.50 per ton.

Frankland Bros., Toronto, $15.60 per ton.

Golbert, of Hamilton, $8 per ton.

The Belleville Cement Company offered $10 per ton for the rails for use in their work. The company offered to give the rails back to the city if the Cement Company did not in the future operate the works for a period of one year.

S. Langbort, of Belleville, $15.10 per gross ton.

Wm. Lott, of Belleville, $15.25 per ton.

Want Action Deferred.

A communication was read from the Trenton Electric Company, asking the Council to defer the taking up of the rails, as they would like to confer with the Council in reference to a proposition they might submit re the matter.

After the receiving of the tenders a motion prevailed that they lay on the table.

On motion the Council went into Committee of the Whole, Ald. Pope in the chair.

Ald. Panter thought it would be poor policy to sell the rails in view of the communication from the Trenton Electric Company. If the rails are taken up the city would have nothing to offer the Company if they contemplated running the road.

Ald. McFee endorsed what Ald. Panter had said. It seemed to him it would be a stupid thing to take up the rails which are now down. It was a convenience to have a street railway and we should delay action in selling the rails until we know what the Trenton Electric Company's proposition is. It was a benefit to the city when the railway was running and it would be a misfortune to take the rails up. If, however, the rails were sold he would favor the offer of the Cement Company.

Ald. Galbraith said this was an inopportune time to sell the rails. There is a prospect of the street railway being operated and the line extended. The railway from Toronto and Cornwall would no doubt be a reality, and this might be an inducement to have an electric railway system in the city. He would oppose the selling of the rails by voice and vote.

Ald. Chown stated that we had no guarantee that the Trenton Electric Company would operate the road. If we can sell the rails to advantage we should sell them. From what information he could gather it needed a population of 20,000 to make a street railway pay. The present rails were not the proper class of rails for street railway work.

Ald. McFee moved that this matter be laid over for further consideration.

Ald. Marsh said that if we sold these rails and lost the chance of having a street railway it would be an unwise move. The Council, he thought, should defer action in selling the rails. He moved, seconded by Ald. Galbraith, that no action be taken in the matter of selling the rails at the present time.

Ald. McFee said he would withdraw his motion and support the preceding motion.

Ald. Panter said the city might have a much more valuable asset in those rails than we were aware of. If this line remains we have something to offer to any person or company which might desire to operate it.

Ald. Green stated that the Belleville Electric Railway had been a failure. The population and trade of this city is not such that a street railway can be successfully operated. If there are good reasons for thinking that the city will in the future get a railway or a better price for the rails then action might be deferred. If they were going to part with the rails he would be in favor of the offer made by the Cement Company.

Mayor Graham stated that the railway as it stands, and put to use, is worth at least $10,000. The rails were worth more down if there was a likelihood of the road being operated. The best offer made would not realize more than about $3000. He had been informed by parties connected with the Trenton Electric Company that the company would in the near future make an offer to the city in regard to operating the road and would possibly extend it. There was, in his opinion, a paying investment if an electric line was built between the city and Trenton. He considered it would be unwise at present to sell the rails.

The Surveyor stated that it would cost at least $200 to cover the rails from the station to the wharf. If the rails were taken up it would cost probably $1000 to place the street in good condition.

Ald. Chown moved in amendment that no action be taken in this matter until June 1st, and in the meantime the Trenton Electric Company be requested to send representatives to meet the Council in reference to this matter and make a proposition.

The amendment was lost Mayor Graham, Ald. Chown, Green and Cooper voting for it.

The motion made by Ald. Marsh, seconded by Ald. Galbraith, was amended to read as follows: "That no action be taken in the matter of selling the street railway rails at the present time, and that the Trenton Electric and Water Company be requested to present their proposition for the running of the road on or before the 1st of June."

This motion prevailed, and the Council adjourned.

COMMITTEES MEET

At the conclusion of the Council meeting the various civic committees went into session.

A communication was read from the Anglo-American Insurance Company, stating that they could not issue bonds such as were required by the lessee of the market.

Mr. W. E. Vandervoort, the lessee, was present and stated that he was prepared to give two sureties, namely, his wife and Mr. W. Haslip.

After some discussion the matter of sureties was left in the hands of Chairmen of the Executive and Market Committees.

PUBLIC WORKS.

Ald. Panter, Chairman, presided.

The accounts passed were as follows;

Pay Sheet No. 9......	$125.73
G. Roxborough	.80

A ditch leading from McDonald St. to the bay shore was ordered to be cleaned out at a cost not to exceed $12.

Ald. Panter said that the committee appointed to see about street crossings had met, but nothing definite had been done. A road to Zwick's Island would have to be built from the main road leading to the bridge, in order to get material to build crossings.

On motion the Surveyor was authorized to build the road at a cost not to exceed $60.

A portion of Coleman street, near Holton's mill, was ordered to be repaired.

The Mayor moved that the crusher be removed to Zwick's Island.—Carried.

It was decided to crush a quantity of granite before the crusher is removed.

A special committee composed of Ald. Panter, Marsh and Green, was appointed to look over the streets of the city, to ascertain what repairs are needed, and report.

PARKS.

Ald. Pope, Chairman, presided.

The accounts passed were as follows;

S. Taft......	$ 6.50
E. McGrath......	15.00

MARKET.

In this committee the only business transacted was the passing of an account of Wm. McGie, of $2.65.

WATERWORKS.

Ald. Galbraith, Chairman, presided.

The accounts passed were as follows;

Pay Roll......	$ 46.24
W. W. Chown Co., supplies......	136.98
W. W. Chown Co	32.94

Ald. Galbraith asked in reference to the placing of a hydrant on Henry street, when the main was put down that street.

A motion prevailed that a hydrant be placed on the corner of Henry and Cedar streets.

EXECUTIVE.

The accounts passed were as follows;

Board of Health	$ 1.50
Assessment Department	205.75

The Assessment.

In answer to an enquiry if any more large accounts would be presented from the Assessment Department, the Mayor stated that there would not be. He stated that a number had called upon him complaining in reference to the increased assessment, but when he had explained matters the greater portion of those complaining were satisfied.

Ald. Chown stated that if a substantial increase in the assessment was allowed to remain there was a prospect that a reduction of two mills on the rate would be made.

Will Have a Pooh-Bah.

The Mayor said the Medical Health Officer had spoken to him in reference to appointing a sanitary inspector. He (the Mayor) thought that a man should be appointed who would do this work, also be truant officer, cow inspector and meat inspector.

After some discussion it was decided to appoint a man to these positions at a remunerative salary, and the Solicitor was authorized to prepare a by-law for submission to the Council meeting on Monday evening.

The Rolling Mills Cheque.

Ald. Panter stated that there were some rumors abroad in reference to the cheque of $2,500, which had been received as a forfeit on account of the rolling mills not being operated.

Ald. Sinclair, who had by this time arrived, said that we should not pay any attention to rumors.

Ald. Chown said the money was in the bank and was drawing 3 per cent. interest. It might be transferred to the current account or some other account.

Ald. McFee was in favor of having it placed in the sinking fund account, where it would draw 5 per cent. He made a motion to that effect.

After a brief discussion the motion made by Ald. McFee prevailed.

This concluded the business and the committees adjourned.

The Success of

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Has Astonished and Gratified Medical Men Everywhere

IT IS THE ONLY REMEDY THAT POSITIVELY BESTOWS HEALTH AND LASTING STRENGTH.

Years ago when a great public demand arose for a remedy for nervous ailments as well as a reliable blood purifier, Dr. Edward E. Phelps, Professor of Materia Medica and Medical Botany, of Dartmouth Medical College, gave to diseased and suffering men and women his great discovery Paine's Celery Compound. The success of this wonderful prescription has been phenomenal. No other remedy known to medical science enjoys such a widespread reputation to-day.

In this month of May when so many are sick, Paine's Celery Compound makes people well. It is the one true specific prescribed by eminent practitioners for diseases arising from a debilitated nervous system; it is a positive cure for sleeplessness, wasting strength, rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, liver and kidney troubles and all blood diseases. Mr. S. Hanna, a respected resident of Manvers, Ont., writes thus:

"After severe sickness and suffering for a length of time, I am happy to state that I was made well by Paine's Celery Compound. To be raised up from a low and weak state inside of two weeks, is a marvellous work, which nothing else but Paine's Celery Compound could have accomplished. After using the first half bottle of the compound, I was able to dig the holes for a forty rod fence, and help to build it. Before using Paine's Celery Compound I could not sleep, and had no appetite; now I enjoy good sleep and a healthful appetite. Paine's Celery Compound is worth its weight in gold to any sufferer; it is the best medicine in the world."

TERRIBLE AFFAIR NEAR BLOOMFIELD

Farmer Shot His Four-Year-Old Son in Mistake for a Woodchuck.

Little Fellow Only Lived a Few Hours—Father is Heart-Broken.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Bloomfield, Ont., May 2.—A very sad accident occurred in this vicinity yesterday noon, on the farm of Mr. Geo. Martin, Ridge Road.

Mr. Martin had recently shot a number of woodchucks around his place, and, while at work, thought he saw one hiding behind a stump at some distance from him.

He spoke to the man working with him, who also felt confident as to Martin's suspicions.

Mr. Martin ran for his gun and fired at the supposed woodchuck, but no sooner was the shot fired than he heard a scream from his little four-year-old son, whom he had shot through the back of the head.

The little fellow had a brown velvet hood on, and this with the sun shining upon it, was evidently the cause of the fatal mistake.

Medical aid was immediately summoned, but the child only survived a few hours.

The parents are heartbroken, and have the sympathy of the community.

DEATH LIST NUMBERS 62

34 Men, 8 Women and 20 Children Were Killed at Frank.

Graphic Story of the Upheaval of Turtle Mountain on the Town of Frank—Whole Valley Devastated—Sections Buried Beneath Tons of Rock—No Bodies Can Be Removed and Giant Pile Becomes the Victims' Tomb.

Ottawa, May 2.—This is the substance of official telegram of extent of loss of life at Frank, read by Sir Wilfrid yesterday in the Commons: The following is probably more nearly a correct estimate of loss than any yet: 34 men, 8 women, 20 children killed; 11 injured, probably one die, two or three dangerously, have good attendance. Only two killed in or near mine. Ten dead recovered, remainder nearly all buried under many feet of rock, possibly a few near edge of slide may be recovered. Killed: Miners, 21; balance, ranchers, merchants, liverymen, engineers, railway contractors, laborers; six cottages totally destroyed by rock, swept away like feathers and broken into matchwood. One partially ruined. Inhabitations of ranchers and others outside Frank destroyed. All machinery installed and large amount of new machinery near tunnel mouth totally destroyed; tipple scales, engine house and all other plants destroyed. Uncertain whether or not tunnel materially injured, probably not.

Great Rock Slide.

W. W. Leach, B.A.S.C., of the Geological Survey, telegraphs from Frank: The Frank disaster is simply a great rock slide, from near the top of Turtle Mountain.

DEVASTATED WHOLE VALLEY.

Graphic Story of the Upheaval of Turtle Mountain.

Frank, N.W.T., May 2.—Utter desolation reigns on the site of the once busy little Town of Frank. The stupendous avalanche from the summit of Turtle Mountain did its work with awful celerity. Millions of tons of rock fill the valley of the Old Man River to a height of in many places one hundred feet, and presenting a scene of indescribable chaos.

Dazed by the shock of Wednesday morning's disaster the remaining inhabitants of the town wander aimlessly about in a vain attempt to locate the bodies of their dear ones who, by nature's mighty upheaval, were in the twinkling of an eye annihilated.

Extent of Cataclysm.

To the stranger approaching the scene of the disaster from Cowley (the only means of approach as yet open to the outside world), the extent of the cataclysm becomes apparent. Millions of tons of rock piled into vast irregular masses covered the whole space at the foot of the mountain, and huge boulders thrown clear accross the valley, lie scattered in thousands up the eastern slope behind the town. Only a few buildings can be seen standing forth amid the wilderness of limestone, trees and gravel covering a space of one and one-half miles wide and two miles long.

The railroad track for a distance of three miles east of the station is blotted out of sight by the avalanche, and now lies forever buried to a depth of from fifty to one-hundred feet. As the first relief party from Cowley stood upon the slope overlooking the site of the Town of Frank and realized that beneath that hideous mass of rock were buried many whom they held dear, the whole party were utterly depressed by the magnitude of the disaster, and many eyes were dimmed by tears.

Those residents of the ill-fated town who were fortunate enough to come safely through the catastrophe say the scene at the time of the avalanche is absolutely beyond description. As the thunder and boulders caused by the upheaval awakened the sleeping townspeople, and boulders and debris crashed down upon the cottages nestling at the foot of the mountain, those few who were fortunate to be out of the direct line of flight of the rocky downpour, rushed out into the night, and panic-stricken, ran up the street away from the roar. The worst of the noise was over in three or four minutes, and they returned back to the hotel, but those few minutes were enough to fill up a peaceful valley with debris and to crash out in a moment the lives of nearly 100 sleeping men, women and children.

The C.P.R. is cutting a pack trail for horses around the slide and has commenced work on a road which will be some four miles long for the purpose of making transfers. C.P.R. officials are discouraging all attempts to make the trip through the pass under which the railway track for two miles is covered many feet deep with millions of tons of the rock. The district in this neighborhood is covered with a fresh fall of snow, and this fact helps to render a trip through the pass extremely hazardous. The walk around and over the mountain to Frank covers a distance estimated at more than five miles.

The special party from Calgary, with nurses, doctors and mounted police, in charge of Superintendent Primrose, have now arrived here.

Death List Grows.

The death roll was increased yesterday by the names of Wm. and John Bobbles and John Lireina and John Clark, all miners. Two brothers named Wooster cannot yet be accounted for, and it is feared that they are also among the lost. Two hitherto-reported dead were found yesterday to be alive. They are B. Sumis and John Sorri. The total of the death list now numbers 64. The injured are reported progressing favorably.

Appeal For Aid.

Winnipeg, May 2.—The Board of Trade here has received a telegram from the Board of Trade of Frank, N.W.T., asking that financial assistance be sent there to aid the destitute townspeople. A committee was appointed to ascertain what the necessities of the situation required.

GRAPHIC STORY OF ESCAPE.

One of Entombed Miners Tells Coroner's Jury His Thrilling Tale.

Frank, N.W.T., May 2.—The only authentic story of escape of the seventeen miners who were employed in the Frank Mine was told by Joseph Chapman at the inquest, which was opened yesterday. Coroner Anderson of MacLeod conducted the inquiry. The following jury was impanelled; Thomas McDonnell, foreman; C. A. Gardner, William Evans, Leonard Wolburn, James Copeland and Chas. Chestnut, all of Frank."

Story of a Survivor.

Chapman's story is as follows: "I was one of the seventeen men in the mine when the fall took place. I felt the concussion very severe. I was at top of number 8 manway and I noticed that the air in the workings was forcing everything before it toward the outside of the mountain, and the coal began to fall, and threatened to close the same. I started to make down the manway. We arranged that those who were not cutting would have to sit to one side out of the road, while some were cutting timbers and others were keeping close watch on the lamps. Some went back for timbers, and so we worked on, for about an hour, when we found that the air was getting bad. We then decided we would kill the horses in a few minutes if the air did not clear.

"Two decided to go back to No. 8 manway to see if they could attempt to go out through the upper tunnel. They found they could hardly keep their lamps lit in the manway, so they came back behind us. They could see it coming in the manway.

Gas in the Mine.

"By the time I got down there were three other men in the crosscut, and one of them, Evan Jones, called me to help him to pull a man out who had been closed in the crosscut. We got him out and then all started down the manway. We decided to wait until 7 o'clock in the morning to see if we could hear anyone outside, and if we couldn't hear anyone at that time we were to start and cut through. When 7 o'clock came we failed to hear anyone. We pounded on the rail there for about five minutes several times, but failed to get any answer.

Danger From Rising Water.

"So, the air beginning to get foul, we decided to make haste and do what we could. So they went down into the bottom level to see how the water was, and they reported that 24 hours, as nearly as they could tell, would fetch the water into the cutting where we were working. We decided our time was limited, and we should have to pound for all we were worth to try to get out. We finally decided to remove all we could between the rocks, and we shoved the smallest man in the crowd through as far as we could and let him shout for help. Evan Jones said he would be satisfied to let us shove him up, so we finally got others to help us to move the rocks and get out all our gang. Seventeen in all got safely out.

Did Not Hear Any Explosion.

"I neither felt nor heard any explosion inside the mine until the force of air struck me and very nearly picked me up and threw me into the manway. The blast was full of coal dust. My opinion expressed to my companions was that a hot wave of air had mixed with a cold one and had exploded the cold one. I attributed the hot wave to be caused by something wrong with the boiler. Jones agreed with me, McKenzie also. I think the fall of rock was caused by some disturbance of the earth."

Anecdotal.

When the English barrister, Richard Eve, desired to "take silk"—or, in other words, to become a Queen's Counsel—he sent the usual note to the senior members on the circuit to see whether anyone objected, according to custom. Mr. Adam Walker, one of the senior members, replied as follows:—"My dear Eve,—You may take silk or a fig leaf. I don't care.—Adam."

Shortly after Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema, R.A., was knighted, he and Lady Alma-Tadema gave an At Home at St. John's Wood. Everybody present was congratulating them, and one lady was very profuse. "Oh, dear Sir Lawrence," she said, "I am awfully glad to hear of the honor you have received. I suppose now that you are knighted you will give up painting and live like a gentleman."

In an Ohio town last fall, the African Methodist-Episcopal Church of that district held a conference, and for a week the town was filled with colored pulpit orators. A few days after the conference closed its sessions, one of the leading colored women of the town drove out to Pea Ridge to purchase chickens of an old mammy who had supplied the family for years. Aunt Hanna, coming to the gate, said: "I'm sorry, Miss Allie. I ain't got a chicken left. Dey all done enter de ministry.

A story is going the rounds about a prominent Nova Scotia lawyer who is noted for his carelessness in dress, which fact annoys the members of the Bar exceedingly. Entering the courtroom one day minus a cravat, the judge reproved him, saying the law required him to wear one. "Oh, yes, your honor, I know it," he answered; "but it does not say where he shall wear it," and as he spoke he pulled it out of his trousers pocket. The matter then dropped.

General William T. Sherman was fond of relating the following story: "When I was with the army in Georgia, a slave-owner about Christmas time missed a fine fat turkey. He suspected a good-looking mulatto, and ordered the man brought before him. 'You have stolen my turkey and eaten it,' said the irate planter. 'I'se not gwine to say I didn't, when you says I did, massa.' 'I ought to have you flogged. What have you to say why I should not punish you?' 'Well, massa, you hain't lost anything particular. You see, you has a little less turkey and a good deal more nigger.' And the master was compelled to acknowledge the philosophy of the slave, and let him go unwhipped."

As a young man Paul Kruger was regarded as an authority on psalm singing, and the farmers used to come to him to learn the keynote for starting the psalms at the next Sunday's service. Kruger, even in those days, was no believer in the policy of giving anything away—not even a note of music—so he had a uniform charge of a double handful of dried peaches for his instruction. Even the fact that the work was in the service of religion did not deter him from resorting to strategy, for he made a point of giving each applicant a different note. The result when the pious Doppers attempted to raise their voices in sacred harmony next Sunday may be imagined. The result was that each man concluded he had lost the key, and had to return for a further lesson. "I nearly bankrupted them of their dried peaches," said the president.

Ford Madox Brown, the artist, once had to be smuggled into his own exhibition. The occasion was a private view in Bond street of the Manchester fresco, "John Kay." The artist being unwell at the time was accompanied in his carriage to the gallery by his doctor and old friend, William Gill. The time passed pleasantly enough en route in conversation, when suddenly Madox Brown's talk came to an abrupt full stop; he started as though struck by some very disquieting thought, and wildly plunged round in his various pockets, blank dismay depicted on his countenance the while. "Good heavens, Gill!" he exclaimed, "I have forgotten my card of admission! What am I to do?" "Your card of admission!" replied his amazed friend, "surely you can get in without that?" "No, no," answered Madox Brown in despair, "they will never let me in—they don't know me!" Fortunately, however, Mr. Gill was provided with the necessary passport, and he thus played the distinctly original role of getting an artist admission into his own show.

DR PITCHER'S Backache-Kidney TABLETS

CHOCOLATE COATED — SMALL & EASY TO TAKE

Purify the Blood — Help Women to Health

MOST of women's ailments, such as backaches, sideaches, headaches, worn, weary, depressed feelings, are the result of the failure of the kidneys to properly purify the blood. Dr. Pitcher's Tablets aid the kidneys in their work of blood purifying—banish every pain and ache—make women rejoice in health and strength restored.

MRS. A. CRAIGIE, Lighthouse Street, Goderich, Ont., relates her experience: For some time I suffered with a good deal of backache and kidney trouble, and with a severe headache which continued to grow worse. I heard of the many cures Dr. Pitcher's Backache-Kidney Tablets were making, and determined to try them. They acted splendidly, stopping the backache and headache and curing the kidney complaint.

The price of the Tablets is 50c. a bottle, or 3 for $1.25, at druggists or by mail. THE DR. ZINA PITCHER CO., Toronto.

Suicide by Gas.

Toronto, May 4.—Death by gas was the choice of Samuel Guest, a young mechanic, who has been rooming at 5 Peter street. On Saturday evening he was found lying on the floor of his room dead, from asphyxiation. For some time he had been a sufferer from melancholia, induced by sustained poor health. The body was removed to Bedson's undertaking establishment.

15 KILLED BY G.T.R. FLYER

Ran Into a Crowd of a Thousand People at Detroit.

Many Ground to Pieces—People Thrown Into the Air—Victims Scattered Along the Track For Two Blocks—Scene Reflected by the Light of the Lanterns of Rescuing Party Was Horrible—Four Identified.

Detroit, May 4.—The Grand Trunk Pan-American Flyer from Chicago ran into a crowd of 1,000 people at the corner of Dequinder and Canfield streets at 8.30 last evening, killing ten to fifteen men, and seriously injuring about thirty more. The majority of the killed and wounded are from Toledo.

Fifteen Polanders from Toledo came up to Detroit yesterday morning on a special Lake Shore train to celebrate a holiday. They left the train at the corner of Dequinder and Canfield streets and went over to St. Joseph's Church, where they spent the day with the congregation. The Lake Shore tracks run out Dequinder street and a special train was to stop for the Toledo excursionists at Canfield avenue at 8.30.

Spread Over G.T. Tracks.

Accompanied by hundreds of their local friends, waiting for the train, the excursionists jammed Canfield avenue some time before the train was due, in readiness for it. When the train was sighted the crowd pushed across the track, and on to the Grand Trunk tracks which adjoins those of the Lake Shore, just as the Grand Trunk Pan-American Express came thundering from the west.

People Thrown Into Air.

The people were thrown into the air and dashed to either side of the track. Many of them were ground under the wheels.

The police department was notified and all the ambulances in the city rushed to the scene.

The victims were scattered along the tracks for a distance of two blocks.

Lanterns were procured and the work of rescue began immediately. The scene reflected by the light of the lanterns was horrible. Gradually the mangled and crushed bodies were recovered and sent to the hospital when there was a flicker of life left, and to the morgue when there was none.

At 10 o'clock four of the dead had been identified.

Two Blocks of Mangled Men.

The flyer was stopped as quickly as possible and backed to the scene of the catastrophe, where for two blocks the track was covered with mangled and dying people. Four of the dead were killed outright, and the others died after being taken to the hospitals.

Ex-Mayor Ames' Trial.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 4.—When the trial of former Mayor A. A. Ames for bribery was resumed Saturday, Irwin A. Gardner, who swears he collected money for the Mayor from unfortunate women, declared that he had given his evidence without promise or immunity or reward of any kind from the State. Thomas M. Brown, who was the Mayor's secretary, produced a list of "roomers" he had found in the Mayor's desk while cleaning it out. This was after the Mayor had left town. It was in the handwriting of Charles R. Hill, the Mayor's captain of police, and presumably was the list of women who were paying for protection.

Died Aged 120 Years.

London, May 4.—Another interesting centenarian has passed away, the oldest subject of the King, aged 120 years. This was William Stuart, who died at Fortley, Letherkenny, Ireland. When a boy he saw Admiral Warren's battleships in Lough, Sicily, in 1798, after he had defeated and captured the French squadron, with which was Wolfe Tone, the notorious Irish rebel. Stuart easily heads the list of centenarians, who have died this year.

Mr. A. Bradshaw Dead.

Toronto, May 4.—The death occurred suddenly on Sunday morning of Alexander Bradshaw, senior partner of Bradshaw & Son, wholesale drygoods, 25 West Wellington street, from heart failure. The deceased was one of Toronto's most prominent business men, and was born in Scotland in 1835. It was Mr. Bradshaw's intention to leave on a trip to the Old Country this week. Deceased was a member of the Board of Trade.

Youngest Royal Cyclist.

London, May 4.—The little Princess Mary of Wales was six years old Saturday. Among the presents was a tiny bicycle given to his diminutive granddaughter by the King.

CITIZENS OF FRANK FLEE

Premier Haultain Sounded Alarming Note of Warning.

Further Slides of Rock From Turtle Mountain May Occur at Any Moment and Overwhelm the Remainder of the Devastated Little Place—Special Train Secured and Took the Inhabitants to Neighboring Towns—Town Deserted?

Winnipeg, Man., May 4.—A special despatch from Frank, N.W.T., says that Chief Engineer McHenry has, through Premier Haultain, given warning that further slides of rock may occur at any moment. From observations made by him he fears that the remaining portion of the little place may be overwhelmed with a rush similar to that which has already caused so much destruction. The town is now deserted, the Premier having advised the residents to leave, and a special train was secured to take them to neighboring towns, where accommodation might be had. There is no excitement, and general quiet prevails.

Exodus Began Sunday.

Frank was practically depopulated yesterday, and last evening the place was almost deserted. At early morning the exodus began. It commenced when on their return from a climb of inspection made to the top of the mountain from the Blairmore, Mining Inspector Smith, Superintendent McCarthy and Prospector Byron announced that danger lurked in the picturesque background. The announcement was officially communicated to the Board of Trade at a subsequent meeting. Steps were immediately taken to notify the villagers who had not already gone that no time should be lost in getting away. This move, however, had been anticipated.

Whole Town Depopulated.

There was no confusion, no panic; but there was despair, and its appeared on the faces of the townspeople. Not much was said; there was no time for parley. Premier Haultain, in view of the opinion expressed by the C.P.R. engineer, conferred with the police officials, and before 10 o'clock it had been decided to request, without demanding, that the populace move out for the night. The C.P.R. before midnight had an engine and some cars run in from the west and gave free transportation to all who desired to move. Many walked to Blairmore, two miles west of Frank. Less than twenty-five people slept in Frank last night. Yesterday's moving out was done quickly. Families made short work of packing their belongings into wagons and on to the backs of mules. A few of the merchants doing business in a small way got away with various quantities of stock in trade. The large dealers locked their doors and departed.

A Vein of Humor.

Even in the moving process, serious though it was, there crept in a vein of humor. One man was seen vainly endeavoring to navigate the principal street under a burden of many lengths of stove pipe. In another quarter a family in the hurry to place danger behind them carried out a hot kitchen stove from which the smoke sputtered in little gusts. The sick and wounded were transferred to Blairmore.

A curious phase of the last two days, perhaps the last of the town of Frank's official existence, has been the boom in the bar trade at the three hotels.

No More Bodies Recovered.

Since Friday there have been no bodies recovered from the ruins, and while the fate of the town depends upon the fall of one or both peaks left standing on the top of Turtle Mountain, it is not thought probable that any further attempts will be made to search the immense causeway of fallen rock.

A Fissure Discovered.

The report made by the party who visited the peak of the mountain was in effect the east peak of the mountain, if not actually creeping, might be expected to fall at a time when least expected. A fissure or crevice had been discovered. It is one thousand feet in length by twenty feet in breadth. The communication of this fact had the effect of making short work of the final scenes of the departure from Frank.

The need for relief and aid is not urgent. President Chambers of the Board of Trade made the official statement yesterday morning that not more than $3,000 would be required to defray cost of recovering as many bodies as possible, and providing temporarily for those children left destitute. The business men of Frank have been energetic in meeting all immediate demands.

The Dead Number 75.

Frank, N.W.T., May 4.—The list of dead has reached 75, consisting of four miners at the entrance to the mine, nineteen top laborers, 27 women and children, and 25 railway laborers.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

New York.—Central office detectives have arrested three men, who are members of the famous gang known as the "international bank sneaks."

On Saturday the remains of the late Dr. E. H. J. Stowe, of Toronto, the first woman physician of Canada, were taken to Buffalo for cremation, according to her long-expressed wish.

THE KING'S SUNDAY IN PARIS

His Majesty Mingled With the Throng of Churchgoers.

Mild Demonstrations of Good Will As They Passed on the Thoroughfares of the Gay City—Breakfasted by Minister Delcasse—Planted a Commemorative Tree in Garden of the British Embassy—Dinner to President Loubet.

Paris, May 4.—The picturesque features of King Edward's visit to Paris are practically over. The incidents of yesterday were comparatively quiet, but they were still expressive of the renewal of the Anglo-French good will.

His Majesty, in the morning, took a short stroll on his way to the English chapel. He seemed to enjoy mingling in the throng of churchgoers, who were clad in bright spring attire. King Edward wore a dark grey morning suit and a high hat. He carried a cane in his left hand and walked briskly with Sir Edmund K. Mason, the British Ambassador. Crowds of people gathered at the British Embassy and along the thoroughfares where his Majesty passed and gave mild demonstrations of good will.

Breakfast to His Majesty.

At noon yesterday Foreign Minister Delcasse gave a breakfast at the Foreign Office to his Majesty. Among the hundred guests present were many notable figures in official and diplomatic life, as well as persons famous in the salons. The papal nuncio and Count Von Wolkenstein, the Austrian Ambassador, who is dean of the diplomatic corps, were present. The breakfast gave occasion for further expressions of the firmer friendship between France and Great Britain, which the visit of King Edward has brought out.

King and President Dine.

In the afternoon King Edward planted a chestnut tree in the garden of the British Embassy in commemoration of his visit, and received the orphaned pensioners of the British institution, the cornerstone of which he laid when he was Prince of Wales.

Last night a gala dinner was given at the British Embassy to President Loubet. This was followed by a concert by the leading artists of the opera. The decoration of a number of French officials by King Edward is announced. The members of the King's party have received the decoration of the Order of the Legion of Honor.

Rumor of King's Assassination.

London, May 4.—A rumor that King Edward had been assassinated gained circulation here yesterday. It caused a feeling of uneasiness until it was learned that the rumor was absolutely unfounded and that the Sunday program of the royal visit was being carried out in Paris without a hitch.

The rumor caused great alarm in London official and court circles. Anxious enquiries concerning the truth of the report were made, and from Buckingham Palace telegrams were immediately sent to Paris. The replies that there was no truth in the rumor brought intense relief to all classes of society.

Emperor William Visits Vatican.

Rome, May 4.—Emperor William was received by the Pope yesterday. He had a conference with the Pontiff of 40 minutes' duration, and then returned to the residence of the Prussian Minister to the Holy See. At the Vatican the Emperor was received with military honors by the Palatine guard and a platoon of gendarmes, and was welcomed by high dignitaries of the Pontifical court. The visit of Emperor William was returned by Cardinal Rampolla, Papal Secretary of State at the Prussian Legation.

TWELVE KILLED AT CLEVELAND.

Kohl Torpedo Factory Blows Up With Disastrous Results.

Cleveland, O., May 4.—The Kohl Torpedo factory, at the corner of Cass avenue and Orange street, blew up shortly after noon Saturday, and 12 lives were lost. A large number of persons were reported injured. The factory was completely demolished, several buildings nearby demolished, several windows broken throughout the neighborhood. Fire broke out in the ruins, but the flames were soon under control. The firemen turned their attention to the rescue of victims.

Mrs. Hatton Drowned.

Brockville, May 4.—Saturday afternoon about 4 o'clock two lads, Devine and Donovan, playing on the river shore near Mallory's wharf, at the east end, discovered the body of a woman floating in the water. They at once gave the alarm, and it was removed to Swartz's undertaking rooms. The body was identified there by a nurse from the General Hospital as that of Joanna Hatton, aged about 55, who had been a patient at the hospital for nervous trouble. She was of a good family and possessed of considerable property. An inquest is being held.

Shot Three Policemen.

New York, May 4.—Policeman Ernest J. Peters was shot and killed Saturday night in a saloon at 6th avenue and 3rd street, by Jefferson Saunders, a negro ex-convict. Sanders also shot Sergt. Thomas Gilhooly and Policeman Joe. Russo, both of whom will probably die. He was captured after a fight.

UNFIT FOR WAR.

U.S. Cavalry Come in For Criticism by Gen. Baden-Powell—Col. Edgerly Thinks That He Errs.

New York, May 4.—"The American cavalry is below the British standard, and not up to that of the contingent of Canadian fighting men engaged in the South African campaign," declared Gen. Baden-Powell to a Journal reporter, just before he sailed for England.

Here is the way that eminent authority views the comparative capacity of the English, Canadian and American horsemen, who are trained to fight in the saddle:

Two Forces Sized Up.

"The physique of your cavalrymen is somewhat below the British standard.

"A more vigorous and rigorous system of gymnastics is needed.

"Your men drink too much coffee. Plain, substantial food, with no coffee and little tea, will show better results.

"I believe your men lack endurance. A hard campaign, like the Boer War, will produce a big sick list for you.

"Man for man, your cavalry fighting men are not equal to the Canadian contingent.

"Your cavalry man is more active, both physically and mentally, than the average British horseman, but I think he lacks the staying powers.

"Your cavalry horses are perfection.

"I consider your Second Cavalry the most efficient in rank and file, as well as the best officered."

Col. Edgerly Says He Errs.

Colonel Winfield S. Edgerly, commanding the Second Cavalry, at Fort Myer, Virginia, does not like the criticisms of the American cavalrymen made by Gen. Baden-Powell. It was the crack troop of the Second Cavalry that Gen. Baden-Powell saw drill at Fort Myer when he visited Washington.

"It seems to me," Col. Edgerly said, "that Gen. Baden-Powell made the mistake of judging the whole of the cavalry of the United States by the few men he saw in Madison Square Garden, New York. As far as we know, these men are the only troops he looked over.

"In the Indian campaigns some of the marches made by the troops have never been equalled. It was to this style of fighting that Gen. Baden-Powell referred when he told his troops to follow American methods and to let the obsolete methods of the British army go. As regards our men, we are so sure of them we give all of our attention to the horses. Cavalry is as strong as its horses. The men invariably wear them out. We think our men are the best in the world."

ACCEPT RUSSIA'S EXPLANATION.

United States Will Pay No Heed to Other Reports.

Washington, D. C., May 4.—It is learned that U. S. Minister Conger's original statement of the Russian demands, as to Manchuria, has very recently received further support in the shape of several reports from different sources—all official—but the State Department feels bound to accept without question the explanation of the Russian Government as made through its Ambassador here, and through Count Lamsdorff in St. Petersburg, and does not feel called upon to make any further representations at present upon this subject.

Situation in Manchuria.

Victoria, B.C., May 4.—Mail advices received here show that New Chwang is being strengthened by the Russians, who have explained to the Chinese authorities that this course was made inestimable as Russia may soon come into conflict with a certain power. It is also reported that Russia had formed nine regiments of Chinese troops in Manchuria as auxiliaries to Russian garrison. The number will be increased to 50,000 in three years.

LONGSHOREMEN'S STRIKE.

Agreement Reached as to Wages—Union Recognition Only Block.

Montreal, May 4.—The strike is not off, but it is probable that the conflicting parties are now nearer together than at any time since the trouble began. The conference between the representatives of the shipping men and the longshoremen lasted till 2 o'clock yesterday morning, and was continued this afternoon. They could not agree as to the recognition of the union, although they came together as to the wages. However, the Mayor addressed the strikers yesterday afternoon with the result that their committee was instructed to wait upon the shipping men to-day.

Militia Still on Ground.

There have been few new developments since Saturday in the strike, in so far as the militia are concerned. The troops continue to patrol the river front, and no suggestions have yet been made for their withdrawal. It is likely, therefore, that they will remain on duty until Tuesday or Wednesday of this week.

Wandered From Home

Saturday evening an old man upwards of 75 years of age wandered into Mr. Bartlett's residence on Grove street. He appeared to be unwell and his mind was apparently gone. Every effort was made to ascertain his name, place of residence and friends, if any, but all proved futile. The affair was reported to the Mayor who had the old gentleman removed to the hospital. Later it was learned from him that his name was Thomas Henderson and his home is thought to be in the township of Tyendinaga, whence he had evidently wandered into the city. He will be taken care of until his relatives are located.

Old age is more or less contrary. It never agrees with a woman.

Some people never seek religion as long as there is a dollar in sight.

Fire in Faraday

A small frame saw mill belonging to Mr. Henry Johnson, situated in 3rd concession of the Township of Faraday, was destroyed by fire on Saturday. Bush fires were responsible for the loss sustained. There was an insurance of $200 on the building and $100 on machinery in the Sun.

GENERAL ELECTION THIS FALL.

Everything points to a general election this fall. The departments here are preparing for it and the idea is to go to the country before Sir Wilfrid Laurier's health becomes so shattered as to force him to retire. This explains the cooking of the public accounts so as to show fake surpluses in the Post Office Department and on the Intercolonial Railway. In a series of manipulations by which large amounts due capital account are being carried over until next year, Hon. W. S. Fielding is arranging for a big surplus for the fiscal year. This balance, which will be reached on the "robbing Peter to pay Paul" basis, will result in an enormous deficit during 1903-4, but it will then be beyond the ability of the people to punish the offenders. The whole arrangement is looked upon as a carefully laid plot to deceive the electorate as to the real condition of the country's finances. Sir William Mulock's action in representing his department as having a surplus of $5,000, which the Auditor-General declares is a deficit of $380,000, furnishes an excellent example of the lengths to which the present Ministers of the Crown are prepared to go in order to lead their masters—the people—astray. When the year 1903-04 is fully exposed the supposed surpluses will have disappeared and instead, the offsetting shortage will be a boomerang to those who put their trust in the Liberal leaders.

When some men know their duty they try to dodge it by asking advice.

J. ARTHUR MARSH.

ODE TO SPRING

By Kudyard Ripling. (Rights Reserved.)

What man forgets that anguish
That marred his mind's repose
When first he found himself arrayed
In slop work fitting clothes.

Where e'er his steps did wander
Alarm was in his eye,
He felt that he was noticed
By every passer by.

He endeavored to look pleasant
But he couldn't hide a frown,
When a news boy shouted out
Just see that hand me down.

He tried to sneak from notice
In back streets of the town.
But in his ears kept ringing
Just see that hand me down.

He chanced to turn a corner,
When he met a loud tirade
Some boys did call and fairly bawl
Get on to "that ready-made."

He started from the spot,
And for home he made a raid.
He could not travel fast enough
To shed "that ready-made."

But time has brought its changes,
And to our mind's repose
For the Globe Clothing House
Has perfect fitting clothes.

They cut from those proportions
That gauges fat and thin,
And clothes from the Globe Clothing House
Fits like the sausage skin.

About their perfect measure
Remember it's the plan
That enables the Globe Clothing House
To fit a hump-backed man.

Such coats are made with caution,
The shoulders built out square,
So that a close observer
Can't tell a hump is there.

We'll whisper to the bow-legged man
Who for fits he prays and begs
To trust in their Geo. Dulmage,
To fit his crooked pegs.

And those whom old Dame Nature
Has furnished with knocked knees
Must buy at the Globe Clothing House,
Their pants are sure to please.

And those with sloping shoulders,
That toil has made so round,
Will find they can be suited
If they'll only call around.

Their goods are simply perfect,
They offer to the trade
In material, styles and finish,
They surpass the tailor-made.

By making suits in quantity,
A thousand, more or less,
Must cheapen the production,
The public must confess.

Their suits for style and finish
A tailor can't excel,
But his charges will be double
For the same material.

They search in foreign markets
For goods the very best,
And trust to thorough finish,
And prices for the rest.

For protection of the public
The prices they arrange,
And woe betide a salesman
Who dares to make a change.

They will not suffer salesmen
To change the price of goods
And cheat an honest toiler
Away back from the woods.

They buy their stock in quantity
Which gives a lower rate,
And in dealing with the public
They give the same rebate.

The prices that they mention
Are based on cost of stock
And the margin that they figure
Makes prices bottom rock.

They draw a happy medium,
And make the prices fair,
And guarantee in all their clothes
You will find the value there.

Nothing can mark the gentleman
Or his place in life disclose
So much as the style and finish
And the cloth that's in his clothes.

On those with shallow natures
Loud patterns you will find
Connected with the loud laugh,
That speaks the vacant mind.

While those with courtly manners,
And dignified in mien
Will be found in quiet colors
Wherever they are seen.

A gent with neat and flashy dress,
And with a diamond star
Denotes he finds his calling
Behind the public bar

The gent with sombre aspect,
Whose coat far down does reach,
You'll notice Sabbath morning
He goes forth to preach.

They know the clothing business
And the wants of every man.
And they keep the minstrel Dulmage,
To please you best he can.

INFLAMED NOSE AND THROAT

And such diseases of the respiratory organs as bronchitis, weak lungs, cold in the head and nasal catarrh, are treated with marvellous success on strictly scientific principles by Catarrhozone. The medicated vapor of Catarrhozone quickly traverses every air passage possible to be reached by any treatment. All soreness, pain, congestion and inflammation are at once dispelled, and by means of the healing powers of Catarrhozone the vitiated tissues are quickly restored. Where Catarrhozone is used colds last only ten minutes, coughs half an hour, and catarrh, consumption, asthma and bronchitis flee as from fire. A trial will convince anyone of the startling merit of Catarrhozone. Costs $1.00, small size 25c. At druggists', or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

WILSHIRE'S MAGAZINE FOR MAY.

In the May number of Wilshire's Magazine the editor writes up, in a breezily entertaining style, an interview he had with John D. Rockefeller at a California resort, where both happened to be staying last month. There is a brilliant arraignment of The Great Families of England from the pen of the English economist and writer, H. M. Hyndman, who is easily master of his subject. There is the usual interesting Wilshirean comment on passing events.

June being the favored month for weddings, that issue of The Designer gives special space to articles of interest to the woman who expects soon to be a bride. "Brides and Bride Attendants," "The June Bride's Trousseau" and "Woman's Fads and Fancies" all cater to this one subject, and even the fiction leans to that side, for "Laviny's Wedding Gown" and "Thalia's Successful Play" have matrimony as a theme. The fashions and millinery shown in this month are charmingly summery and dainty, and so too are "Fashions and Fabrics" and "Points on Dressmaking."

Interesting Items.

The Germans, having no native supply of petroleum or natural gas, have sought a substitute for those fuels in alcohol, which they can produce cheaply from the potatoes that luxuriate in the sandy plains of their country. The result was seen in a recent exhibition of the industrial applications of alcohol at Berlin, where were shown alcohol-driven motors for stationary engines as well as for automobile carriages; portable alcohol engines for farm work; domestic utensils, such as flat-irons, heated by alcohol; alcohol cooking ranges, etc.

A curious check was presented to the cashier of one of the Tonawanda banks recently. This check, which was for $10, was made payable to "the sweetest of the sweet," and was presented to the cashier in the ordinary way. The cashier, naturally startled by the unusual expression in the body of the check, asked in innocence: "Who is the 'sweetest of the sweet?'" "I am," replied the lady. "Kindly endorse it that way," said the cashier. She did. And, as her husband's account warranted it, for, like a prudent man, he had not overdrawn it, "the sweetest of the sweet" received her money.

The notion has long been held that the mushroom presented the composition of animal flesh, which led to it being called the "vegetable beefsteak." It appears, however, that this conclusion has been based on some analyses made many years ago when analytical methods were not so exact as they are now, and when the chemistry of food was not so well understood. In the light of modern enquiry, there seems to be no reason for believing that mushrooms possess any greater food value than other ordinary fresh vegetable foods, and in many respects they compare unfavorably with them.

Professor Simon Newcomb in a recent address called attention to the immense range of difference in the brightness of the stars when the sun is taken for a standard of comparison. Some of the stars emit only one one-hundredth as much light as the sun emits. Others emit a thousand times as much light as he does. Indeed, Professor Newcomb thinks there are at least two stars, each of which is probably 10,000 times as bright as the sun, which signifies that if either of those stars were as near to us as the sun is, it would outshine him 10,000 times in brightness. The two stars are Canopus, which is in the southern hemisphere and invisible from our part of the earth, and Rigel, one of the two brightest stars in the constellation Orion.

The announcement that the young women of St. Joseph's Church, Hoboken, N.J., recently instituted a novena to St. Joseph to obtain for themselves husbands has provoked some mirth in the daily press. And yet, comments the Pittsburg "Observer" (Roman Catholic), "there was nothing out of the way in that." The same paper adds: "It is better to ask the help of God through the intercession of the saints than to go to parties in winter and to seaside resorts in summer in the hope of catching beaux. There is nothing improper about the holy sacrament of matrimony, and every young woman with a vocation to the married state, has a right to expect heavenly aid in her search for a proper helpmate."

Explanatory.

The efforts of the omniscient schoolboy immortalized by Macaulay to find suitable replies to the painful questions put to him by his unfeeling instructors are often a source of considerable amusement to the latter, but it is not often that a boy succeeds in producing anything quite so delightfully cynical as the following answer to the question, "What is meant by the three ages of man?" The first age of man is when he thinks about all the wicked things he is going to do when he is grown up. This is called "Innocence." The second age is when he does all the wicked things he had thought of in childhood. This is called "The Prime of Life." The third age is when he repents of all the wicked things he did in the prime of life. This is called "Dotage."

On the Jury.

Ex-Governor Leslie M. Shaw of Iowa, the new United States Secretary of the Treasury, practised for many years at the Iowan courts. The following is one of the many good stories he tells: A boy of about fourteen had been put in the witness-box, and the opposing counsel examined him as follows:

"Have you any occupation?"

"No."

"Don't you do any work of any kind?"

"No."

"Just loaf around home?"

"That's about all."

"What does your father do?"

"Nothin' much."

"Doesn't he do anything to support the family?"

"He does odd jobs once in a while when he can get them."

"As a matter of fact, isn't your father a worthless fellow, a deadbeat and a loafer?"

"I don't know, sir; you'd better ask him. He's sitting over there on the jury."

The Inverted Comma.

Mr. Bernard Shaw will have the sympathy of writers—and we should think of compositors—in his protest against the use of the apostrophe. He has himself dropped it out of "aint," "dont" and "shouldnt"—but not out of "he'll—before he wrote his protest in "The Author." But why all these inverted commas, "the silly trick of peppering pages with these uncouth bacilli?" You will find none of these bacilli in the Bible. Take this passage, chosen at random: Now Jesus knew that they were desirous to ask Him, and said unto them, Do ye enquire among yourselves of that I said, A little while, and ye shall not see me; and again, a little while, and ye shall see me? The modern compositor would set that passage between two brackets of inverted commas, for it is a quote within a quote. But it is beautifully clear as it stands. And among all Biblical misunderstandings, no one we think has been misled by the absence of an inverted comma.

Money and Dreams.

He settled himself in his roomy chair in his big, old house, where he had lived so long that the city had grown up away and beyond him, leaving the house, which had been in a fashionable neighborhood, so far down town that there was little more than the hum of business to be heard all day around it. The old man's housekeeper brought him a cool drink, and one of his nephews came in to enquire how he had stood the unusual heat of the day.

He had so many nephews and nieces to look after his comfort. Some even stayed in town all summer to be near him. When they tried to persuade him to go away for a little rest in the hot weather he would say:

"Rest! Who wants rest? If you let money rest it rusts—rusts! Turn it over, keep turning it over; it grows, it grows!" And he would add that the summer was the best time of all for work. The old financier was the possessor of many millions. But he walked alone. This evening he sat in the twilight which settled itself hot and thick about him. The night was bringing no cooling breath. The roar of the metropolis was dying away in tired sobs outside. The city's life seemed sapped with the heat. Even the old man, who never stopped his work for anything, realized that it was unusually hot tonight. He fanned himself with his newspaper and took a sip from the glass which stood near him on the table.

He closed his eyes. He felt such a strange sense of oppression. No, he was not dizzy. It had passed. He opened his eyes and put up his hand to unfasten his collar. At his neck he touched a twisted cord of silk that was around it. He pulled at the cord and drew out its length. From it hung a ring—a silver ring—old-fashioned and worn, and on it two raised hearts lying against each other and rubbed smooth by time.

He sat now with his eyes closed again and his hand folded over the ring on his breast. He dreamed once more, and it was his last dream. It was summer—yes—but it was nearly fifty years ago. The dust and roar of the city gave way to the scent and quiet of an old garden; the heat to the dew of a country evening, its breeze lightly moving the leaves of the trees and fluttering the ruffles of a girl's muslin frock, with its pattern of summer blossoms upon it.

A boy—such a boyish country boy—took the silver ring, then new and shining, from his pocket and put it on the hand of the girl in the flowered muslin frock. Then they kissed each other, and the girl fell to sobbing, with her arms about her companion's neck, and he spoke:

"Never mind, dear; Annie, dear. I am going away to make a fortune, and I'm coming back for you, and we will be married, and I will take you away to the city, and you will be rich and have everything you want."

"But I don't like the city. I should be so afraid and so confused, and you might not love me there as you do now here in the country. People in the city forget each other so."

"No, they don't; not if they really love each other, and I love you. Nothing can ever make me forget you. See, not as long as evening comes after the day and the stars come with it."

They kissed each other again.

The ring came back to him in a letter with a flower from Annie's grave.

Never once did he go to seek the grave to rest by it a moment. Work became his love and gold the star that guided him.

Now he clasped the silver ring tighter, tighter. By and by he gasped and fell forward. His clasp relaxed; he sighed once, a deep sigh; then lay there quite still. And later they found him so.—Margaret Klein in the New York "Herald."

A Useful Helpmate.

The editor of the Grapevine "Telegraph," after spending six years without a break, in the editorial harness, felt himself entitled to a vacation, and went away to the mountains for a month's hunting and fishing, leaving his wife in charge of the paper.

On his return he was astonished to find his office overflowing with potatoes. Everything that could be turned into a receptacle was filled with them. Each pigeonhole in his desk contained a potato. The drawer of his editorial table was bursting with potatoes. Old ink-kegs, lined with papers, were filled and heaped with them. There were potatoes in the coal-bucket, in the ash-pan, and even in the stove itself.

They were no small potatoes, either. Every one of them was as big as his fist, and some were as big as two fists. The collection would have taken a premium at a county fair.

"Lucy," he said, after the greetings were over, "what does all this mean?"

"Oh," she almost sobbed, "I wanted to do something original, and so I announced, in the first number of the paper I printed after you went away, that the 'Telegraph' would be sent for one year to the person sending us the largest potato raised in this county, for six months to the person sending the next largest, and for three months to the one sending the third largest. The potatoes began coming in right away, and they've been coming ever since. Some persons, I am afraid, have tried to get all three of the prizes. I have begged the people not to send any more, and I do believe they are doing it now for a joke. We can't announce any prizes till they quit coming, and there are some boys in the other room with their pockets bulging with them right now, and—Oh, Cyrus, what shall we do?"

"Do?" said the editor, with a grin on his face. "Do? The right thing to do would be for me to go away for another month and let you continue to edit the paper. Potatoes are worth a dollar a bushel, and you have got enough of them here to pay all the expenses of my trip, and all they cost us is a dollar and seventy-five cents' worth of 'Telegraph.' If you want an apprentice, just consider me in line for the job."

Wife—I am going down town this morning to try and match a piece of silk. Husband—Very well, my dear; I'll tell the cook to save some dinner for you, and I'll put the children to bed myself.—"Tit-Bits."

The Sense of Humor.

He was an ordinarily mild and inoffensive little gentleman who had lived for many happy, uneventful years in Further Chelsea, when a volume of theatrical anecdotes came into his hands. In this he read of delicious practical jokes played with unfailing success by Vivier and Sothern, and of how that great comedian, J. L. Toole, brought confusion to a baker's shop displaying in the window a sign, "Families supplied," by requesting that three girls and a boy should be sent round as soon as possible.

"This," he said, "is the exercise of true wit." Then he went out, still chuckling.

In farther Chelsea, where custom is drawn by halfpence from the needy, stands an eating-house which endeavors to attract the hungry by pasting on its front this dubious message, "Everything as nice as mother makes it."

"The very place," said the little gentleman, and entered.

"I can have a meal?" was his first query.

"Yes—straight through," said the woman behind the counter, pointing to an inner partition of the shop.

"Any everything as nice as mother makes it?" he asked.

"That 's in the window."

"But how nice does mother make it?"

"Jim," said the woman, calling into space, "here's a cove wants to know how nice mother makes it," and she laughed.

"Garn," came a beery voice; "must be balmy on the crumpet. Turn 'im out."

Nothing daunted, the little man went on: "Supposing she doesn't make it at all nice? Supposing she makes it very nasty, what then?"

No answer.

The woman went on frying onions, but her eye gleamed.

"What if I don't remember any mother? What if she never made anything at all? What if——"

He got no further, but found himself thrust violently through the door to the pavement outside, while a voice admonished him: "'Ere, you, don't come interfering 'ere—if yer wants a sausage and mashed, say so. If not, get out." And as he retreated hastily, though with dignity, the voice followed faintly: "Bedlam—that's the place for the likes of you—Bedlam."

The discomfited little gentleman had walked nearly a mile before his recovery was completed by a sign, hung over a boot shop, which caught his eye. "Wear Parkinson's Boots," ran the legend.

The little man fairly leaped into the shop.

"Why?" he asked, in mild enquiry.

"Beg pardon, sir," said the assistant who had hurried forward to greet him.

"Why should I wear Parkinson's boots?"

"Because they are the best, sir. We use nothing but the best leather."

"What's the matter with my own?"

The assistant glanced down.

"Uppers want mending and heels leveling, sir. Do you a perfect boot for fifteen shillings."

"But supposing Parkinson's don't fit me?"

"We keep all sizes, sir."

"Yes, but I don't know that I care about wearing another man's boots."

"Of course, sir, if you prefer to go on buying boots like those you've got on; but," with a deprecatory smile, "we can turn you out a much better article for fifteen shillings."

"But my name is Pettigrew, and I don't think it would be legal for me to wear Parkinson's boots—it looks like robbery."

"Robbery?" said the assistant sharply. "Our prices are as low as they can be for sound wearing qualities. If there's nothing further to-day, sir," holding open the door, "good morning!"

"Some people," said Pettigrew to himself, as he waited for his homeward 'bus, "have no sense of humor. I wonder how Toole managed it?"—"Punch."

A Keen Sense of Smell.

One of the sorrows of childhood is the slowness of some older people to take a hint. It is often quite a strain on good manners to be obliged to reinforce a suggestion that should have been adequate in itself.

A little girl, calling at a neighbor's house, sat near a plate containing some apple-parings. At last, unable to keep silence any longer, she said, "I smell apples."

"Yes," returned her hostess, "it's those parings."

"No'm," said the little girl, solemnly. "I smell whole apples."

RECENT FICTION.

Wild Animals that have known me.—From "Life."

Is the Novel Dying?

Science and the stern reality of life are bound to destroy the novel. It is out of harmony with the scientific and materialistic spirit of the age. The more industrial and strenuous a nation is, the fewer novelists has she; only the backward, the passive, the visionary peoples produce great novelists. The fable, the national tale, the folk-song, have died. Why not the novel? It, too, is subject to the law of evolution. It has seen its acme, its highest point, and is on the decline.—"Novoye Vremya," St. Petersburg.

Unrewarded Solicitude.

Hostess (to guests, who have come to spend a few days)—We're so glad you've been able to come, Mrs. Gushington; but I do hope we are going to have better weather, or I'm afraid you won't enjoy yourself much. Miss Gushington—Oh, but, my dear Lady Boreham, we didn't come here to enjoy ourselves. We came to see you.—"Punch."

Curiosities of Book Sales.

Commenting on the phenomenal sale of some recent novels, a correspondent of the "Book Buyer" writes interestingly of notable books that years ago were popular, but since have become practically unknown. He says:

There was once a very popular preacher who wrote many books, and for every one there was a large demand on the day of publication. But most of them passed out of print while he was still living, and I doubt if a single one of them is now kept in stock by any bookstore. Not many years ago appeared a book which the laboring classes and the tenement-house population bought so eagerly as to run the sale into the hundreds of thousands, because they thought it showed how an equal distribution of all property might be brought about. Now it appears to be dead. Helper's "Impending Crisis" attained a sale of 140,000 copies, forty years ago, which was as great an achievement as half a million would be to-day. That was because of its bearing on burning political questions and the fact that it was systematically attacked in Congress. Now you can occasionally find a stray copy of it in a second-hand shop. Tourgee's "Fool's Errand," twenty years later, reached about the same circulation. For purposes of comparison, this and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" would seem to be closely analogous. But while the "Fool's Errand" has almost, if not quite, gone out of circulation, Mrs. Stowe's great novel, thirty years older, still sells largely in several editions, and at many libraries is called for more frequently than any other book. Mrs. Stephens' "Fashion and Famine" was the best selling novel of its day, and three translations of it were published in France. But to-day it is difficult to find a copy of it anywhere except in the lumber-room of a public library. Another example may be seen in the sudden popularity and subsequent deadness of "Robert Elsmere," the author of which is still writing successful books. Were it not that it might seem like telling tales out of school, something could be said of certain books that have begun life with a phenomenal sale, which has stopped suddenly and unaccountably, as if at some mysterious signal.

For the reverse of the picture, the most notable example is afforded by "Ben Hur." This book had no sale worth mentioning for a year after its publication, and was considered dead. Now it is said to have attained a circulation surpassing that of any other American novel, with the single exception of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Someone might prepare a curious and entertaining article on three classes of books in light literature: 1. Those that have had an immediate large sale, and have then gone to oblivion. 2. Those that have had no sale at first, but afterward have met with large success. 3. Those that have been popular at the start and never lost their popularity. The first class would be the largest. Probably the second class would be the smallest. Two that would shine in the third are the "Autocrat at the Breakfast Table" and "Reveries of a Bachelor."

In Desperation.

The European king sighed and stirred uneasily. "My subjects," he exclaimed, "are getting so enlightened, so imbued with the ideas of democracy, that they no longer fawn upon me, toady to me. There's only one thing for me to do to relieve this monotony. I must visit America."—"Town Topics."

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

If thy friend is honey, do not lick him up altogether.

HAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickerson, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

Over 250,000 copies of Charles Dickens' novels are sold annually.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed "Perfection."

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

A woman never knows where the match box is.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

Attend no auctions if thou hast no money.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes: "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle, I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

Coral is a talisman against thunder and evils by flood and field.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Many a man's self-conceit is due to his ignorance.

Do not despair of curing your sick headache when you can so easily obtain Carter's Little Liver Pills. They will effect a prompt and permanent cure. Their action is mild and natural.

TIMELY TOPICS

Terrible lot of wind lately. One would almost think it was election times.

• • •

"A Ratepayer" writes: "I am very much in favor of the idea, as recently promulgated in The Intelligencer, of having the assessment rolls published, and sincerely hope it will be done. Publicity, as we are all aware, is the greatest safeguard the public has. Business men can, in Bradstreets, gauge each other's standing pretty accurately, even in private business affairs. The question of assessment is a public matter, in which we are all concerned. I would like to see the rolls published, but, if that is not done, would respectfully request an answer to the following questions: 1. By whom was the staff of clerks, valuators, etc., who compiled the recent assessment, engaged? 2. Where can people see the assessment roll, or have they a right to see it? 3. In whose custody are the assessment rolls which have been used in years gone by?"

• • •

The Intelligencer is quite as much in favor of publicity as our correspondent is. We think the assessment rolls should be published, and in order to show its good faith in the matter this paper will do its share of the work at a reduced rate, eliminating the principle of profit altogether.

• • •

To the questions asked by "A Ratepayer" we would reply: 1. The assessment staff, we understand, was appointed by the Mayor and Assessment Commissioner; 2, We understand that any ratepayer has a right to see the assessment rolls. Those for the present year would be, we think, in the hands of the Assessment Commissioner or Chairman of the Executive Committee; 3, The rolls of 1902 are in the hands of Messrs. Chisholm and Diamond; the rolls for 1900 and 1901 are in the hands of Mr. J. H. Starling. The rolls for previous years are in the custody of the City Clerk.

• • •

That energetic body, the Belleville Board of Trade, meets again to-morrow night, and it is to be hoped that the programme committee has got something on the order paper about the local Post Office. Many people think it is up to the Board to tear off a resolution asking the Government to improve matters in that institution.

• • •

People are already beginning to think of their coal for next winter, and the question is, will coal be cheaper this summer? There is no question at all that it should be cheaper, and much cheaper. Navigation is open and there are vessels arriving every day or two. If the people of this city are compelled to pay $7.00 per ton for their coal this summer it will cause much dissatisfaction.

• • •

In this connection an interesting case has just come to light in Hamilton. The corporation of that city uses some 2000 tons of hard coal, for which they advertised for tenders. The local dealers who tendered demanded an average of $6.60 per ton for egg, stove and nut coal, and $6.45 for grate. A Buffalo coal dealer offered to deliver the goods for $5.70 for egg, stove and nut coal, and $5.47 for grate. The City Council lost no time in accepting his offer, making a neat little saving of about $2000 on the transaction. By accepting an outside dealer's tender for soft coal the other day the same city council saved $3000, so they have cut down their coal bill by exactly $5000 this year. Not a bad showing.

• • •

Now the question arises, if a Buffalo man can deliver coal in Hamilton, by rail, at $5.70 per ton, cannot people who bring their coal to Belleville by water sell it at less than $7. Retail dealers in many places now sell coal at $6.50 per ton. It is up to the people who handle the black diamonds to come down. There is a good deal of "co-operative" talk in the air at present, and there are more ways of killing a cat than letting it sit in a draught and catch pneumonia. We believe that peo-

THE GAMEY ENQUIRY.

Provincial Secretary Stratton Will Tell His Story of Gamey—Possibilities of the Enquiry Freely Discussed.

Toronto, May 4.—Provincial Secretary Stratton will take the witness stand to-day. It is thought that the Minister's examination and cross-examination will consume at least two days. It is possible it may be even as long as Gamey's. When this is concluded the investigation will be practically concluded. There are to be a few witnesses, however, to be called in rebuttal. Altogether, the arguments are not expected to commence before this day week. They will consume the better part of the week. Therefore, two more weeks will probably be devoted to the trial, and the decision of the commission is not expected for another week at the least. Their Lordships have to examine a mass of testimony, notes and various features of the trial. Therefore it is not anticipated that a report can be made to the House much before the close of May.

Criminal Prosecutions.

The possibilities of prosecutions of a criminal character growing out of the affair are being very freely discussed. It was stated at the opening by Gamey that he would not insist on the Sullivans being brought to book on any charge growing out of the affair. However, prosecutions for perjury are quite likely, but just who will be the accused is as yet uncertain. Since so many persons have flatly contradicted each other, some one must have committed perjury. Under the terms of the Commission, no prosecutions can arise out of the evidence of any witness for perjury or on a charge that does not have to be substantiated by evidence given by the person accused during the investigation.

What Do These Men Know?

Ottawa, May 4.—Mr. J. M. McEvoy, junior counsel for the defence in the bribery case, left here last night for Toronto, accompanied by three Frenchmen. It is said these men are witnesses before the Commission, and will make important revelations.

Death of Mr. G. B. Fraser.

Toronto, May 4.—Mr. Geo. B. Fraser, one of Toronto's best known business men, expired Saturday morning after a brief illness. Pneumonia was the cause of death. Funeral services were held last evening, and the remains taken to Guelph for interment early this morning. The remains were received at Guelph by members of the Masonic fraternity, the Caledonian Society and many citizens. Mr. Fraser was a resident of Guelph for twenty years before removing to Toronto, where he held many public positions of confidence. He was born in Tain, Ross-shire, Scotland, in 1830. Mr. Fraser was a thirty-third degree Mason, and one of the substantial business men of the city.

DAISY GORDON'S FOLLY

—OR—

THE WORLD LOST FOR LOVE'S SAKE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY,

Author of "The Crime of Hallow-E'en," "The Flirtations of a Beauty," "Willful Gaynell," "Little Leafy," "Only a Mechanic's Daughter," etc.

"It will be dark before I get home," she gasped— "yes, quite dark, and by the looks of those clouds there might be a storm."

She took the oars in her little, slim hands, and struck out with a will, but pulling against the tide was quite another thing from floating down with the stream.

Time seemed to fly swift- winged. Almost before she was aware of it, the sun had sunk and the darkness of night crept on, and to add to the peril of Daisy's situation, the storm which she had dreaded so much set it with great force; great rain- drops splashed on her terrified face. The wind roared like a banshee, and the little boat was whirled about like an egg-shell in the swirling, white- capped waves.

Daisy was brave of heart, but in the face of such appalling danger as lay before her —the intense darkness and the fear of drifting into the outlet that widened into the lake beyond —the stoutest heart would have quailed.

With might and main Daisy plied the oars until at last one of them bent like a reed and broke in her frantic grasp. Was it the lightning flashing so luridly red, or the red danger signal of the eight o'clock steamer coming down the river? Daisy asked herself in terror.

Nearer and nearer came the red light, and in the white radiant light that blazed for an instant over the curling waters, Daisy beheld the welcome sight of the old farmhouse on the opposite shore; but shutting it out of view, even in that instantaneous light was something huge and dark, and suddenly her little boat spun round and round. She realized what that meant. It was the steamer —she was in its path, in an instant of time it would be upon her. With a wild cry for help that echoed faintly over the waters, Daisy threw up her hands and fell back senseless in the boat.

And at that instant the steamer struck the skiff with tremendous force.

Leaning over the railing, evidently unmindful of the fury of the storm, stood a young man, gazing abstractedly over the wild dashing waves. A dark smile played about the corners of his mouth, and his restless eyes wore a pleased expression, as though his thoughts were not troubled by the wild warring of the elements.

Suddenly through the terrible roar of the storm he heard a piteous appeal for help, and the voice seemed to die away over the angry muttering waves.

He leaned over the railing breathless with excitement.

The thunder crashed almost incessantly, and there came a blinding flash of lightning. In that one instant he had seen a white lovely face framed in a mass of floating golden hair turned toward him.

One instant more and she would be drawn under the steamer beyond all mortal power of help.

"Great God!" shrieked Harold St. John, hoarsely.

His life might not have been blameless, but the handsome stranger was no coward. He had faced graver perils than most young men. In an instant he had torn off his coat, sprung from the deck —down —down in the horrible darkness into the mad waves.

It was a daring venture; but Harold St. John was an expert swimmer. He caught Daisy just as he struck the water, and in that blinding flash of lightning recognized her.

He did not strike out for the steamer again, but for the opposite shore, and she went on her way, her captain and crew all unmindful of the tragedy that had been averted.

Harold St. John soon struck terra firma with his lovely burden, and as he laid her down under one of the tall beech trees, Daisy regained consciousness.

She struggled to a sitting posture with a piteous cry of terror.

"Is it a dream?" she muttered, "the mad water and the steamer?"

Then her startled glance fell upon the face of the stranger as the glimmering light from the farmhouse window afar off faintly illumined the scene.

"I saw you and sprung from the deck of the steamer and succeeded in saving you," he responded. "You do not recognize me, but I knew you in an instant, even by the uncertain light of the lightning's flash."

"Yes, I do recognize you," said Daisy, impulsively. "You are the gentleman I directed to Briarvale to-day."

"I thank you for taking so much notice of me as to remember me," he said, flushing.

Daisy extended her little, slim, white hand, grateful tears shining on her long lashes.

"You have saved my life," she said. "How am I ever to find words to thank you? And you have risked your life for me. I can never forget that."

"I would have risked a hundred lives, if I had had them, for your sake," he said earnestly.

He was just about to add "Miss Ruthven," but he checked himself just in time.

She must not guess that he knew her to be the heiress, worth three millions of money, he told himself with a smile.

"I was just about to take you to that house yonder, whose light I see shining through the trees."

"Thank you; I will go by myself," replied Daisy, nervously, thinking what a fright it would give her father to behold a stranger bringing her home at that hour, and in such a plight.

He clasped the little hand Daisy had extended to him, murmuring softly: "Am I never to have the pleasure of seeing you again?" and the winning, musical voice of this noble, handsome hero, who had rescued her at the peril of his own life, sent a thrill of pleasure through pretty Daisy's romantic, foolish, little heart.

"Would you really care to see me again?" stammered simple little Daisy, in girlish confusion, raising her blue eyes timidly to his face, then dropping them quickly and shyly.

"More than I can tell you," he answered, earnestly.

"You would be very welcome to come to the house," she said.

He drew back with a strange pallor on his handsome face.

"It would be so much more romantic, if you would permit me to join you in your rambles, boating, or horseback riding. I am really ashamed to admit this to you, but it is quite the case. I do not like to be lionized for aiding you. On the contrary, I would be so happy if you would not mention our adventure to any one——"

"Of course I won't mention it, if you really wish it so," said Daisy, blushing and thoughtlessly —oh, so thoughtlessly —giving that fatal promise.

Again he thanked her warmly for her kindness, and begged to know when he should see her again, as he would be so anxious to know that she had not suffered any severe shock from the fright, or exposure to the water.

And Daisy answered, little dreaming of appointing a trysting- place.

"My favorite nook is in the peach orchard, near the stone wall, just down at the end of the lane."

"What? so far away from Briar Hall?" he was about to ejaculate, but again he checked himself.

No doubt this capricious, pretty little heiress to three millions was on her way to visit some of the rustic beauties hereabouts, he told himself.

"Good bye, and thank you again for saving my life," she said gratefully.

Just then the door of the old farmhouse opened, and in another instant Daisy was lost to sight in the darkness.

For an hour Harold St. John stood quite motionless under the trees where she had left him. His better nature urged him to fly from the place, and never see that sweet face again.

"I will risk all by staying a little longer," he told himself, with reckless desperation. "I, who have always laughed at the notion of love, am in love at last. I will win her, if I can. When I leave here, she will go with me as my bride. Yes, she must be mine!"

CHAPTER III.

A Handsome Young Lover.

Daisy reached the house and crept up to her own room unnoticed.

When night had come on and the storm had set in, and Daisy had not returned, the farmer had grown quite uneasy about his favorite child.

Both Hetty and Olive laughed aloud at his fears.

"It's all nonsense to be alarmed over Daisy," both the girls declared. "No doubt she was at one of the neighbor's houses when the storm came on and they persuaded her to stay overnight."

Pains in Chest
The Danger Signal

THAT TELLS OF APPROACHING PNEUMONIA OR SERIOUS LUNG TROUBLE — PREVENT FURTHER DEVELOPMENTS BY USING

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

When it hurts to cough, when coughing or a long breath causes pain or a feeling of soreness in the chest, when the linings of the throat and bronchial tubes feel raw and sore, when you feel that the cold which you expected to wear away is getting the better of you, turn to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and you will get prompt relief and cure.

Mr. John Clark, coachman, Port Hope, Ont., writes:—"Being exposed to all sorts of weather, I frequently catch cold. Last winter I was so bad with a cold I could not speak above a whisper, and had great pains in the chest. At last I feared it would develop into consumption if I did not succeed in getting proper treatment.

"A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and I began to improve before I had taken half a bottle. One bottle cured my cold, which, I believe, would have proven very serious if I had not used this medicine."

As a prompt cure for croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma and all throat and lung affections, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is wonderfully effective. It is not a mere cough mixture, but a thorough and far-reaching medicine, which acts on the whole system, and drives out disease; 25 cents a bottle, family size (three times as much) 60 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto. 9

SPEECH ON THAT MEASURE BY MR. W. B. NORTHRUP, M.P., IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

So, admitting for the purpose of argument—which I do not admit as matter of fact—that the hon. gentleman's argument is correct, he has simply proved himself out of court, because he begins in the first page of his report to prove that Canada means Canada as it exists from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and he has proved that it means only the seven provinces, the territories not being included. So, when we seek to find against what part the representation of Ontario should be calculated, we find that it is only against seven provinces and not against the Dominion of Canada, including the territories. What the practical effect of that would be I am not prepared to say. I do not know that it is material, for, in dealing with the law it is a question of right and wrong. However, I have had two calculations made showing the effect under each contention. Not being a mathematician, I cannot, I cannot say whether they are right. But one calculation made by a competent person shows that, if the territories were excluded and Ontario were calculated against seven provinces, we should not have any reduction. The other made by a department in the city shows that, by a paltry decimal of twelve, Ontario would lose six seats, if the territories were brought into the calculation. While I believe the first figures to be correct, I am not going to commit myself to them. It is a question of the construction of the statute, and, if it does not affect us to-day, it might affect us at some other time. We are entitled to a fair rendering of the statutes, and we are entitled to know whether the Minister bases his argument on the ground that seven provinces constitute the whole of Canada before we are called upon to accept a calculation based upon such data.

I noticed also, that on page 6 of the hon. gentleman's report, it appears that the provinces came in with equal rights as compared with the others. Let us see how that would work out with regard to the other provinces. I have spoken of the fact that it is clear that British Columbia has greater rights than Prince Edward Island. See how section 51 would work out from the standpoint of the old provinces in the light of the hon. gentleman's contention. Section 51 provides what is to be done on the completion of the census—that Quebec shall have a fixed number of sixty-five representatives, and we understand how the other provinces have proportionate representation. If the contention of the hon. gentleman is right, when we come to read section 51, it applies not only to the four provinces, but to the seven.

The Minister of Justice. Not, not to seven provinces, but to Canada.

Mr. Northrup. And the hon. Minister has shown by the argument I have referred to it means the seven provinces. I am taking the hon. gentleman's report, and not at present giving my own views. He has proved to his own satisfaction that Canada consists of the seven provinces. How then would you work out this 51st clause? If he wishes to change his opinion and make the section mean the whole of Canada, how would he work out the 51st clause according to his contention? Whatever portions compose Canada this clause provides for equal treatment. But what would you do when you come to British Columbia? Can you apply section 51 to that province? In view of the fact that its representation is never to be decreased below six members, how is it possible to apply this section to that province? Then, how about the territories, if, as the hon. Minister contends, Canada consists of the whole country from ocean to ocean? It is settled law that we have the power under the Imperial statutes, to give the territories as large representations as we like. We can give them ten or fifty, or an hundred members, as we please. So section 51 clearly does not apply to the territories. According to the hon. gentleman, though, section 51 applies to the whole of Canada. It does not apply to the North West Territories, the largest division of Canada, or to British Columbia, which is the largest province. I do not pretend to be very familiar with the geographical facts, but, if you subtract from the whole area of Canada the area of the North West Territories and British Columbia, I am inclined to think that you will find that the greater part of Canadian territory is outside the operation of section 51; and we know that the time is not far distant when the North West Territories and British Columbia will be, in population, the greatest part of the Dominion. So, the hon. gentleman has led himself into a difficulty there.

I only wished to call attention to a few points in the report of the Minister of Justice to argue that, when a gentleman of his attainments at the bar, and with his talents—talents which we all admire—looking into this matter and preparing a state paper, commits the inaccuracies I have pointed out, and comes to such conclusions as I have shown, the ordinary humble member of this House, such as myself and those who sit about me, may well say that this question is not so beyond doubt that we should be justified in proposing legislation until the best opinions that we can obtain have been obtained.

A Ghostly Game of Chess.

"The International Hall of the Cafe Monico is a truly palatial chamber, ever so many feet broad by ever so many more feet long. On the evenings of Friday and Saturday of last week," says London "Outlook," "it was divided by a barrier into two unequal parts. In the smaller sat, each at his board, the British chess-players competing against the American chess-players—who were not there. Through the larger roamed a selection of the chess public. . . . Inside the barrier, and next it, sat Mr. James Mason at a chess-board, facing us. We seem to have known Mr. Mason as a fine player these—well, say twenty years. On this occasion he is opposing Mr. J. H. Barry of America—who is not here; Mr. Barry is sitting in a room in Brooklyn three thousand miles away, under the eyes of American spectators. It is easy to say that the two men are connected by electric telegraph; but it is not wise to dispose of the mystery and romance of space in so rude a way. . . . But Mr. Mason, in this grand International Hall, seated opposite nothing better than a man with a book of telegraph forms who waits unconcernedly for the move, can he play thus dumbly and in absence against Mr. Barry in Brooklyn and think it chess? It is a very ghostly business, and we wonder Mr. Mason can get through with it at all. But he does. He is as solemn, as rapt in thought, as oblivious of all but the game as if Mr. Barry were opposite to him in the flesh, and not opposed to him only by electric telegraph. Clearly to him the play is everything, whether the opponent's move comes to him by actual touch, by telegraph, or by psychic suggestion. But for our part we cannot throw off a dread of the uncanny nature of the business. We feel inclined to look about for some manifestation of Mr. American Barry's spirit. What better evidence of it could we have than the arrangement of these wooden pieces on that wooden board? There is Mr. Barry—most effectually Mr. Barry, for he is causing Mr. Mason to think, and think, and think; to purse his lips in the old familiar way, to fall into immovable silences, wherein you would think he was revolving schemes of a new order of creation or puzzling out the mystery of man's origin and destiny; and Mr. Mason is doing the like to him in far Brooklyn. A strange and fascinating pursuit is chess, strange and unprofitable. Not politics, nor fame, nor wealth, nor love can so engross a man. These objects are usually compassed by flashes of passion, insight, and daring; but this slow, prolonged struggle of brain against brain, through the medium of pieces of fantastically carved wood, is pure devotion to an abstraction. The man who wins, who so hems in the piece of wood called a king that he may not move, gains nothing, proves nothing, establishes nothing but—"checkmate." Yet when he accomplishes that he tastes of a satisfaction deeper and more permanent than is accorded to statesman or lover, merchant or gambler. To accomplish it he deliberately, and for very love of the doing of it, undertakes an enormous mental effort, a thing which mankind in general shuns as if it were Satan himself. Truly a most mystical business this chess. In Paradise you will find politicians reading poetry, and poets studying morals; merchants will be cultivating the arts, and critics weeping on other people's necks; but the chess-players will be playing chess.

Dispensing With Early Rising.

Some genius has, according to his own advertisement, invented an apparatus to dispense with getting up so early in winter time to set the kettle boiling. As far as we understand it, you fix the new invention on your clock, and at the hour required it starts a fire under a kettle of water. As soon as the water boils a bell rings, and you wake up. This is not the sort of thing that takes the cake; it simply grabs it.

We once saw a remarkable invention of this nature in Sheffield. It consisted of a small, but powerfully built bedstead which had an ingenious clockwork arrangement attached, as you would expect, to the ticking of the mattress. In the morning a phonograph got up from under the bed, walked round to your side, and announced it was seven o'clock. After giving you two minutes to reply, one of the hands of the clock reached up and pulled your ear playfully. These were just preliminaries so to speak. If you didn't move then, the patent bed began business. It got up on its hind legs and ran downstairs with you inside it till it got to the garden, where you were shot into a modest little heap under the pump. By a clever arrangement of the process of suction you were drawn up to the mouth and a refreshing stream of cold water crawled down your back. If this didn't wake you, you had to wait for Gabriel's trumpet.

As a matter of fact, the inventor explained, it did wake most people. But in case you were too sleepy to collect your thoughts into fitting shape, by pressing a little knob in one of the blankets, a second phonograph would grind out a little appropriate profanity to ease your feelings. The invention is patented; and when it is put on the market it will beat all the spring mattresses going, as it does for summer, autumn and winter as well.—"Pick-Me-Up."

An "Infernal" Dinner.

A tiny girl of seven gave a dinner-party the other day, for which twelve covers were laid, and that number of small maidens sat down to dine. It was a real little girls' dinner, and the little hostess herself presided, sitting at the head of the table. She had been very anxious, in looking forward to it, to do everything as it should be done. "Mamma," she asked, "shall we say grace?" "No," said mamma; "it will be a very informal dinner, and I think you need not do that." That meant one ceremony the less to be gone through, and was a relief. But the little lady was anxious to have all her guests understand it. So, as they gathered about the table, she explained: "Mamma says that this is such an infernal dinner that we need not have grace to-day!"

Men's Spring Suits

The Newest of all.

The more exactingand particular a man may be about exclusiveness in fabrics and patterns, even if he insists on all the advantages he expects from a tailor, then the more these new suits, which we are showing for the first time, will appeal to him.

He will find in them all the style and satisfaction he would in garments that the best tailors could build to his measure, though they cost a little more than half the tailor's price and the same as he would pay elsewhere for ready-made clothes, that would not prove as satisfactory.

Throughout these splendid garments the tailoring will be found to be faultless; it is of the highest character known and if anything a little more exacting and thorough than is found on the tailor's best productions. And of more importance than all, they possess that well-bred air the tailors have a knack of giving to the clothes they turn out.

Needless to say, the styles as they are found here are correct, that is expected, or that a perfect fit is assured in every case—we are more particular about that than you could be.

Fine suits—the new single and double-breasted styles—of fine Blue and Black Cheviots and Serges, Black insheared Worsteds, Fancy Imported Cassimeres in the latest colorings and overplaid effects. Fancies that are exclusive with us and the tailors .... $6.50, $7.50, $10.00, $12.00, $13.50, $15.00.

FIRE BRIGADE BUSY

IN THE LAST DAY OR TWO—MANY ALARMS BUT LOSSES LIGHT.

On Saturday the fire brigade responded to three calls, at two of which their services were not required, but the third gave them some work. It was a barn belonging to Mr. Henry Phillips, situated in rear of his residence on Grove street. When the alarm was sounded the flames had gained considerable headway and the building, being of frame, burned rapidly to the ground. Other buildings near by were saved. The fire is thought to have been caused by children playing with matches.

SUNDAY MORNING BLAZE.

At 9 o'clock on Sunday morning the brigade were called out to extinguish a blaze which had broken out in a small barn in rear of Judge Lazier's property, at the corner of Victoria avenue and Albert street. The building and a portion of the fence was burned. The premises are unoccupied, and tramps are supposed to have caused the fire. The loss is covered by insurance.

THE CHEESE BOARD

ORGANIZED ON SATURDAY, AND ELECTED OFFICERS FOR ENSUING YEAR.

On Saturday afternoon the first meeting of the Belleville Cheese Board for the season was held and there was a good attendance of presidents of factories. The election of officers for the year resulted as follows:

President—Mr. W. C. Farley.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mr. Jas. Anderson.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. Thos. Ketcheson.
Secy-Treas.—Mr. Wm. Clazie.
Auditors—Messrs. T. Holgate and J. S. Dench.

There were boarded 325 boxes of April make of cheese, the greater portion of which were sold on the Board at 12 1-16c.

GREATLY ALARMED

By a Persistent Cough, but Permanently Cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. H. P. Burbage, a student at law in Greenville, S. C., had been troubled for four or five years with a continuous cough which he says, "greatly alarmed me, causing me to fear that I was in the first stage of consumption." Mr. Burbage, having seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised, concluded to try it. Now read what he says of it: "I soon felt a remarkable change and after using two bottles of the twenty-five cent size, was permanently cured." Sold by all Druggists.

Bicycle vs. Horse.

A bicycle can be bought for at least one-fifth the cost of a horse and his appurtenances, harness, buggy, etc. Its cost of maintenance amount to nothing in comparison with the trouble and expense of the equine; in fact, the expense of owning a horse compels most of us to do without one. Yet the cost of a modern bicycle places a wheel within reach of nearly everyone who wants one. And the wheel to-day is so solidly built and simply constructed that it lasts for years and gives satisfactory service. No doubt these are reasons why there are to-day in use more bicycles than ever, though we hear less about the bicycle than when it was comparatively a rare novelty.

Wrightley Got Off

Jacob Wrightley, who was on trial on Saturday before Judge Lazier on the charge of stealing a purse from one John Storring, was discharged, as the evidence was very conflicting. The accused was defended by Mr. Northrup, K.C., whilst Mr. Anderson represented the Crown.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE ASSESSMENT ACT

SOME OF THE CHIEF RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE ASSESSMENT COMMISSIONER.

In view of the discussion which will take place in the Legislative Assembly within the next few days, relative to the amendment of the Assessment Act, it will be of interest to consider the chief recommendations made by the Assessment Commission upon which the acts is based:

1. Assessment of Land.

That real property be assessed at its actual value, including mineral lands and the real property of all corporations.

That the right of use by any person of highways or other public places, in addition to the structures thereon, be assessed at actual value.

2. Personal Property.

That the assessment and taxation of personal property other than income be abolished in all municipalities and that in lieu of this the following method of taxation be adopted in cities, towns, villages and police villages:

(a) Business Tax.

(In lieu of tax on personal property and income divided from business.)

Where a person is engaged in a trade, manufacture, financial or commercial business, tax the person by reference to the rental value of the premises occupied for the purpose of his business.

(b) Calling Tax.

(In lieu of tax on personal property and income derived from callings up to $4,000.)

In the case of persons having or practicing or carrying on any office or profession, tax the person by reference to the rental value of the premises occupied for the purpose of his business or occupations.

Where the income of such person is more than $4,000 tax him first by reference to the rental value of the premises occupied, and tax him directly upon any income in excess of $4,000, derived from his profession or

(c) House Tax.

A supplementary tax is imposed on all owners and occupiers of houses (meaning by that term buildings used as dwelling places), by assessing them for the rental value for the house, subject to exemptions, graded according to the population of the municipality. The following are the exemptions to be allowed in fixing the house tax:

Where the population is 4,000 or less the assessed value of all houses up to $1,000.

Where the population is more than 4,000, but not more than 10,000 the assessed value of all houses up to $1,000.

Where the population is more than 10,000, but not more than 20,000, the assessed value of all houses up to $2,000.

Where the population is more than 20,000, but not more than 75,000, the assessed value of all houses up to $2,500.

Where the population is more than 75,000 the assessed value of all houses up to $3,500.

3. Income Tax.

In the case of persons paying the business or calling tax and having income derived from other sources, tax them, directly upon such income, without exemption. In the case of all other persons, tax them directly upon income, subject to an exemption of $1,000.

4. Annual Value and Rate of Taxation.

For the purpose of these special taxes, the annual value is to be a sum equal to 7 per cent. of assessed value of the land occupied or used and the rate payable for the business and calling tax is to be 7 1-2 per cent. thereon. This rate may be increased to 10 per cent. by by-law of the municipality.

The rate for income tax is fixed at five mills and this may be increased to 7 mills by by-law of the municipality.

The special taxes referred to including income tax are not to be a lien upon land.

5. Exemption of Machinery.

One outcome of the abolition of the tax on personal property is a recommendation to exempt machinery. This was necessary to preserve equality as between merchants and manufacturers.

6. Provincial Board.

That a provincial board be appointed for the assessment of the lands of railway companies, incomes of express companies and the special franchises (which is the term applied to the right of use of highways or other public places) of other persons, together with the land used in connection with the special franchises.

7 Assessment of Railways.

The land of steam railways is at present assessed at the same value as other land in the neighborhood. The report recommends that these assessments be made by the provincial board and raised gradually for ten years, when the actual value of land and improvements is to be the assessed value.

If our City Councillors or Board of Trade have any suggestions to make for the improvement of the existing assessment laws, now is the time to get them in. The general measure should be made as perfect as possible, so as to avoid the constant tinkering which has been going on for years past. And the co-operation of all whose experience qualifies them to give advice is obviously indicated.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN DIFFERENT BELLEVILLE PLACES OF WORSHIP.

John Street.

At the evening service at this church, the Pastor, Rev. A. H. Drumm preached a thoughtful sermon on the subject of "Christ Stilling the Tempest," the text being taken from St. Mark, 4th chapter and 34th verse.

During the service Mr. J. P. Pratt sang a solo which was much appreciated.

St. Thomas'.

The Rector, Rev. G. R. Beamish officiated and preached at both services to good congregations. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Chambers rendered very acceptably a duet, entitled "Sun of My Soul."

Christ Church.

Rev. Prof. Howard, of Montreal, who will occupy the pulpit of Christ church during Rev. W. B. Heeney's absence of a few months, yesterday preached to good congregations.

Emmanuel R. E. Church.

Holy Communion was celebrated at the above church yesterday morning. The Rector, Rev. Mr. Gilliland, preached a thoughtful sermon on the duties of professing Christians, taking as his text part of I. Cor., 9, 22:

"That I might by all means save some."

God gave men power to find forgiveness for themselves and aid others to do the same, but God meant men to do something more than sit down and wait for grace to come to them, they must work and strive for it. Jesus raised Lazarus from the dead, but he told others to roll the stone away. He also performed the miracle of the loaves and fishes, but he let others feed the multitude. Even so to-day, there is grace for all, but it will only come to those who do the Master's work.

Bridge St. Church.

Large congregations were present at both services yesterday. At the close of the morning service sacrament was administered which was partaken of by a large number of members of the church. The Pastor, Rev. Dr. Crothers, preached, his subject being "The Importance of a Christian Experience." At both services Miss Wheler sang solos in connection with the anthems rendered.

Holloway Street.

At Holloway St. yesterday morning a number of the pupils of the Deaf and Dumb Institution were in attendance at the service and some of them received the sacrament, which was administered at the close of the service. An address in reference to the communion was given by the Pastor, Rev. J. R. Real, which was interpreted to the children by Mr. Stewart. During the service the pupils signed some hymns.

Bethel Hall.

Notwithstanding the rain, a goodly number turned out last night to Mr. Hunter's closing service of special meetings at Bethel Hall. On Sunday next he begins work at Trenton, but will be here on Tuesday and Friday nights of this week.

ALL DRUGGISTS WARRANT EVERY BOTTLE.

Hunting for Hunt

The police on Saturday night answered two calls to "Shorty" Hunt's residence, it being reported that he was abusing his wife. The officer could find no trace of George when he called. There is a commitment of one year in the Central Prison for Hunt, who is anxious to avoid the police.

A FARMER CURED OF RHEUMATISM.

"A man living on a farm near here came in a short time ago completely doubled up with rheumatism. I handed him a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and told him to use it freely and if not satisfied after using it he need not pay a cent for it," says C. P. Rayder, of Pattens Mills, N. Y. "A few days later he walked into the store as straight as a string and handed me a dollar saying, 'give me another bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I want it in the house all the time, for it cured me.'" For sale by all druggists.

FORMER BELLEVILLIAN'S NARROW ESCAPE

CAUGHT IN FOREST FIRE AND ALMOST CRUSHED BY FALLING TREE.

A despatch from Kingston gives particulars of a narrow escape from a horrible death which a former resident of this city had on Thursday last. The gentleman in question is Mr. William C. Nash, son of Dr. Nash, who will be well remembered by many in Belleville. It seems that for some time past disastrous forest fires have been raging in the district north of Sharbot Lake. Mr. Nash was with a party of five commercial travellers, Messrs. Henry Cunningham, W. Wishart, D. J. Dick and J. Banning, who passed through the fiery ordeal. At one time they feared they would have to abandon their horses, rigs, trunks, etc., and seek safety wherever it could be found, but by herculean efforts they managed to save all their effects. They left Plevna Thursday morning to drive to Lavant to catch a southbound train. Fire was not in sight then, but away to the northwest they saw a cloud of smoke. It was thought that this came from an underbrush fire on some farm. Half way between Ompah and Lavant they ran into the fire path. Before they could turn their horses the fire had surrounded them. The flames rushed onward with a mighty roar, frightening the horses, which reared and plunged, endangering the lives of their drivers. Trees blazed on all sides, and falling branches threatened their lives. Mr. Nash, representing N. Skinner & Company, came within a few feet of instant death. He was the last in line and had just passed a large burning pine when it toppled over. The belated travellers found their passage barred by a large half-burned tree, and all hands had to turn to with knives and cut away the branches in order to make a passage. They drove into a field and remained standing until the fire had passed. They suffered terribly from smoke and heat.

$10.00 VERSUS $20.00.

If you are in the habit of paying $20 for your suits, you may possibly doubt the statement of the Oak Hall that they can match your latest with one of Sanford's make at $10. We do claim to be able to do this, however, and are ready for a comparison whenever you are. If you are in for saving money, the Oak Hall is a good place to begin.

Bush Fires Raging

Bush fires have been raging for some days past in the northern portion of the County, and considerable damage has been sustained. On Friday afternoon last the fire reached Mr. Edward Bartlett's place, in the 8th concession of Monteagle township, destroying his barn and some outbuildings, with their contents. It was only after a hard fight against the flames that the residence was saved. The burned buildings were insured in the Waterloo for $150.

SPRING AND SUMMER UNDERWEAR.

To be convinced that Quick & Robertson are selling underwear cheap take a look at the north window and see what is being offered at 25c each. Being in a position to handle large quantities we took advantage of a mill offering and purchased at a ridiculously low figure, something over 300 dozens. Our advice is to buy early and secure best choice.

Patent Granted

Louis Bagger & Co., Patent Attorneys, Washington, D.C., report that recently Mr. Henry S. Burrell, a resident of this place, obtained a valuable patent for improvements in valves for rock drills. A printed copy of this patent will be furnished free to any reader of this paper on application to the above-named attorneys. Mention this paper in writing.

CRAMPS ARE LIKE BURGLARS.

They come unexpected and when least welcome. Be armed with a one-minute cure in a bottle of Nerviline, which relieves cramps and stomach pains in five minutes. In colic, summer complaint, diarrhoea, indigestion and nausea, Nerviline is a remedy of remarkable potency, and acts promptly and satisfactory at all times. The composition of Polson's Nerviline expresses the highest medical progress of the age, which accounts for its superior merit. Price 25 cents.

THEY LAY IN MAY

In most localities Moth lay their eggs in May, and it is important that you should use some sort of a moth destroyer in your furs and woollens before that time. These articles should be dusted and sunned and then packed away with Mothaline, Camphor Gum or something of that character. The cost is so small it is folly to take any risk. We have all these moth destroyers and a variety of other insecticides.

A B.C. SENSATION.

Two Legislature Members Involved—Mr. Dunsmuir and Mr. Wells Tell Story of Attempted Corruption.

Victoria, B. C., May 4.—British Columbia has a political sensation, as a result of disclosures made Saturday at the Legislative enquiry being held into the subsidy for building the Columbia & Western Railway, which had not been paid. The act provided that land be awarded in alternate blocks, continuous or as close as possible to the line. Later, arrangements were made to grant to the company two blocks in Southeast Kootenay, hundreds of miles from the road, and which are alleged to be rich in coal and oil. Crown grants were issued but not delivered.

Two Members Involved.

Ex-Premier Dunsmuir gave evidence Saturday before the enquiry, which was called to enquire into why these blocks should have been selected, that he had cancelled the grants because he learned that everything was not right. The Order-in-Council granting these two blocks had been made in his absence. He made an order approving the grant in September, being told that the province would save 300,000 acres by the arrangement.

Mr. Wells, Commissioner of Lands and Works, went to Montreal with the grants to the Canadian Pacific Railway, but returned with them. The witness then learned that there was something wrong in connection with the deal and he cancelled the grants. He did this as a result of a certain thing—he would not say what—that Mr. Wells had told him. He was told that Mr. Wells had been offered 30,000 acres of the lands if he would hand over the grants to the Canadian Pacific Railway. He, as Premier, cancelled the grants, as he did not want any crooked business while he was doing it.

Mr. Wells said the ex-Premier's statement was substantially correct. He had been told in Montreal that a company was being formed in Montreal to take over the blocks of land, and two members of the Legislature were to be allotted one each of the twenty shares.

Press Demands Royal Commission.

In the course of a lengthy editorial, a local paper says: "Nothing less than the appointment of a Royal Commission will be satisfactory to the electorate or to the Legislature. The reputations of some of the members are at stake. Aspersions have been cast upon their character, which can only be removed by the light of a full and complete investigation. It has been charged that certain of the members were to personally profit by the transfer of the lands in question to the C.P.R. We take it that the House will, with one voice, insist on that charge being proven or refuted."

Priest Charged With Murder.

Lorain, O., May 4.—Rev. Ferdinand Walzer, well known Catholic priest, is in jail charged with the murder of Miss Agatha Reichlin. The prisoner was the guest of a brother priest, Rev. Charles Reichlin. The host was called away. When he returned his sister was dead. Her head had been beaten to a pulp with a stone. Walzer was at a neighboring Catholic institution. Bloodhounds went from the scene of the crime direct to the room of the priest and he was arrested. He claims his innocence.

Arm Was Pulled Off.

Kingston, May 4.—Saturday morning while working at a revolving drill in the locomotive works, Fred Matthews, a machinist, got his arm in the shaft, and it was completely pulled from the socket before help arrived. He is in a critical condition.

Safe Blowers Are Industrious.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 4.—Safe blowers robbed the postoffice at Middleville Saturday night, securing $1,000 in stamps and $60 in currency. There is no clue.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 4.—The safe of the Merchants' State Bank of Freeman, South Dakota, was looted by robbers last night. They secured about $3,000.

Noah and Shem, taking their first walk from the stranded ark, came upon a beautiful little pool on Mount Ararat, in which some gorgeous trout were disporting themselves.

A Phenomenon of Sleep.

He had come on her dozing in a hammock, and when she woke up she accused him of stealing a kiss. "Well," he said, "I will admit that the temptation was too strong to be resisted. I did steal one little kiss." "One!" she exclaimed, indignantly; "I counted eight before I woke up."—"Household Words."

There Was One.

"Is there a man in all this audience," fiercely exclaimed a female lecturer, "that has ever done anything to lighten the burden resting on his wife's shoulders? What do you know of woman's work?"

"Is there a man here," she continued, folding her arms and looking over her audience with superb scorn, "that has ever got up in the morning, leaving his tired, worn-out wife to enjoy her slumbers, gone quietly downstairs, made the fire, cooked his own breakfast, sewed the missing buttons on the children's clothes, darned the family stockings, scoured the pots and kettles, cleaned and filled the lamps, swept the kitchen, and done all this, if necessary, day after day, uncomplainingly? If there is such a man in this audience, let him rise up! I should like to see him!"

And in the rear of the hall a mild-looking man in spectacles, in obedience to the summons, timidly arose. He was the husband of the eloquent speaker. It was the first time he had ever had a chance to assert himself.

HON. J. R. STRATTON IN SELF-DEFENCE

Accused Minister Denies Giving $3,000 to Frank Sullivan as a Bribe to Mr. Gamey.

TELLS OF GAMEY'S VISITS.

Witness Reviews the Conversations Relative to Patronage and the Withdrawal of the Manitoulin Protest—Was Not Surprised When Government Clerk Frank Sullivan Warned Him That Gamey Was Not to Be Relied Upon to Support the Government—Blake's Cross-Examination.

Toronto, May 5.—At the opening of the forth week of the Royal Commission yesterday morning Mr. Johnston asked that John Galbraith and John Hillier be called. They are witnesses who have several times been absent when wanted, and as they were again absent yesterday morning the Chancellor directed that warrants be issued to compel their attendance.

A Minister Testifies.

The first witness of the morning was Rev. John Francis Guigon, Minister of the Mennonite Brethren at Long Bay, Manitoulin. He said that after The Globe interview appeared on January 29th, he saw Gamey at his home, and he said he would only support Government in such measures as were for the good of the constituency; that he was as good a Conservative as ever, and that Globe interview looked stronger in print than he intended. To Mr. Ritchie he said Gamey had denounced Government policy very vigorously, and that he made the strange remark after Conservative meeting at Gore Bay that "There will be something move later on."

To Shake the Dry Bones.

Mr. Johnston put in a letter written by Mr. Gamey, dated Feb. 16, to the editor of The Manitoulin Expositor, after the publication of The Globe interview, telling him that he had not gone over to the Liberals as completely as possible, that neither party properly represented the people, and that there would be a big shaking up of the dry bones in the near future.

Mr. W. J. Boland, barrister, testified to his many business transactions with Mr. Stratton, which called them into close relationship. He had a business interview with Mr. Stratton on the 10th Sept., beginning a little after 11 that morning, and that he had not lost sight of Mr. Stratton until after 1 o'clock.

To Mr. Ritchie he said the $3,000 cheque paid by the Ontario Bank on Sept. 9 was on a bond transaction of the Riviere Du Loup Pulp Co. of which Mr. Stratton was president and he a director, and that it was paid to the Dominion Permanent Loan Co.

Where Did the Money Come From.

"Can you enlighten us on the question that is going round? Where did the money come from?" suggested Mr. Ritchie.

"I know nothing whatever about it," said Mr. Boland. He added that he knew nothing about a campaign fund being got together before the election.

MR. STRATTON'S EVIDENCE.

Though Last Election Was Close He Did Not Regard It as a Crisis.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, sworn, testified, that, though the last election was closely contested, he did not regard it as a crisis. In the previous election the members were 46 Liberals, 45 Conservatives, 2 not heard from, and 1 election not held. But the Government was sustained. Further, for three months after the last election the Premier and Attorney-General were in England, and other Ministers were away at intervals. The matter of protests was left in his hands. Some protests were withdrawn, but he had nothing whatever to do with the Manitoulin protest. After the third meeting between the parties, early in June, he determined to have nothing more to do with the protests, and left the matter in the hands of Mr. Grant, acting for the Liberal Association. The first he knew of the Manitoulin protest was from the papers, the end of June or beginning of July. He knew nothing about the Manitoulin protest until he saw that it was transferred to Toronto, which meant it was settled. This was in October. During all this time he had no consultation with Mr. Grant about it. He never employed Jones or the Sullivans, or anyone else, to approach Gamey. He never employed those or any others to approach Gamey in any manner.

His Knowledge of Mr. Gamey.

He had heard rumors that Mr. Gamey was going to support the Government prior to the 9th Sept., when the member for Manitoulin came to see him. That was absolutely all the knowledge he had of Gamey then. He did not know on or prior to that date that Gamey was coming to see him. Of all the patronage referred to, not one appointment recommended by Mr. Gamey was made by him, and only two were made otherwise. He said he met Capt. Sullivan once at a hotel table in the "Soo." It was casual, and he had not met him since. He met Frank Sullivan in the same casual way. He knew nothing about Frank Sullivan's relations about the North Shore. The first he heard of Gamey was when Frank Sullivan introduced him on Tuesday, Sept. 9, a few minutes after 10 o'clock.

The Gamey Interview.

Neither was ever there before. Sullivan came first and said Gamey wanted to see him. Sullivan then introduced Gamey. They spoke a few minutes in a general way about Manitoulin, the crops, the railway, the condition of the people, etc. Gamey said the policy of the Government was approved by the people, with the exception that the administration of some of the officials was bad. Gamey spoke about the Fletcher appointment as J. P., and was referred by him to the Attorney-General. Gamey also said he would best serve his constituents by supporting the Government, and that his contest was conducted so as to enable him to do so. In reply to a question, Gamey said he had carefully considered the question, was sure the people would back him. Gamey complained of the administration of the mining law, but approved of the law as a whole. Gamey was in the office perhaps half an hour.

Gamey asked about the protest, and he replied the Government had nothing to do with that, and referred Mr. Gamey to Aylesworth and Mr. Grant, who had charge of the protests. Mr. Gamey asked about patronage, and he replied that if Gamey supported the Government he would get the same consideration as any other Government supporter. Afterwards he spoke to Mr. Aylesworth about the protest, and Mr. Aylesworth suggested it would be a good idea to get Gamey to write a letter of his intentions to support the Government.

Mr. Stratton then explained his connection with the Sapphire Corundum Company, about which he had the interview with Mr. Boland on September 10th, and why he resigned as director. Mr. Boland came into his office shortly after 11 o'clock.

Letter Not His Own Idea.

While Mr. Boland was there Mr. Aylesworth's letter was dictated, as suggested by Mr. Aylesworth, and the substance was the pith of what Gamey said the day before. Up to that time he had no knowledge of the Manitoulin protest or the evidence about it. The letter was not his own idea, and was not addressed to anyone. Mr. Boland was in the office from about 11 until 12.25, when he (Stratton) drove to Osgoode Hall to see Mr. Aylesworth, and when the court was over at 1 o'clock gave him the letter.

On September 10th Gamey was not in his office or room. Neither was Sullivan. The next day he saw the report of the Conservative caucus, and that Gamey was present supporting Mr. Whitney. He did not know what took place in Mr. Aylesworth's office until October 23. He knew before breakfast that Gamey was at this caucus, and was surprised.

He did not rely on Gamey's support then or at any time. "I never had any confidence in him," said Mr. Stratton, emphatically. On the morning of September 11th, he discussed the Nova Scotia Eastern Railway with Mr. Boland. About $6,000,000 was involved in the project. Nearly all his colleagues, in fact all, in the railway are Conservatives. They left the office about 10 o'clock, and walked down to the Trusts Company office. Neither Gamey nor Sullivan was in his office together or alone prior to the 9th September and neither was in his office on September 11th, never twice consecutively in September, never twice at all in September. Gamey never saw him again until October 23rd. There was nothing to see him about. He then gave all the details of his movements up to half-past 2, when he closed his office.

DENIES PAYING MONEY.

Question is Put Straight and Denied in the Same Way.

Q.—Now, just let me put the matter perfectly straight, Mr. Stratton, did you upon the 9th, 10th or 11th of September pay Mr. Gamey any money for him? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you pay any other person money for him? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you give Frank Sullivan $3,000 to divide between him and Gamey? A.—No, nor three cents.

Q.—Did you send a man with a package or parcel to the smoking room with instructions as to what should be done? A.—I did not.

Witness, continuing, said neither Frank Sullivan nor D. A. Jones had any authority to act for him in this or any matter, and if they wrote letters with regard to Gamey he knew nothing about it until the matter came up in the House. Gamey's statement that he would get some "consideration" was not true. The only way consideration was used was in the sense of the consideration a Government supporter ordinarily received. There was no reference to a parcel or to the smoking-room. There was no arrangement made with Mr. Gamey that he was to sign a letter to support the Government.

Stratton's Personal Resources.

He said Mr. Gamey's statement that he was to get some appointments to please his friends was a pure invention. He emphatically denied Gamey's statement that he (Gamey) saw the Aylesworth letter first in his (Stratton's) office. The statement with regard to a parcel to the smoking-room Mr. Stratton characterized as "a manufactured statement, absolutely false." Gamey was never in his office except on the 9th, and came then at his own instance. He never made any appointment to meet Gamey.

"As to where the money came from!" said Mr. Johnston. "I suppose that it would be easy for you to obtain $3,000?"

"Yes, or $30,000!" said Mr. Stratton.

"Of your own money?"

"Of my own money."

From that time up to the meeting of the House he never saw Frank Sullivan nor got a letter from him. There were no such relations of intimacy as Sullivan described in his letters.

The court then adjourned for luncheon.

Wanted the Letter Back.

In the afternoon Mr. Stratton said that Mr. Gamey came of his own accord to see him on the morning of October 23rd or 24th, and that was the first occasion after September 9.

Gamey said he wanted to get the letter he signed in Mr. Aylesworth's office on September 10; that he had been persuaded to attend the Conservative caucus on September 10, and that in consequence he wanted to get back that letter, which was addressed to the Premier, and to have it sent later, because it would be awkward to have it then in the hands of the Premier. Mr. Stratton replied that he did not know where the letter was. In the course of conversation he asked a position for his brother in the outside service of Crown Lands, and he referred Mr. Gamey to the Commissioner. Nothing whatever was said about money or patronage. The next time he saw Gamey was after the bye-election on January 13. He did not send for Gamey and did not know he was coming. Mr. Stratton then told what was discussed which was substantially what Dr. Chamberlain had said.

A Peculiar Supporter.

Gamey at this interview urged the appointment of his brother and was again referred to the Commissioner of Crown Lands. Gamey said he was a supporter of the Government, and Mr. Stratton replied that he took a peculiar way of showing it in that he had assisted the Conservatives in North Perth. Mr. Gamey after some conversation about his position, said he thought the best way to put himself right before the public was by a newspaper interview. At Mr. Gamey's request he prepared the interview, and took down in lead pencil the notes which he suggested. On January 28 Mr. Gamey telephoned about the interview, but he was busy, and in reply to Mr. Gamey, said he would be in the office the next afternoon. He dictated to Mr. Yokome The Globe interview, practically as published. It was in longhand, and Mr. Myers afterwards typewrote it. On January 29 Mr. Gamey called and asked if the interview was ready. He gave him the interview and he said it was too strong, and suggested he would take it away to alter it. About half-past 6 Gamey returned with the interview altered. After reading it he returned it to Mr. Gamey, who took it out to give Mr. Hammond.

Denies Giving Parcel of Money.

Q.—Did you see him again that evening? A.—No.

Q.—Was Mr. Frank Sullivan there that evening? A.—Not to my knowledge; I did not see him.

Q.—Did you have any parcel or money or bills of any kind that you gave to Mr. Sullivan on that evening? A.—I did not.

Q.—Or an envelope? A.—No.

Q.—Or Gamey? A.—No.

Q.—Or anybody? A.—None whatever.

Q.—Then so far as that interview was concerned there was no money passed directly or indirectly? A.—Directly or indirectly between Mr. Gamey, Mr. Sullivan or myself.

Q.—When did you next see Mr. Gamey? A.—I saw him in the Legislature.

Q.—That was the only time that you saw him? A.—That was the only time that I saw him.

Sullivan's Warning.

Q.—Did you see Frank Sullivan before you saw Gamey in the Legislature? A.—I saw Frank Sullivan the day before the House opened.

Q.—Did he speak to you? A.—Yes. I was going to the Premier's office, he motioned to me, and I stopped for a moment, and he said, "I don't believe that fellow Gamey is going to support the Government." I said I did not care whether he did or not, I never expected that he would.

Q.—And you passed on? A.—I passed on.

Letter in Premier's Office.

The Premier was out, but he got the letter of Sept. 10 from Gamey to Mr. Ross in the latter's office and had Mr. Ford make a copy of it which he had Mr. Myers mail to Mr. Gamey.

He never heard of any timber or mining deals in connection with D. A. Jones or the Sullivans. He declared "not true" Gamey's statement that they met in the passage between the two rooms and that he told Gamey that he had given Sullivan a certain number of bills making up $1,000. Gamey's statement about the payment of money that date was not true in any shape or manner. He never told Gamey that he would have the patronage of the riding. Statement after statement of Mr. Gamey as to what passed on that interview were characterized by Mr. Stratton as "not true."

Regarding Gamey's letter of December 4, asking a loan of $3,000, he said he never gave him reason for making such a request and never replied to the letter. He knew nothing whatever about the X.Y.Z. letter or the typewritten enclosure of instruction. He had nothing to do with Frank Sullivan's letters directly or indirectly, and did not know they were being written. Gamey never had at any time any agreement with him of any kind. After Gamey's statement in the House he handed in his resignation to the Premier, which was not accepted. Speaking generally, he said there was never any money consideration passing between him and Gamey, and that nothing of a corrupt or improper character ever passed between them.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

Not Relying on Gamey For Support in the House.

Mr. Stratton was under direct examination for two hours and ten minutes. His cross-examination by Mr. Blake began at 2.50, with this question:

Q.—If I did not misunderstand you, Mr. Stratton, you made the statement that after what took place on the 10th Sept., read by you on the 11th (the Conservative meeting report), you were not relying on Mr. Gamey for support? A.—I was not.

Witness, continuing, said he had understood on various occasions that Mr. Gamey was perhaps not altogether to be relied upon politically. He had heard of this during two months before the September interview. He knew he was dealing with a man of whom he was told to be careful.

The Talk of Coalition.

He was questioned at some length about the standing of the parties after the election, but did not think there was any serious crisis, even if there was only a majority of one, for the Legislature did not meet immediately. There might have been some discussion of a coalition by the Ministers, but it was not serious. The matter had been discussed on the street and in the press. He was asked when it was decided to give up the idea of coalition and to "fight." He replied that he supposed the reference was to Mr. Ross' Newmarket speech, but he could not remember the date or whether it was after the Gamey interview in September. He promised to look up the date of the first public announcement of the Government's intention to "fight."

Not Surprised at Sullivan.

He was not surprised when Frank Sullivan said to him, "The fellow Gamey is not going to support the Government"—as he never expected he would. Asked whether he was not surprised that Sullivan, a clerk, would so address him, he said that as they had come to him together on the 9th Sept. he was not. Nor was he alarmed.

Mr. Stratton was closely questioned about what became of his personal letters, and said that as a rule they were filed, although a very few might not. He said he did not keep any personal books of account, beyond his bank and check books.

Mr. Blake asked for their production, and Mr. Stratton said he had no objection whatever to a thorough private inspection, and it was agreed that Mr. Ritchie and Mr. Riddell should make it.

Mr. Stratton Did Not Know.

Mr. Blake then asked about the $18,000 or $19,000 put up for the election protests, and the source of it.

Mr. Stratton said he did not know.

Mr. Blake said it was vital to show whence came the money alleged to have been paid by Mr. Stratton to Mr. Gamey.

Mr. Johnston thought it was broadening the inquiry, and the Chancellor said that Mr. Gamey alleged that the money came from Mr. Stratton on certain specified times. After some discussion, the Chancellor suggested that the question should be put, and then they would rule.

Mr. Blake asked who was treasurer of the election fund from February, 1902, onward.

Mr. Stratton did not know. He supposed elections were not run without funds, but supposed one would have to look to the Liberal Association, but he did not know who was President, Secretary or Treasurer.

The Restricted Commission.

Mr. Johnston said the question opened up the point whether there was a general election fund. The

LACROSSE.

Locals in District No. 12.

The District Committee of the C.L.A. has made the final revision of the junior clubs for this season. Belleville has been placed in District No. 12, which comprises the following clubs; Oshawa, Port Hope, Athletics of Peterboro, T.A.S. of Peterboro, Belleville, Hastings, Campbellford. The district secretary is J. H. Rennick of Port Hope, and the district meeting will be held at that place.

The clubs in District No. 12 should put up some good games. Oshawa and Port Hope, of course, have senior teams entered, which means that their junior teams will not, perhaps, be dangerously strong, but the Peterboro clubs are a husky lot, and, as there is no age limit in the C.L.A. junior series, the two clubs will comprise the town's best players, and Belleville will need to travel fast to keep up with the procession. According to accounts, both Hastings and Campbellford have strong clubs, and will have to be reckoned with before anybody gets the championship.

The Belleville boys should at once begin hard, consistent practice. They are sure of worthy foemen, and if they can strike the gait set by their hockey brethren last winter, intense interest and large gates will be the rule. Get in the game, boys.

All lacrosse players are requested to turn out at 6.15 this evening for practice on the old cricket field.

THE POOR MAN A VICTIM.

The Liberal party, of Free Trade professions, enjoy a largely increased revenue by virtue of the increased duties they have placed on the necessaries of life. That the poor man has been the victim of increased taxation is shown from the following changes made in the Conservative tariff by the present Government:

	Con. Tariff.	Liberal Tariff.
Hats and caps	25 p.c.	30 p.c.
Cutlery, h.o.p.	25 "	30 p.c.
Cotton balls & batting	22 1-2 p.c.	25 "
Cotton, grey and unbleached	22 1-2 p.c.	25 "
Cotton, printed	30 "	35 "
Braids, laces, etc.	25 "	30 "
Sewing thread	32 1-2 pc.	35 "
Damask of linen, doylies, etc.	25 "	30 "
Towels, all kinds	25 "	30 "
Wool fabrics	30 "	35 "
Wool manufactures	32 1-2 pc.	35 "
Shawls	25 "	30 "
Dress Goods	32 1-2 pc.	35 "
Embroideries	30 "	35 "
Handkerchiefs	30 "	35 "
Curtains and shams.	30 "	35 "
Ribbons	25 "	30 "

The poor man in supplying sugar for his table pays a duty of 66 cents per hundred pounds instead of 50 cents under the Conservative tariff; on molasses 1 3-4 cents per gallon instead of 1 1-2 cents; on fruit in packages and jars 2 1-4 cents instead of 2 cents; and for jams and jellies 3 1-4 cents per pound instead of 3 cents. Diamonds, silks, etc., have lower duties imposed on them now than in 1896, all of which will be of comfort to the workman and the farmer. The apostles of Free Trade handed out their policy on all occasions where it would be of least benefit. It is an outrage that the man who earns a moderate wage should find himself called upon to pay increased prices for the very ordinary articles of life.

LOCAL FREE MASONRY 100 YEARS OLD TO-DAY

INTERESTING EXTRACTS FROM MINUTES OF ANCIENT ST. JOHN'S LODGE, KINGSTON.

One hundred years ago to-day, namely, May 5th, 1803, a meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Upper Canada was held at Kingston for the purpose of constituting and installing the officers of Lodge No. 17, to be held at Thurlow. The warrant was first produced when the following brethren were installed in their respective chairs:

Bro. Samuel Sherwood, worshipful master; John Bleecker, senior warden; and Caleb Gilbert, junior warden.

The above facts are gleaned from the minutes of Ancient St. John's Lodge, No. 3, Kingston, and refer to the origin of Moira Lodge, A.F. and A.M., of Belleville. The warrant for No. 17, Thurlow, was granted in the year 1802 (probably reaching what was at that time merely a settlement) in the latter part of the year, and the members waited for the opening of navigation to reach Kingston for the purpose of being installed.

Mr. Bleecker, mentioned above, was a grandfather of Mrs. Burrell, of this city, and Mr. Gilbert was a grandfather of Mr. J. W. Walker.

A Morning Run.

Here's a morning programme that will put life into a sluggish liver, give you a clear eye, a fresh skin, harden your muscles, and make you feel like a new man: Rise at 6 a.m. Take a cold sponge bath. Put on your sweater and take a five-mile wheel in the country or the park. Get your lungs full of fresh air and your ears full of nature's music, and your head full of healthy thoughts—nothing like a wheel for that. Then when you get home have a good rub-down with a coarse towel; make your skin glow. After that you will feel like breakfast. There is no better beginning for the heat of a summer day than that course. Just try it.

Can't Make Up Their Minds

The License Commissioners for West Hastings are apparently having a difficult task in deciding which hotel they will cut off. A number of sessions have been held, the last yesterday afternoon, but nothing was done. Another meeting will be held on Friday afternoon of this week.

HAD LIVED 80 YEARS IN THURLOW TOWNSHIP

MRS. ANNA FARGEY PASSED TO HER REWARD THIS MORNING.

In the death of Mrs. Anna Fargey, relict of the late Mr. James Fargey, which occurred this morning, the Township of Thurlow lost an estimable and aged lady. Mrs. Fargey was a member of a family which is widely known in this section of the country. In the year 1823 the deceased was born in Thurlow, and for 80 years she was a resident of that township. Mrs. Fargey was a member of the Presbyterian Church and was in every sense of the word a devout Christian lady. Her illness was of short duration, as up to Friday last she was able to be about. Some years ago Mr. Fargey died, since which time Mrs. Fargey has resided with her son John. A family of four sons and six daughters are called upon to mourn the loss of a loving mother. The children are: Peter, of West Huntingdon; Wm., of Madoc; Scott and John, of Thurlow; Mrs. W. P. Hudson, of this city; Mrs. Huffman, of Thurlow; Mrs. Spence, of Huntingdon; Mrs. McClughey, of Seattle; Mrs. Elliott, of Tamworth, and Mrs. Doak, of Rawdon.

INFLAMED NOSE AND THROAT

And such diseases of the respiratory organs as bronchitis, weak lungs, cold in the head and nasal catarrh, are treated with marvellous success on strictly scientific principles by Catarrhozone. The medicated vapor of Catarrhozone quickly traverses every air passage possible to be reached by any treatment. All soreness, pain, congestion and inflammation are at once dispelled, and by means of the healing powers of Catarrhozone the vitiated tissues are quickly restored. Where Catarrhozone is used colds last only ten minutes, coughs half an hour, and catarrh, consumption, asthma and bronchitis flee as from fire. A trial will convince anyone of the startling merit of Catarrhozone. Costs $1.00, small size 25c. At druggists', or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

COMPLETELY FAGGED OUT.

The world is full of sickly, despondent, tired, enervated people, all hoping to be well some day. The surest road to health is along the way of taking Ferrozone after meals. Ferrozone is a great appetizer and enables one to eat plenty of wholesome food without fear of indigestion or dyspepsia. This results in the rapid formation of an abundance of red, vitalizing blood, which will restore the nerves, increase flesh and vigor, and nourish and feed every organ of the body. Ferrozone is an ideal restorative and invigorant. It is a tonic of unequalled merit that anyone can use with benefit. Price 50c per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at druggists, or J. S. McKeown.

Westward Ho!

Last evening the police were informed that four men were in a vacant lot on the north end of Albert street and had built a fire. The officer who responded to the call found that the report was true. Four men were seated about the fire enjoying their evening repast. They stated that they were not ordinary tramps, but were en route to Manitoba. They assisted in putting out the fire after finishing their meal, and when last seen were taking Horace Greeley's advice and going west.

GREATLY ALARMED

By a Persistent Cough, but Permanently Cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. H. P. Burbage, a student at law in Greenville, S. C., had been troubled for four or five years with a continuous cough which he says, "greatly alarmed me, causing me to fear that I was in the first stage of consumption." Mr. Burbage, having seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised concluded to try it. Now read what he says of it: "I soon felt a remarkable change and after using two bottles of the twenty-five cent size, was permanently cured." Sold by all Druggists.

Toronto, Ont.:

Dear Sirs,—While suffering severely with pain in my groin from kidney and bladder trouble, I was strongly advised by several of my neighbors to use the O. R. Kidney Cure. Before I had taken one bottle it fully satisfied me that I had secured the right thing, and since being cured, I, like my friends, have told others of this wonderful remedy for all diseases of the kidneys and for urinary troubles.

Resolution of Condolence

At the regular meeting of Mizpah Lodge, I.O.O.F., held last evening a resolution of condolence was passed to Bro. Prof. Wilmott, owing to the recent death of his parents in the Old Country.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Replace Unhealthy Blood by a Fresher and More Highly Vitalized Fluid.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

IS THE ONLY MEDICINE THAT CAN PURIFY THE LIFE STREAM AND REPAIR SHATTERED STRENGTH.

The sleeplessness, nervous prostration, general debility, weakness, functional irregularities and despondency from which thousands of women, young and old, suffer can be quickly removed by properly feeding the nerves, and replacing the unhealthy blood by a fresher and more highly vitalized fluid. The happy change, from ill-health and misery to true womanhood and happiness, can only be effected by the use of Paine's Celery Compound.

The present spring demand for Paine's Celery Compound, woman's friend and life-giver, is enormous in every province of the Dominion. This fact alone amply proves that the great compound possesses virtues and powers unknown to other remedies. Dear wife and mother, do not procrastinate; listen to-day to the voice of reason and the pleadings and testimony of the thousands of your sex who have been made well and strong. Mrs. S. J. McKinlay, Chelmsford, Ont., says:—

"I wish to let you know what Paine's Celery Compound has done for me. I was afflicted with nervousness, sleeplessness, debility and general weakness for five years, and during that time I was doctored and spent a great deal of money for medicines without any good results. A friend advised me to use your compound, and I am happy to say it has completely cured me. I now eat well, sleep well, and am as strong as ever before. I am sure I would have died had not Paine's Celery Compound come to my aid. I wish every woman to know about your wonderful medicine."

A Classification.

Henry Thomas Buckle's thoughts and conversation were always on a high level. Once he remarked: "Men and women range themselves into three classes, or orders, of intelligence; you can tell the lowest class by their habit of always talking about persons; the next by the fact that their habit is always to converse about things; the highest by their preference for the discussion of ideas."

The Democracy of Children.

ONE amusing trait in children is their unconscious democracy. They are nearly always democratic when permitted any latitude. The desire for playmates levels sense of caste, if any exists. On a street through which I often pass there is a coterie of children who blend with the most thorough harmony, although they are of quite different social strata. One of the boys is a "smart" young gentleman in knickerbockers, always well groomed; another is a little Italian; a third, the thin, restless, wide awake son of a housekeeper. One of the little girls is a negress, with her woolly hair standing out from her head in thin curved-up tails. She is quite a belle in this "mixed" company.—Harper's "Bazar."

A GUARANTEED CURE

For All Forms of Kidney Disease

We, the undersigned Druggists are fully prepared to give the following guarantee with every 50 cent bottle of Dr. Pettingill's Kidney-Wort Tablets, the only remedy in the world that positively cures all troubles arising from weak or diseased kidneys: "Money cheerfully returned if the sufferer is not relieved and improved after use of one bottle. Three to six bottles effect astonishing and permanent cures. If not relieved and cured, you waste no money."

JOHN LEE'S FEAR

Was averted by the timely use of South American Nervine—Doctors did their best but were powerless.

Mr. John Lee, of Pembroke, says:—"I had indigestion. I had lost my appetite. I was run down in flesh. I was so sick that I feared fatal results, and was almost in despair because my physician seemed powerless to cope with the disease. I was induced to try South American Nervine. I received so much benefit from one bottle that I persevered in the treatment, and to-day I am a new man and am cured completely. 66

SOLD BY D. M. WATERS.

Apropos the renewal of the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy, an article by William Sheppard in the "Era" on the making of anagrams is enlightening. "A correspondent has asked me," says Mr. Sheppard, "to furnish him with some good anagrams on the names of famous people. He further informs me that he has spent a good deal of time trying to make an acceptable anagram on the United States, and has failed to do so. With reference to this failure, I would remind him that he must not be discouraged. The task he has attempted is an enormous one. United States has just a dozen letters. Now, mathematicians will tell him that a dozen letters will admit of seven thousand and twenty-nine millions (7,029,000,000) of possible transpositions. Old Camden has vividly described the vexation of soul undergone by anagrammatists when oft-repeated effort, with an oft-repeated approximation to success, have finally resulted in loss of time and labor: 'Some have been seen,' he says, 'to bite their pens, scratch their heads, bend their brows, bite their lips, beat their board, their paper, when they were fair for somewhat and caught nothing herein.' Again, let him comfort himself by the reflection that no one has yet succeeded in making a good English anagram on United States. Anagrammatists have been forced to fall back upon the more fluent and manageable Latin. It has been discovered that the letters forming United States may be transposed into the following Latin words:

In te deus stat. "God stands in thee."

Inde tutus stat. "Hence thou standest safely."

Dentatus est. "He has teeth," the "he" evidently referring to Uncle Sam.

Desiste, nutat! "Hands off, he shakes!" a sentiment which may have been applicable in 1861, when it was made, but is now, thank Heaven, without meaning or point.

Siste, nudat te. "Stop, he strips thee," which might be revived to-day by the Anti-Imperialists in their warnings to our new subjects in Cuba and the Philippines.

A te desistunt. "They keep off from thee," which is exactly the attitude which the anti's wish the United States to assume towards Cuba and the Philippines.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

A woman never knows where the match box is.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation. —Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

"A man living on a farm near here came in a short time ago completely doubled up with rheumatism. I handed him a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and told him to use it freely and if not satisfied after using it he need not pay a cent for it," says C. P. Rayder, of Pattens Mills, N. Y. "A few days later he walked into the store as straight as a string and handed me a dollar saying, 'give me another bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I want it in the house all the time, for it cured me.'" For sale by all druggists.

WHY WE LEAD

Our word stands guard over every transaction in our house, insuring your satisfaction, not merely for the worth of your money, but to the full limit of values. Our word is behind every advertised statement, insuring you of its absolute truth. The throngs of people who visit our store speak for our methods better than we can. FRENCH CANNONS BOOM.

King Edward Quits France Amid Acclamations of Enormous Crowd.

Paris, May 5.—King Edward left the Invalides Railroad station on his way to Cherbourg before noon yesterday, amid the booming of 100 cannons and the acclamations of an enormous crowd. The ceremonies at His Majesty's departure were on the same elaborate and spectacular scale as on his arrival here. President Loubet, in a state coach, called at the British embassy and drove with the King through the avenue, on both sides of which troops and large crowds were massed. His Majesty wore the uniform of a British admiral.

The station was sumptuously decorated with crimson and gold hangings, and the British and French colors. The band of the Republican Guard, stationed on the platform, played "God Save the King," at the moment of His Majesty's departure. The final adieus were extremely cordial. The King will spend the night on board the royal yacht, which will not sail for England until this morning.

Keep your Stomach Healthy.

When you get up in the morning with a bad taste in your mouth that the tooth brush will not remove, a coating on your tongue, and a general "out of sorts" feeling, don't blame it on what you had to eat the night before. A healthy stomach would be able to look after that. It's poor digestion that makes you feel so badly. A teaspoonful of Abbey's Effervescent Salt in half a tumbler of water at rising will make you feel better —will cure you if you follow directions. Abbey's revitilizes every organ of the body—it clears away fermenting matter and refreshes and cleanses the stomach. It prevents the suffering that often follows a pleasant evening.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt

is a pleasant, palatable and effective medicine for all stomach ills.

DAISY GORDON'S FOLLY

—OR—

THE WORLD LOST FOR LOVE'S SAKE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY,

Author of "The Crime of Hallow-E'en," "The Flirtations of a Beauty," "Willful Gaynell," "Little Leafy," "Only a Mechanic's Daughter," etc.

"I suppose that must be the way of it," answered the farmer; "but somehow I feel strangely worried about the child tonight; I don't know why. I can't shake the impression off."

He drew his arm-chair closer up to the chimney-corner and lit his pipe, murmuring:

"Bless the child, God bless little Daisy."

It was a busy evening for both Hetty and Olive, for they were to start bright and early on the following morning with a jolly party of young folks for Briar Hall. And as they were to stay a fortnight, the old valise had to be packed with necessary clothing.

Everything was in readiness at last, and, looking up at the tall, old-fashioned clock ticking over the fireplace, Hetty saw that it wanted twenty minutes to ten.

"Oh, my!" she cried in dismay, "see how late it is, Olive; we must get to bed at once, or we'll never be able to get up early in the morning."

As they passed through Daisy's room on their way to their own chamber, Hetty started back with a little gasping cry, pointing toward the dainty white bed.

"Look, Olive!" she cried. "See, here is Daisy sound asleep in bed, after all the fuss father made over her absence."

"I might have guessed as much," laughed Olive. "She has stolen into the house and kept out of our way the whole evening so she wouldn't be asked to help us with our packing."

Farmer Gordon heard it all from his arm-chair in the sitting-room below.

"Daisy is safe at home," he muttered. "Thank heaven for that. I was greatly worried about her."

Every one was up at daybreak at the farmhouse the next morning, and two gayer or happier maidens than Hetty and Olive could not be found as they started two hours later.

"Good-bye father, good-bye, Daisy," they called back, as they climbed into the old-fashioned carry-all that stood before the door.

The last sight they saw was Daisy's tear-stained face pressed close to the window-pane, gazing after them as the carriage turned the curve in the white road.

"I hope you won't be lonesome, Daisy," said Farmer Gordon, anxiously, as he drew her from the window, stroking the lovely, fluffy, golden curls with his toil-hardened hands. "A fortnight will soon pass, and the girls will be back again. It will be your turn next, pet. If you get lonesome staying here with Margy, or if she can spare you from helpin' with the meals, you can come over to the meadow and sit with me a spell. Those clover-fields down by the bridge want mowing. You'll either find me there, or else at the other end of the field plowing."

Drawing his wide-brimmed straw hat over his sun-burned face, he kissed Daisy and started to his work.

Old Margy, the servant who had been installed at the farmhouse for long years before Daisy was born, soon thrust her head in at the door.

"You do look powerful lonesome, lamb!" she exclaimed, as she caught sight of Daisy sitting disconsolately on the wide doorstep. "You can go into the clover field with your pa, if you like; I shan't need you, I'm sure, child."

Daisy caught up her broad-brimmed sun-hat and walked slowly down to her favorite nook in the orchard.

How long she sat dreaming under the pink blossoms of the peach tree she never knew; she was thinking of a dark, handsome face and a pair of laughing dark eyes.

Glancing suddenly up, she saw the same pair of dark, smiling eyes regarding her intently, and the next instant he had vaulted gracefully over the hedgerow, and stood by her side.

"I have been standing there quite an hour," he said. "I began to despair that you would ever come."

She looked up into his face with frank, child-like eyes, and he saw that they bore traces of recent tears.

What could bring tears to the eyes of this happy little heiress, he asked himself in puzzled surprise.

"Ah," he cried earnestly, "the smile you give me is not a happy one. You are grieving over something, I am sure."

A sudden impulse of confidence in this handsome hero to whom she owed so much came over Daisy. Should she tell him that she had been grieving—yes, crying bitterly—because Olive and Hetty had gone to spend two weeks at Briar Hall, and she had been left at home? No, no; he might think her weak and childish, and she would not like him to think that of her.

"You are right," she said. "I have had a little disappointment."

"How I wish that I were not a stranger," he said, eagerly, "that I might say something to console you. Let me try to help you to forget it."

It was pleasant to hear such kind words; it was pleasant to read the admiration revealed so plainly in those dark mesmeric eyes.

"Is that the sound of falling water? Is there a cascade near by?" asked Harold St. John, suddenly.

"Yes, the chief pride of Cliffdale is the spring, and the brook that joins the river at the foot of this glen," replied Daisy. "There's a little waterfall, and the artists who come here in summer say it is delightfully picturesque."

"Let us go and see it," said Harold St. John.

She took him down a broad path through the orchard, and across the dell, and then they stood by the brookside.

It was so beautiful down in the deep green glade. The sunlight came filtering through the thick green foliage; the ground beneath their feet was a carpet of wild flowers—blue bells and wild hyacinths, pale strawberry blossoms and purple foxgloves. Overhead where the thick branches met, the birds were singing as though love and hope were dawning for them.

"A charming spot," declared Harold St. John. "If I were a poet I would immortalize it. I am sure you must be tired," he gallantly added. "Let me make you a throne."

He cleared the debris of flowers and leaves from a part of the mossy bank, and Daisy sat down upon it, he throwing himself gracefully down at her feet, his white straw hat by his side.

What did they talk of? What do the young and beautiful and happy always speak of when the sun shines and the birds sing?

Handsome Harold St. John was a young man of the world, and in the art of fascination no man was better skilled. He knew the value of every inflection of his low, musical voice, of every flash of his dark eyes. He did not say it in words—he was far too clever for that—but he made her understand that life had only begun for him since the hour he had asked the way to Briarvale.

This was something like romance—sitting under the spreading shade of the green trees, listening to the singing of the brook and the birds, with this handsome hero with her—his dark eyes full of unspoken love riveted on her face.

She was but a child, or a handsome face would not have had power to fascinate and charm her so.

During the conversation he had told her his name, and that he was from that great big city, New York, that seemed like a strange world to Daisy, who had heard such strange stories concerning it.

"If I should guess your name," he added, laughingly, "I should say it must be that of some sweet flower, you have just the face that would indicate it."

"I am named after a flower," replied Daisy, blushing to the very roots of her waving golden curls. "You are quite right."

"If I were to select a name by which to be permitted to call you, it would be Lily," he said, with a sly twinkle in his eye.

"Do you like that name better than Daisy?" she asked wonderingly.

"It is a thousand times more lovely, as is the peerless white flower that bears its name, to the common roadside blossom. Yes, pray permit me to call you Lily if I may."

"Certainly, if you like that name so much," stammered Daisy, in confusion, hardly knowing what to say.

But from that moment in which this handsome stranger spoke so lightly and sneeringly of the name "Daisy," she lost all pleasure in the simple sweetness of her own name.

Never in her life had the hours passed so quickly to Daisy, but she remembered at last that it was time to go back to the house, or Margy or her father would be coming out to search for her.

As a Spring Medicine

THERE ARE TWO REASONS WHY THERE IS NO TREATMENT SO THOROUGHLY SATISFACTORY AND LASTINGLY BENEFICIAL AS

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The body of man can be influenced in health or disease only through two channels—the blood and the nerves.

During the winter the blood becomes thin and watery because of the artificial life we are compelled to lead indoors—the artificial food, the breathing of impure air, the lack of exercise, and this is why most people find it necessary to use a blood builder and nerve restorative in the spring.

For two reasons Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the most satisfactory spring medicine that you can possibly obtain. In the first place, it is gently laxitive. Just enough so that when taken regularly it ensures proper action of the bowels. Secondly, it forms new red corpuscles in the blood or in other words makes the blood rich, red, and life-sustaining.

Through the medium of the blood and nerves, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food influences every nook and corner of the system, giving new vigor to the vital organs, such as the heart, lungs, stomach, liver and kidneys, and ensuring their regular and healthful action.

This great food cure sharpens up the appetite, makes the digestion good and actually adds new firm flesh and tissue to the body as you can prove by weighing yourself while using it.

Liquid medicines always have a stimulating effect due to the presence of alcohol. There is none of this in connection with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and for this reason any benefit you feel is lasting and you can be certain that with each dose your blood is getting richer and your system is being built up.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50; at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates and Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

SPEECH ON THAT MEASURE BY MR. W. B. NORTHRUP, M.P., IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Now referring for a moment to the contention on the other side, is there nothing to be said for the contention of New Brunswick? I see New Brunswick's contention submitted to the Dominion Government is very brief. It does not descend to argument, it merely states the case of New Brunswick. But is there anything to be said on behalf of the contention of New Brunswick? I think a great deal can be said. It has been laid down by one of the Supreme Court judges, Mr. Justice Strong, quoted in Lefroy on the Constitution, page 42:

"We are not only entitled, but bound to apply that well-established rule, which requires us, in placing a meaning upon descriptive terms and definitions contained in statutes, to have recourse to external aids derived from the surrounding circumstances and the history of the subject-matter dealt with, and to consider the enactment by the light derived from such source, and so to put ourselves as far as possible in the position of the Legislature, whose language we have to expound. If this rule were rejected and the language of the statute were considered without such assistance from extrinsic facts, it is manifest that the task of interpretation would degenerate into mere speculation and guess work."

So we have the authority of one of the judges of the Supreme Court to say that we have a right to look at all the surrounding circumstances, and to consider what light can be shed by them on the legislation that has been passed. In the debates before the Imperial Parliament, when Lord Carnarvon was introducing the British North America Act, he spoke very clearly as to the language of the enactment, and laid down that the British North America Act was the result of a treaty made between the various powers, every clause of which was a compromise; and because every clause of that treaty was a compromise he refused to allow the House of Lords to amend any clause of it in any respect. Now, then, if every clause of that treaty was a compromise, perhaps it would not be out of place to inquire into the circumstances under which this particular clause, 51, in which we are so deeply interested, came to be put in the statute. On reference to Pope's Confederation Documents, page 67, we find the debate on the clause giving the number of representatives that the various provinces should be given. We find Mr. Galt saying:

"We have supposed that the population of Lower Canada being tolerably equable in its character, would afford the best basis. But having respect to the rapid increase of Upper Canada, we think the lower provinces should not be reduced if they do not increase in the same ratio. Therefore, the lower provinces would have the same as they have now, unless in the very improbable case of any one falling off five per cent. or more, —that is a decrease relatively to the whole federation."

Which then began with four provinces. The Hon. Geo. Brown, whose name is greatly revered by hon. gentlemen opposite, speaking on the same subject, says on page 67:

"The practical result will be that while Lower Canada certainly will not be less and the lower provinces may increase in population, they cannot decrease in the number of representatives. It keeps the House within a reasonable limit. It is now, to start with one in 17,000; it will afterwards vary."

Then on page 68 the debate goes on, and it is stated that the number of representatives then given was not accidental, but was given because one member for each county and one for each city would give exactly the number agreed upon. The delegates found that they could so divide up the representation of the Dominion that the figures agreed on in the British North America Act would afford what they considered a fair basis for the representation of each province, and it was evidently understood by the representatives at that time, when they so provided that unless there was a falling off of one-twentieth in the population of a province there should be no decrease, that practically they were insured against any decrease. Now the provinces have gone into the Dominion on that basis, and the British North America Act being an Imperial Act, I submit it is beyond question that the terms of the British North America Act, every clause of it being, as Lord Carnarvon said, a compromise, must stand precisely to-day as they were then, except insofar as those clauses have been modified by Imperial legislation. We must not forget that no matter what legislation this Parliament might profess to pass or attempt to pass in derogation of Imperial legislation, we would be exceeding our powers and our legislation would be utterly void. Now, I would ask the Minister of Justice what legislation has ever passed the Imperial Parliament that in any way affects clause 51. Probably the answer will be; The other provinces came in under Orders in Council.

To be Continued.

Men's Spring Suits

The Newest of all.

The more exactingand particular a man may be about exclusiveness in fabrics and patterns, even if he insists on all the advantages he expects from a tailor, then the more these new suits, which we are showing for the first time, will appeal to him.

He will find in them all the style and satisfaction he would in garments that the best tailors could build to his measure, though they cost a little more than half the tailor's price and the same as he would pay elsewhere for ready made clothes, that would not prove as satisfactory.

Throughout these splendid garments the tailoring will be found to be faultless; it is of the highest character known and if anything a little more exacting and thorough than is found on the tailor's best productions. And of more importance than all, they possess that well-bred air the tailors have a knack of giving to the clothes they turn out.

Needless to say, the styles as they are found here are correct, that is expected, or that a perfect fit is assured in every case—we are more particular about that than you could be.

Fine suits—the new single and double-breasted styles—of fine Blue and Black Cheviots and Serges, Black unsheared Worsteds, Fancy Imported Cassimeres in the latest colorings and overplaid effects. Fancies that are exclusive with us and the tailors .... $6.50, $7.50, $10.00, $12.00, $13.50, $15.00.

EPWORTH LEAGUES MEET

OFFICERS ELECTED—GOOD-BY TO MISS EDITH CLAPP

Bridge St. E.L.C.E.

The semi-annual meeting of the Epworth League of Christian Endeavor in connection with Bridge St. church was held last evening. There were a large number of members in attendance. At the business meeting reports of various departments were presented, all of which were of an encouraging nature. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Mr. J. Luton.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mr. C. P. Holton.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Miss Maude Lambly.
3rd Vice-Pres.—Miss Pearl Campbell.
4th Vice-Pres.—Mr. Horace Clarke.
Treasurer—Mr. Russel Chown.
Secretary—Miss F. Maude Gailey.
Pianist—Miss Beatrice Embury.

Holloway Street E.L.C.E.

At the Epworth League meeting of Holloway St. Church last evening, Miss Astin, of Norway, gave an address on the customs and habits of the Norwegians, which was both interesting and instructive. The latter part of the meeting was a farewell to Miss Edith Clapp who leaves for Vancouver in a few days. Miss Clapp has been for some time a member of the League, filling many important offices, and regret is expressed at her departure.

Stocking the Lake

CHARGED WITH ABDUCTION

DESERONTO PEOPLE MIXED UP WITH A SERIOUS CHARGE.

A young man named John Toppings was this morning brought to the County jail to stand his trial on the charge of abduction. It appears that the accused, with another man named Kent, a few days ago took two girls named Clarke away from their home in Deseronto and remained away with them for two days. One of the girls, Minnie, is under 16 years, the sister being older. Kent has not been found.

Yesterday Toppings had a preliminary examination before Magistrate Bedford, of Deseronto, with the result that he was committed for trial on the above charge.

Mr. Anderson, County Attorney, represented the Crown, and Mr. Deroche appeared for the accused.

This morning Toppings was brought up before Judge Lazier and elected to be tried by His Honor. The trial was fixed for Monday next.

BAD FIRE IN TRENTON

REDDICK'S SASH AND BLIND FACTORY BURNED THIS MORNING.

The town of Trenton was this morning visited by a fire which wiped out one of the manufacturing concerns of the place. At 6.30 fire broke out in the sash and blind factory belonging to Mr. George Reddick, situated on Dundas street, by the river edge. The flames had gained considerable headway when discovered and the building, being of frame, burned rapidly to the ground. The fire is thought to have caught from a grate. The loss to Mr. Reddick will be heavy, as there was but little insurance upon the building and contents.

Mr. Reddick is a son of our former townsman, Mr. James Reddick, who was engaged in similar business here some years ago.

CITY WILL GIVE $100 TOWARDS A CELEBRATION

Manager of Bank of Montreal Asks for Letter Guaranteeing Protection

Mr. Richard Arnott is Now Cow Catcher, Sanitary Inspector, Etc., Etc.

The City Fathers were in a talkative mood last night, and they kept the corporation gas burning till half-past ten. There were not many interesting features. The question as to whether or not the city should pay for watering Front St. was discussed at some length, and after the ethics of the matter had been settled it was discovered that it could not be done except through a frontage tax, which would have to be asked for by petition in the usual way. Mr. Richard Arnott was appointed corporation Pooh-Bah! It was resolved to donate $100 to the Fifteenth if they undertook to bring the Highlanders' Band and the 57th of Peterboro here on Dominion Day.

Ald. Pope was the only absentee.

There were no changes in the minutes.

Communications and Petitions.

From Mr. A. G. Parker, manager of the Bank of Montreal, asking that he be given a letter from the city guaranteeing the Bank protection in case there was ever any litigation in respect to the $2500 Kirkwood forfeit money. The Bank had no reason to think there would be any litigation, but would like to be protected.—Laid on table.

From Mr. John R. Weir, offering to water Front street from McCoy's livery to the south corner of Front and Pinnacle streets, and Bridge street from Pinnacle St. to the lower bridge, for $20 per week.—Laid on table.

From R. Arnott, applying for the position of sanitary inspector, etc., at a salary of $360 per year.

From W. H. Scholes, in the same connection.

Both were laid on the table.

A petition was presented from a number of residents of Mill street, asking that that thoroughfare be watered on the frontage tax system.—Laid on table.

Residents of South John St. asked that a street light be erected there, as the street was dangerous at night, owing to its having no sidewalk.—Referred.

An account of $355.38, from the Trenton Electric Company, was presented and laid on the table.

Reports of Committees.

The reports of the various standing committees, as already published, were read, and Council went into Committee of the Whole, Ald. Galbraith in the chair.

The report of the Executive Committee was adopted without change.

The report of the Market Committee was amended so that the City Solicitor was added to the special committee appointed to deal with the Market Lessee's bonds.

Moving the Crusher.

The Public Works Committee's report caused a heap of trouble.

When the clause recommending the removal of the crusher to Zwick's Island was read,

Ald. Sinclair objected. In the opinion of the City Surveyor they might better leave the present crusher where it was and purchase a portable crusher for use on Zwick's Island. He moved that the clause ordering the removal of the crusher be struck out of the report.

The Street Surveyor was heard in reference to the matter. He said that to macadam the principal business streets they must have crushed limestone. The Zwick's Island gravel, in its present state, would not be suitable and would not last so long as the crushed limestone. If the gravel, however, were crushed, it would make a splendid road. By purchasing a new portable machine they would, he thought, save $4 per day.

In answer to questions the Surveyor said he had been in correspondence, by order of the Mayor, with makers of portable crushers. They would cost from $800 to $900 and crush 10 tons per hour. The whole matter, in his opinion, hinged on one thing. Did they intend to abandon the present quarry altogether and build their roads entirely from Zwick's island material, or did they intend to get their coarse stuff from the quarry, as at present, and take crushed gravel, for top dressing, from Zwick's island. If so, he thought it would be cheaper in the long run to have a new portable crusher. If they intended to depend entirely on the Zwick's island material they should, he thought, abandon the old quarry altogether and move everything to Zwick's island.

The Mayor did not think they wanted to buy any more machinery. They could get all the road-making material necessary from Zwick's island, which would answer Belleville's purposes for 100 years to come. They could put the present crusher on skids and it would do their work all right.

A long discussion followed, in which Ald. Green, Panter, Sinclair, Cooper, the Mayor and the Street Surveyor took part, and there was some impassioned oratory.

The Mayor asked the Street Surveyor if he could not obtain, on Zwick's island, all the material necessary for road-making, without using the present quarry at all.

The Street Surveyor acknowledged that he could.

Ald. Sinclair said he had been led to believe otherwise. He understood, from conversation with the Surveyor, that it was absolutely necessary to get material from the present quarry, in addition to the gravel from Zwick's island. He would withdraw his motion.

Ald. Panter said the Public Works Committee had already spent $1,000 this year. The object in buying Zwick's island, as he understood it, was that the city would get there all the material they needed for road-making, so that the old quarry could be done away with.

The clause recommending the removal of the crusher was passed, as was also the remainder of the Public Works Committee's report.

Mr. Parker's Request.

The communication from Mr. Parker, manager of the Bank of Montreal, was then taken up.

Ald. Chown moved that the Mayor be authorized to sign a document to the effect of that asked for by Mr. Parker, the same to be prepared by the City Solicitor.

Ald. Panter objected. The money had been forfeited. He could not see that any document was necessary.

Ald. Chown said the city was perfectly safe in giving the document.

The Mayor said the manager of the Bank of Montreal had seen him in connection with the matter. They would like the city to guarantee to protect the Bank in case of future litigation, though they did not anticipate any. He (the Mayor) had told Mr. Parker he had no authority to sign anything of the kind.

Ald. Green said that either that money was the city's or it was not. If there was any responsibility in regard to the money, let the Bank take it. If there was any litigation in prospect he would rather see the money stay where it was than go into the Sinking fund. If the Bank was not prepared to take the responsibility of turning over the forfeit money to the city they (the Bank) should not have taken the position of stakeholder. (Laughter.)

Ald. Sutman concurred in the remarks of Ald. Green.

Ald. Sinclair moved in amendment that the matter be referred to the City Solicitor for his opinion.

Ald. McFee thought the sinking fund was the ideal place for that money. They should demand that $2,500 from the Bank without any conditions. The money had been fairly forfeited, and they should have it without any nonsense.

Ald. Sinclair's amendment carried.

Alleged Poor Street Lights.

When the Trenton Electric Company's account came up,

Ald. Chown asked Ald. Cooper, chairman of the Light Committee, if he thought the city was getting the light they paid for. There were many bad street lights, surely not up to the candle power agreed on. He thought they should refuse to pay the bill till the lights were better or there was some explanation given.

Ald. Cooper said he had talked of this matter before, and nothing had been done. He declined to take any personal responsibility in the matter, but would do whatever the Council gave him authority to do.

Ald. Sinclair moved that the Chairman of Light be authorized to tell the Electric Light people that the bill was not paid because the lights were not satisfactory, and that an official inspection of the street lights be made.

The Mayor said an inspection might show that enough power was on, but the trouble, he thought, was that many of the incandescent lights had been burning beyond their time limit. He did not know of any way of telling whether that was so or not.

The motion carried.

Watering Mill Street.

The petition re watering Mill St. was referred back to the petitioners to be amended, but they were authorized to have the street watered in the meantime.

A Question of Principle.

Mr. Weir's offer to water Front St. was then taken up. He offered to do it for $20 per week for the city, but said he had received $21.50 for the same work when paid by private parties.

Ald. McFee objected to the city paying for the watering of Front street while they allowed other streets to be watered on the frontage tax plan. He did not think that was fair. If any paid they should all pay.

Ald. Sinclair championed the Front St. merchants, who, he said, were sufficiently taxed already.

A long discussion ensued, many Aldermen in turn waxing eloquent, when at last

Ald. Chown asked if they had a right to appropriate money for watering a street without levying a frontage tax?

The Mayor said they had not, so, on motion of Ald. Panter, the matter was referred to committee.

Some Aldermen—"What Committee?

Chorus—"The Water Committee, of course."

Enquiries.

Ald. Chown asked the City Clerk if he had notified the Trenton Electric Company that the city was ready to receive a proposition from them, re the street railway, before the 1st of June.

The Clerk said he had.

Ald. Sinclair asked if the special committee appointed had taken any action re necessary repairs to the granolithic sidewalk in front of the Star block.

Ald. Panter said he had not had time, but would see to the matter immediately.

A Profane Peeler.

Ald. Galbraith asked if the city had not a by-law which prohibited profane and indecent language in the public street.

The Mayor—"It has, sir; and such a thing is also forbidden by the law of the land."

Ald. Galbraith—"Then, sir, I wish to say that I have been informed by a man who is ready to come forward and testify, that one of our city policemen, on Saturday night last, in public, used very indecent, profane and improper language on Front St."

The Mayor said Ald. Galbraith should bring his complaint before the Police Commissioners, and, if the case were proven, he had no doubt the offender would be summarily discharged from the Police force.

Ald. Galbraith—"Is that your advice, sir?"

The Mayor—"Yes, sir."

Ald. Galbraith—"Thank you, sir."

Introduction of By-laws.

Two by-laws were introduced and passed, namely:

A by-law re watering of Bridge St., the same to be paid for by a frontage tax of 6 1-3 cents per foot, and

A by-law to appoint an official who shall fulfil the duties of Cow Inspector, Sanitary Inspector, Food and Drink Inspector, Dog Enumerator, and such other duties as may be required of him by the Council.

Ald. McFee moved that the blank in the by-law be filled in with the name of W. H. Scholes.

Ald. Galbraith moved in amendment that Richard Arnott receive the appointment.

The Mayor said it must be understood that whoever received the appointment his whole time must be at the city's service, and the by-law was amended to read in that way.

Ald. Galbraith's amendment was carried, there being five votes for Mr. Arnott to three against him.

The by-laws were numbered 1089 and 1090. Ald. Marsh was chairman in committee of the whole.

Motions.

Ald. Chown moved that the Police Commissioners be requested to appoint Richard Arnott a special constable and Truancy Officer, without additional salary.—Carried.

Ald. Panter moved that four benches be placed on the West side park, as promised. The West side, he said, never got what was coming to it, anyhow.—Carried.

Dominion Day Celebration.

Under the head of unfinished business Ald. Sinclair said he had been asked by Ald. Pope, who was unavoidably absent, to bring up the matter of a proposed Dominion Day celebration. The Fifteenth had an opportunity to have as their guests, on that day, the Fifty-seventh, of Peterboro, and they would like the city to give some assistance in the way of transportation to the visitors from the station to their camp, free water and light. The expense would not exceed $75.

Ald. Chown asked if the Highlanders' Band was coming?

Ald. Sinclair said a movement to that end was on foot, he thought. If the Fifty-seventh came he thought the other matter would be settled.

Ald. Marsh said Col. Halliwell had offers to take the Fifteenth to Hamilton and Picton, but would prefer to stay in Belleville if the city would assist in entertaining the visitors.

Ald. Chown thought a grant of $100 would not be unreasonable.

Ald. Green concurred. It would be worth $100 to have a demonstration and keep the people at home.

Ald. Chown moved that if the Fifteenth Regiment get the Highlanders' Band and the Fifty-seventh Regiment of Peterboro here for Dominion Day the City Council pledge itself to contribute $100.—Carried.

Just as the Council adjourned Ald. Chown asked why it was that the Council had never received official notification of various recommendations which had been made to it by the Board of Trade.

Some of the Aldermen said the Board of Trade could instruct its own secretary, it was not the Council's place to do so.

The Council adjourned at 10.30.

HON. J. R. STRATTON IN SELF-DEFENCE

charges were specific as to the payment of $3,000 and of $1,000, and not about a fund in general, which would require another commission. Nothing prior to May 9 could refer to Mr. Gamey, who came into political existence only on that date. The House refused to extend the Commission to the matter asked for by Mr. Balke.

The Chancellor suggested that Mr. Blake should go on with other questions and the Commission would consider the matter of the fund.

Mr. Blake asked if he had ever heard that the American Lumberman sent over a large sum stated to be $28,000.

Mr. Stratton said he never heard of it before.

Mr. Blake asked if he was not aware of a general fund raised for the election, which ran on and was in part applied to the protests.

Mr. Johnston objected, and the court adjourned at 3.55 until to-day, when a decision will be given by the Commission on the question of funds.

B.C. BOODLE TRIAL.

Government is Determined to Bring Out All the Facts.

Victoria, B.C., May 5.—The British Columbia Legislature has adjourned for a week in order that the charges of corruption in connection with the proposed grant of valuable lands in Southeast Kootenay, to the Columbia and Western Railway, the bill repudiating which was yesterday assented to by the Lieutenant-Governor, may be fully investigated. The Government is determined to bring out all the facts in connection with the deal, and counsel will be engaged to aid the work of the special committee appointed for that purpose.

WATERFORD SCORCHED.

$17,000 the Total Loss and One Man Badly Hurt.

Waterford, Ont., May 5.—A disastrous fire broke out at 5.40 p.m. last night. The fire originated in the American House stables and spread to the east, totally destroying the large evaporating factory owned and operated by J. Matchett, private banker. On the west it took in the American Hotel, which is a total wreck. In removing the effects from the American House, one man was badly injured by a fall from a one-storey veranda. On the south, it took in three barns, while on the north the wind was directly from the south and drove the flames against E. Edmonds' fine three-storey block, which was occupied by Mr. Edmonds as a flour and feed store, while John North, who managed the business, occupied the upper storeys as a dwelling. Next came U. J. Chambers' jewelry store, dental office and dwelling, and the other, I. E. Chambers' residence, and also his stock, which comprised a large stock of tinware and stoves. Tenche's saw mill escaped with a bad scorching. Total loss, $17,000; partly covered by insurance. The fire is supposed to be of incendiary origin.

DR. PITCHER'S
BACKACHE-KIDNEY TABLETS

CLEANSE THE SYSTEM FROM HEAD TO FOOT AND PURIFY THE BLOOD.

THESE Tablets act on the three great blood purifying organs of the body—the kidneys, liver and bowels, and clear away the bile, uric acid and all other poisons and impurities. They positively cure blood humors, skin diseases, headache, backache, dropsy, gravel, rheumatism, all kidney and urinary troubles, liver torpor, constipation—and give sick, disheartened men and women a new lease of life.

J. Williams, telegraph operator, Port Hope, says "Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets are the only thing I have found in the last four or five years that has done any good and they certainly are marvelous in their rapid and good effects. I suffered from backache, kidney, and liver trouble, with loss of appetite and strength, but these conditions are entirely gone, and I feel generally better and stronger every way."

Price, 50c. a bottle. 3 for $1.25 at druggists or by mail. The Dr. Zina Pitcher Co., Toronto.

MAY DYNAMITE THE ROCKS

Fissure in Turtle Mountain Above Frank Widens Greatly.

Devastated Town is Deserted and Police Allow No One To Enter Who Has Not Property to Look After—Merchants in Despair Have Decided to Remove Their Stocks of Goods—Little Sign of Life.

Blairmore, N.W.T., May 5.—There was very little sign of life in Frank yesterday. The police maintained a rigid guard over the place, allowing no one to enter except those having property to look after. Another party ascended the mountain to observe the progress of disintegration going on, and found that the break of crevice from which a second slide is expected has widened greatly since the observations Sunday, and the receipt of this information has created fears that another slide is not far distant.

May Blow Down Loose Rock.

As soon as all personal property has been removed it is proposed to experiment with powder and try to blow down all loose rocks and any that show signs of breaking. This attempt to render the mountain safe will be made by the Government.

At the time of the exodus Saturday, merchants were not permitted to load their stocks until the people had an opportunity to get their household effects away and yesterday an engine and train crew has been kept between Frank and Blairmore hauling to the latter place chattels of every description as fast as loaded.

Merchants in Despair.

Most of the merchants had decided Sunday not to move their stocks, but all have now decided to do so. H. L. Frank, majority owner of the coal mining property, arrived yesterday with General Manager Gebo, but had no statement to make as to his intentions regarding the property.

Avalanche Kills Two Men.

Sydney, N. S., May 5.—Two men, Nathaniel March and George Lambert, natives of Kennedy's Bay, Newfoundland, were killed, and five others had a miraculous escape from an avalanche of 5,000 tons of stone, which slid down the side of George's River above the steel company's quarries at 9 o'clock yesterday morning.

REJECTION MEANS HELL.

John Redmond, Irish Leader, Speaks on the Irish Land Bill.

London, May 5.—The Irish Secretary, Mr. Wyndham, yesterday formally moved the second reading of the Irish Land Bill in the House of Commons.

John Redmond, the Irish leader, supporting the motion, said never before, since the Act of Union, had an English Minister had such a chance as Mr. Wyndham had now. The landlords and tenants were in complete agreement on almost all the essential points. If the bill was rejected, the Irish people would be driven back into the "old hell of warring passions and conflicting hopes." With all his heart, he prayed that such a state of things would not arise. It would be little short of tragic were the Government to throw away the golden opportunity, which, once lost, might not return for a lifetime.

Mr. Coghill (Conservative) and Sir George Bartley (Conservative), having respectively moved and seconded the rejection of the Land Bill.

Premier Balfour spoke in support of the measure. They had resisted Mr. Gladstone's bill, because it was inextricably bound up in Home Rule. The bill was simply intended to substitute a good system of land tenure for a bad one, and to cure a festering sore.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Liberal leader, said the terms of the bill should be closely investigated in committee. They were not satisfactory as set forth in the bill.

Mr. Russell, Liberal-Unionist, supported the second reading, although he disliked some of the complicated arrangements of the bill.

The debate was then adjourned.

TROOPS READY FOR WAR.

Settlement of Montreal Dock Strike as Far Off as Ever.

Montreal, May 5.—"The strike is as far from settlement as ever, and understand the men have rejected my proposal that they accept the same clause as did the Street Railway men a few weeks ago, the same giving a partial recognition of the union." This statement was made close on midnight by Mayor Cochrane.

The longshoremen have been very quiet all day, but the teamsters of the city are out. Fifteen hundred men are added to the army of unemployed. No cargo is being moved from the wharves; the movement of heavy freight in the city in connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Grand Trunk, the Intercolonial and the various steamship companies, has temporarily ceased. This strike is in sympathy with the longshoremen.

Although there is no unnatural sign of trouble, there have been such persistent rumors of bad blood that the whole militia force of the district have received orders to be in readiness to move at a moment's notice, and at midnight, the Mayor and Col. Gordon were conferring together at the Drill Hall.

Boy Dragged to Death.

Winnipeg, Man., May 5.—Joseph Lehin, a lad of 16, came to a terrible end at Eagle Hills, near Battleford. He was riding a stallion that had a rope on his neck, and when running away the boy was caught in its coils and dragged a considerable distance. When the body was recovered, life was extinct.

The King Welcomed Home.

London, May 6.—King Edward received a great, popular welcome on his arrival in London from Portsmouth. The railroad station was closed to the public, but the approaches were thronged by large crowds, and the road to Buckingham Palace, which was gaily decorated with flags, was thickly lined with people. His Majesty appeared to be in excellent health.

Paris, May 6.—President Loubet telegraphed to King Edward at Portsmouth, thanking him for the good will manifested toward the people and Government of France as expressed in His Majesty's despatch to the President from Cherbourg Monday.

The Radical Socialist group in the Chamber of Deputies has adopted a resolution urging the immediate negotiation of a treaty of arbitration between Great Britain and France.

STRATTON'S STORY ENDED

Says Mr. Gamey Was "Out For Everything in Sight."

THE MINISTERS JOCULAR.

When Discussing Mr. Gamey's Attendance at the Conservative Meeting—Provincial Secretary Didn't Tell His Colleagues of the Globe Interview, However, and It May Have Been a Happy Surprise to Them—Minister Gives His Idea of Patronage.

Toronto, May 6.—When the Royal Commission to enquire into the Gamey bribery charges opened yesterday morning the Commissioners delivered their decision on the question of the prosecution's right to examine into the campaign fund of the Liberal party. They announced that only such evidence as was reasonably relevant and pertinent to the issue, say between August, 1902, and March, 1903, would be admitted, in order to show whether the money was paid Gamey from the source referred to. The enquiry would be private in character, excepting in so far as items directly pertinent to enquiry were concerned. It was also ordered that Mr. Johnston might examine the Conservative accounts if he wished.

The Ontario Bank Books.

Mr. Ritchie read some correspondence with the Ontario Bank respecting an inspection of the books, which they were unwilling to allow. He asked that Mr. Barwick, the solicitor, might be called to-day, so that if necessary an order of the court might issue to allow such inspection.

The Liberal Campaign Fund.

Mr. Stratton then entered the box and the cross-examination by Mr. Blake was resumed. In regard to the general campaign fund, he said he never made a contribution, and if he had done so he would not know who got it. The letter which he wrote on Sept. 10 at Mr. Gamey's instructions, announcing his intention to support the Government, known as the Aylesworth letter, was then taken up. Mr. Blake questioned at length about the "consideration" Gamey spoke of, and Mr. Stratton repeatedly explained that it meant that Mr. Gamey's recommendations were to receive the same consideration as any other supporter of the Government. He had no discussion with any other member of the Government before writing the letter. He dealt with the matter of his own accord, and the Premier knew nothing about it at the time. Mr. Blake then inquired closely into the origin of the letter, whether he, Mr. Gamey or Mr. Aylesworth suggested it, and why it was written. Mr. Stratton said Mr. Aylesworth suggested the letter and he had prepared it to embody the ideas Mr. Gamey requested.

Support and Treatment.

Mr. Blake—Q.—Now, that letter seems to provide for two things. You will see there that in the first place there is what the Government desired, "I have decided to give you my support during the present Parliament?" A.—Yes.

Q.—That was one branch? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then if you look down, what Mr. Gamey wanted was, "All I would ask is that I will be considered and treated as if I had been elected to support your Government?" A.—Yes.

Q.—These were the two ideas—one wanting the support and the other wanting to be treated as one elected to support the Government? A.—Yes.

Q.—These were your two thoughts? A.—These were his two thoughts.

Gamey's Petition.

Asked what Mr. Aylesworth had to say about Gamey's petition, Mr. Stratton said he didn't discuss the petition further than to say that he supposed that if Mr. Gamey was going to support the Government that there would not be much difficulty in regard to the petition. Mr. Aylesworth stated he shoved this letter back to Gamey because of the suggestion of a loan, and Mr. Blake asked how it was that a letter which Mr. Aylesworth could not get because of some impropriety was ultimately got from Gamey. How was the impropriety removed. "I don't know," replied Mr. Stratton. Regarding the appointment of a license board, he was asked why Gamey wanted this, and replied, "He was out for everything in sight," but Mr. Blake saying there were three in Manitoulin and he had only asked for two appointments. Mr. Stratton replied that would give him a majority of the board. Though he discussed appointments with Gamey on Sept. 9, nothing was said about the letter of Sept. 10.

"My Dear Gamey."

Mr. Blake, having elicited from Mr. Stratton that Mr. Stratton found Mr. Gamey an unreliable man on Sept. 9, asked how it was that he had a letter from Gamey on Sept. 29 to "My dear Stratton," and on Oct. 2 replied to "My dear Gamey." He answered that this letter was addressed in the usual style by his secretary, Mr. Burrows, and he called attention to it at the time but made no change. He wrote to the Attorney-General on Oct. 2, asking for the appointment of Mr. Flesher as a J. P. in Manitoulin, which was recommended by Gamey, and explained that such appointments were not of a political character.

Question of Appointments.

The appointment was not made on Gamey's recommendation, but because it was recommended by a lumber company. Mr. Jackson, the Sheriff, was also appointed returning officer, but this was because it had previously been decided that the Sheriffs should so act as far as possible.

"Was any appointment recommended by Gamey after Sept. 9 refused?" asked Mr. Blake.

"A yes or no answer would not be a fair reply," said Mr. Stratton.

Mr. Blake insisting on an answer, Mr. Stratton said that no such appointments were made in his department, and he did not know what other Ministers were doing. Mr. Gamey asked for the appointment of a license board, an issuer of marriage licenses and the appointment of a lockup keeper at Little Current, and, though these were in his department, none was made.

"Part of His Game."

Mr. Blake reading from the "My dear Gamey" letter, Q.—"I am writing you while I know the appointment is in the other department, but I desire just now to do business with you." Why, I wonder? A.—I don't know. I suppose, as he stated in the House, that was part of his game.

Q.—You had seen his game on the 11th September, hadn't you? Why did you play into his hands so beautifully? A.—I saw he had been to the Conservative caucus; I didn't think of it; I didn't care.

In a Quiet Way.

Mr. Stratton did not see the Minister of Public Works to have him "Let Mr. J. F. Boyd, Government Road Inspector, know that he might consult me in a quiet way," as Mr. Gamey requested. He had never spoke to the Minister of Public Works with regard to these matters in Manitoulin. He wrote Mr. Gamey on the 2nd Oct. regarding the returning officer for the referendum and left instructions to have answer sent to the Premier. Mr. Stratton said the letter was written in good faith and kindness and he asked counsel, "If there was any corrupt bargain between Mr. Gamey and I, why should I send it on to the Premier? How would I know what letter would be written in reply?"

Not His Brother's Keeper.

Mr. Blake—Q.—Did you not suggest to him to hand over his constituency to the Liberals and to give him patronage would be utter and downright ruin? A.—I did not.

Q.—Now you know that all the men we have had here, Dr. Strouthers, and Dr. Arthurs, recommended against it because it would be absolute ruin? A.—I am only responsible for what I do myself; I am not responsible for Dr. Strouthers or Dr. Arthurs, or Mr. Blake; I am only responsible for myself and myself alone.

A Coincidence—Nothing Strange.

He knew nothing about a telegram sent by Frank Sullivan to Gamey on January 27th. Mr. Blake thought it strange that this telegram was sent two days before The Globe interview. Mr. Stratton replied that it was no more strange than that $3,000 payment to the Trusts and Guarantee Company should be associated with the $3,000 he was alleged to have paid Gamey. He had no explanation of this telegram. It was merely a coincidence. Mr. Stratton was then questioned about The Globe interview and its origin, and repeated substantially what he had already said. No member of the Government ever saw the interview, nor did he discuss it with any of them. He did not suggest to any of them that it would be a good thing to have for the bye-elections.

WHAT HE TOLD THE PREMIER.

And What Opinion Mr. Ross Had of Mr. Gamey.

Q.—Did you tell them of the letter of October? A.—I said to the Premier that Mr. Gamey had been in and had asked me to get for him a copy of the letter that had been mailed to him in September, and that I had taken the liberty in his absence of getting from his private secretary the letter and mailing or giving Mr. Gamey a copy, which Mr. Gamey said he desired to substitute for a letter he had sent him on the 10th September, explaining to the Premier Mr. Gamey's explanation to me that he had gone to a Conservative convention on the 10th and that he desired to change the date of the letter for the reason that it was a very embarrassing position he had been placed in by the letter in the Premier's hands of the 10th and his actions subsequent to that on the same day.

Q.—What did the Premier say? Did he approve of what you were doing? A.—He said he didn't have any confidence in Mr. Gamey.

Q.—Did he approve of what you were doing? A.—He didn't say anything about it.

Not Gamey's Political Godfather.

Mr. Blake then read a letter by Gamey of February 7th, saying that there was certainly a row, and he would have trouble in satisfying his friends, and suggesting that he resign. Mr. Stratton said he made no suggestion to Mr. Gamey in reply and left him to follow his own devices. "I wasn't his political godfather," he said. He did not know how any information about this got out of the office. He was then asked about the X.Y.Z. letter and enclosure, referring to matters referred to in the letter of February 7th, and swore positively that he never dictated it, never saw it, and never knew anything about it. Frank Sullivan had already admitted writing the X.Y.Z. letter, but he did not know how Sullivan got the information. He emphatically declared that he did not suggest the letter to Sullivan.

"Very Erratic" Supporter.

Witness related seriatim the subjects discussed at the interview at which Dr. Chamberlain was present on the 13th January when Mr. Gamey came to his office, and, in answer to the question, "What else?" said: He (Gamey) said, "Why, I am a supporter of the Government." I said to him, "You take a very peculiar way of showing your support; you said early in September that you were going to support the Government. You attended a Conservative caucus or convention on the 10th, you came to my office and asked for a copy of the letter, which you obtained, and which you said you would send to the Premier with regard to your attendance at the convention, and you were to hold a public meeting in your constituency to show the course that you proposed to pursue; you go to North Perth to assist your party in the bye-elections, and you come here desiring the patronage of the constituency; we propose to confer with our friends with regard to the patronage."

Q.—You looked upon him as an irregular supporter? A.—Very erratic.

Where the Money Came From.

Mr. Blake.—Q.—I got a letter the other day stating that you had said that if the Attorney-General were asked he would be able to state where the money came from, and indicating the name—I do not mention it—of the person. I think it right to ask you to explain because it has been sent here? A.—That is not so

Mr. McEvoy—Was it Passmore?

Mr. Blake—Mr. McEvoy I think. A.—It is not so.

Q.—You did not make that statement? A.—No.

Q.—And so far as you know there is no truth in it? A.—No.

Mr. Stratton said he did not know how the letter found its way to the Premier after the 27th Oct., and witness supposed Mr. Gamey meant his political friends when he was consulting with his friends between the 13th Jan. and the 29th.

The Commission then adjourned till 2 o'clock.

How Big a Man Stratton Is.

On the Commission resuming at 2 o'clock, the cross-examination of Mr. Stratton was resumed by Mr. Blake. Mr. Stratton said that either that he had to attend the annual meeting of the Trust Co. or that the interview had not been prepared would have been the correct answer why he could not see Mr. Gamey until next day about The Globe interview. Mr. Gamey thought it too strong, but did not explain. If he was willing to support the Government, witness was willing to allow him to. The interview was not prepared before the Council meeting, and it had never occurred to him that the members of the Council, from whom he had taken no notes, would exclaim, "see how big a man Stratton is when the interview came out next day." "A happy surprise?" queried Mr. Blake, "I don't know what they may have thought." He had never had an interview with Frank Sullivan in the corridor near his office two or three weeks before the 11th March.

His Old Secretary.

He had seen Mr. George of The Mail about his alleged visit to Kingston, but did not ask him for any information as to Mr. Burrows having stated that Gamey had been bought. He had been getting money in August or September from his solicitors, Messrs. Stratton & Hall of Peterboro, and had no objections to a full examination of his accounts and cheques.

The discussion of Gamey's varying positions on the 9th and 10th of September with his colleagues at breakfast on the 11th was jocular, and so far as he could remember there were present Mr. Harcourt, Mr. Dryden, Mr. Latchford, and perhaps Mr. Gibson. The latter was not referred to, although the fact of his attending the Conservative meeting was.

Support Thrust on Them.

Q.—On the 9th September was anything said about Mr. Gamey signing the letter? A.—On the afternoon of the 10th.

Q.—On the 9th? A.—No.

Q.—Then on the 9th of September Mr. Gamey could not have known what kind of a letter you were wanting from him? A.—No.

Q.—He did not know that until the 10th? A.—No, he did not know at any time of any letter we were wanting from him.

Q.—He was thrusting the letter on you? A.—He was thrusting his support on us.

Q.—You shut both your hands and compelled him to put it into your pocket? A.—I said to you quite frankly we treated Mr. Gamey friendly, and gave him friendly consideration.

Asked why the letter dated Oct. 27, sent to Mr. Gamey, was post dated, Mr. Stratton said from his view of past events now, "for the reason that he would be able to say there would be the object in view of having his petition dropped which was absolutely untrue and false."

"Won't You Tell Me Where?"

Mr. Blake.—Q.—And really, to close the examination, you won't tell us where the money came from? A.—I don't know. You are welcome to examine my accounts to your satisfaction.

Q.—But couldn't you save us that trouble? A.—They are here for you if you desire them.

Q.—You won't tell us offhand?

Mr. Johnston—Is that a matter in which you can help?

Mr. Blake—I will put in five cents.

Six of a Majority.

Mr. Stratton was now re-examined by Mr. Johnston. Mr. Stratton said Mr. Gamey was not acquainted with the Premier on the 23rd or 24th Oct. The Globe interview would have been more valuable before the bye-elections in North Norfolk, North Perth and North Grey, as at the time North York and Centre Bruce came on, after the publication of the interview in The Globe on the 30th, he figured out that the Government had six of a majority, counting Mr. Davis. Even if Bruce and York had gone against them they would still have had a majority of three with the Speaker.

"My Dear Foy."

Asked if there was any reason for making one letter more intimate to another to Mr. Gamey as "My dear Gamey," Mr. Stratton said, "No particular reason, perhaps I had in mind, 'My dear Foy.'" It was a common method of addressing members of the House when writing to them. License commissioners were not salaried officers, getting $1.50 or $2 a day and their traveling expenses when sitting. The inspector was, however, paid a salary. There was no consideration that could be of personal benefit to himself held out to Mr. Gamey to support the Government. Only his private letters, that is to the individual rather than to the Minister. were not filed—all departmental ones were.

Mr. Stratton said it was not correctly expressed to say that the protests were left in his hands by Mr. Ross; rather, the Premier left the matter of dealing with the protests in his hands. He had done nothing with the protests since he turned them over to the solicitors after the third joint meeting of the parties.

Meaning of Patronage.

Mr. Stratton was questioned as to the meaning of the term "patronage." The appointing to public offices of greater or lesser scope was the exercise of patronage. Recommendations sent in by a member not a member of the party were not dealt with, nor were applications ever submitted to the consideration of a member not on the side of the Government. In cases where the member was not on their side they would consult the friends of the party in the riding affected. Their preference was for a friend of their own, He didn't know whether other parties had different rules to follow or not.

This concluded Mr. Stratton's long examination.

Arthur J. Van Nostrand, P.L.S., was examined as to the plans he made of part of the Parliament Buildings by Mr. Johnston. The plans were up-to-date and to Mr. Macpherson he said he could not say that the lighting was the same in those submitted as it was in the portion of the building represented on the 10th or 11th Sept. last.

Mr. Johnston—Mr. Blake and myself have agreed, subject to your Lordships' permission, to take the remainder of the afternoon for the purpose of ascertaining, first, whether or not there are any matters which ought to be cleared up or added to by some of the witnesses we have, or whether we could not close the case now; and, secondly, as to what the nature of the reply would be, and the extent of it, and what witnesses will be required. These two matters will require some little consideration, and we desire to have it in such a shape that the whole matter may be gone into immediately at 10 o'clock in the morning, if it suits your Lordships.

The Chancellor—Very well, then.

The commission adjourned at 3.25 till ten o'clock to-day.

Wheeling Home to Lunch

Just why so many people crowd into steamy, stuffy restaurants to eat lunch these hot days is not quite apparent. Nearly every person down town has an hour or more at noon to lunch. If it were only worked out most people would find that with the aid of a bicycle they could go home at noon, enjoy a lunch of home construction, and have a pleasant ride and a breath of air going and coming. Suppose you live a mile and a half or so out, it will require at the outside twelve or fifteen minutes to go home. Your lunch is laid in a cool, quiet dining room, and the beauty of it is you get just what you want and get it in comfort. You have half an hour for a light lunch and a rest, and then fifteen minutes to get back to work. Besides you've been an hour away from dust and turmoil of the down-town streets.

Old age is more or less contrary. It never agrees with a woman.

Hunt Sent Up

"Shorty" Hunt was arrested this morning on an old warrant and taken to jail. As there is a suspended sentence of one year in the Central Prison against Hunt, this will probably be put in force.

HERE'S A HEART POINTER

No beating about the bush for Aaron Nichols—he believes Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart cured his wife, and he says so straight.

"This is to certify that I bought two bottles of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the heart for my wife who has been for twenty years a great sufferer from Heart Disease. She had more benefit from it than from all the doctors that have attended her, and I am pleased to give this certificate of its wonderful curative powers."

Daily Intelligencer.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The Intelligencer is extremely glad to see that the Board of Trade last night took the hint given by this great family journal and placed itself on record as opposed to the deplorable state of affairs which exists in the local Post Office. Would it not be well for the City Council to make an effort in the same direction? We think so. No stone should be left unturned to bring about a betterment.

• • •

The resolution introduced by that aggressive and wide-awake gentleman, ex-Mayor Johnson, completely covers the ground, and it is gratifying to see the Postmaster, Mr. D. R. Leavens, place himself on record as in sympathy with it. Mr. Leavens, however, did not think people should run to the newspapers with their complaints; they should have gone to him. Perhaps he is right, but it may be pointed out casually that if all people who had complaints had interviewed Mr. Leavens personally he would have had little time left lately for either eating, drinking or sleeping.

• • •

Mr. McCamon placed himself on record as believing that the Post Office clerks are well paid. If Mr. McCamon thinks the present system is all right and that the clerks are well paid, it must naturally follow that the blame for the present condition of affairs rests with the clerks themselves. If the clerks are sufficiently paid and do not properly perform their duties, what about the responsibility attaching to Mr. McCamon and the other members of the West Hastings Reform Association, who recommended the appointment of the clerks?

• • •

Most people in this city, however, have a better opinion of the clerks than that inferentially expressed by Mr. McCamon. They probably do their best under discouraging circumstances, but of course feel (as expressed by Mr. Gordon last night) that an appointment to the local Post Office is only a stepping stone to something better, and have not either the ambition to master the duties of their positions or the feeling of permanence which would urge them to do so. No, the fault does not lie with the clerks. The fault lies with the system, which should never have been changed. Belleville got a good service under the old system, something which she surely has not at present.

• • •

The Intelligencer cannot but regret that certain members of the Board by their remarks gave the discussion a political aspect. The desire to see a change is not confined to Conservatives in this city. As a matter of fact, the complaints which have reached this office about the local Post Office have emanated, in seven cases out of ten, from gentlemen of Liberal leanings. This is no exaggeration.

• • •

It is suggestive, to say the least, to hear Mr. McCamon acknowledge that only by reading The Intelligencer did he find out there were complaints about the local Post Office. Like many other good Grits, he knows where to go to get the news.

• • •

We would respectfully suggest to the Board of Trade that, at its next meeting, it should pass a resolution urging the coal dealers of this city to reduce prices to the same level as obtains in Toronto and elsewhere, namely, $6.50 per ton.

• • •

The latest name for Belleville's new assessment is "The Guess Work Assessment." And the name seems to fit it like the paper on the wall.

• • •

We do not know that the city would be justified in taking over the gas works entirely, as suggested by Mr. W. P. Hudson last night, except as a last resort, but rather than let the works fall into the hands of a monopoly nearly anything would be justifiable.

• • •

The Misses Hays and Lady Rivers-Wilson had a stroll on Queen Victoria Park last night, and this morning expressed themselves as delighted with its beauty. One of the ladies, we are told, caught a black bass off the Grand Junction dock, but when the fish explained that this was the close season it was at once returned to the water.

• • •

Our friend Mr. Dooley says he will at once join the Board of Trade. He would like to be on the Breakfast Committee.

• • •

Having received a postal card which was 30 days overdue, Mr. C. P. Holton could not conscientiously vote for a resolution which found fault with the local Post Office.

• • •

We move that a leather medal be at once struck and presented to Mr. W. J. McCamon, License Inspector for West Hastings, the only man in sight who thinks the local Post Office is run as it ought to be.

• • •

Naturally, being a Grit official, Mr. McCamon is licensed to make jocular remarks.

• • •

But say, wouldn't it be a dreadful thing if any applications for licenses got stuck in the Post Office?

• • •

A local coal dealer gives the following reasons as an excuse for the fact that coal is 50 cents per ton higher here than in Toronto: 1st, Larger vessels go into Toronto than come up our bay, a saving of 10 cents per ton being thus made; 2nd, harbor tolls in Toronto are only 5 cents, while here they are 10 cents per ton; 3rd, weighing in Belleville costs 10 cents per ton, while in Toronto it is free. That accounts for 25 cents of the extra 50 charged in this city. Perhaps the cheapness of labor in Toronto as compared with Belleville accounts for the other 25 cents.

Columbia Beat the New Cup Defender.

Glencove, L.I., May 5.—It required just twenty minutes for the cup defender Columbia to demonstrate to-day that in a light wind and beating to windward she is a better boat than the new Herreshoff cup yacht Reliance.

Starting from a position to leeward and slightly astern of the Reliance, the Columbia sailed through the new boat's lee, tacked across her bow, and in the next leg of a mile and a half increased her lead to nearly a quarter of a mile. Reliance then withdrew. When the Columbia went through her lee, the Reliance kept off and voluntarily gave up the advantage of her windward position, but she was, none the less, decisively and emphatically outsailed.

This was the first brush between the two boats, and the sea was as smooth as a pond. Many who saw the brush to-day said that, despite her greater sail area, the Reliance is outclassed by the Columbia in a light wind, even if the sea be smooth, though her greater sail area, made possible by her powerful hull, was expected to enable her to give a good account of herself even in the Sound breezes. The critics also said that to-day's performance raises grave doubts whether Designer Herreshoff's second attempt to build a boat to beat the Columbia is any more of a success than his first.

His Last Appearance.

By A. P. Dobie.

WHEN Lemuel Cadbury proposed that the village of Slocum should hold a jubilee celebration, the younger citizens were delighted with the idea. Lemuel was head clerk in Ketchup's grocery, and was looked up to as a rising young man. Besides being the owner of a rolling bass voice, he had quite a turn for composing poetry, and many a time his thoughts were on higher things as he weighed out lard or measured molasses. His "Lines on the Death of Hannah McInnis" were considered very touching, and sorrowing relatives tried to enlist his sympathies when they wanted obituaries composed for the departed.

For some months Slocum had been enjoying exceptional musical advantages in the person of Professor Valentine Waterhouse, who came once a week from the city of Gridiron, fourteen miles distant, to instruct a few select pupils in vocal and instrumental music. As his class was large enough to necessitate his stopping over night in Slocum, his services were at once engaged to train those who were going to take part in the jubilee celebration.

The professor was an old young man of short stature, whose struggles with poverty and a callous public had left him lean and prematurely bald. He readily took upon himself the duty offered him by a delegation of Slocumites headed by Lem Cadbury, and practice was fixed for the following Wednesday evening. Notices were sent round to everybody in town, and the result was a round-up of all the people in Slocum who sang or thought they could. The first thing to be done was to fix the date for the celebration. The professor thought that two months would give ample time to prepare the music thoroughly; as it was getting on toward the end of October, the first week in January would be about right. And this date was decided on. The professor spoke blandly of several fine patriotic choruses and part-songs which would take well and be thoroughly up to date, and announced that at the next meeting he would assign the parts and begin practice in earnest.

But this was more easily said than done. When he came to assign the parts he found that all the men were basses and all the women insisted on singing soprano. In vain the professor assured the ladies that the second part was fully as important in chorus singing as the treble. Mrs. Ketchup, the grocer's wife, informed him that she would "sing second to nobody," and the others followed her lead. And the men were either too lazy or too timid to take a note higher than D flat. At length the professor waxed wroth. He told them he would try every voice, and that if they did not take the parts assigned them he would wash his hands of the whole affair.

Finally, out of the forty-two female voices he selected about seventeen or eighteen to sing alto, but as they had had no previous experience he had to teach them their parts by the sheer force of repetition. His success with the other parts was not so encouraging. There was not a true tenor among the whole fourteen male voices. Somehow the tenors of Slocum had fought shy of the jubilee. But the professor did not despair.

At the next meeting it was decided that an ode should be composed, to be set to music, in honor of the town of Slocum, and this delightful duty was assigned to Lemuel, as having the most intimate relations with the poetic muse. Next practice night Lemuel produced an ode of eleven verses, beginning as follows:

"Fair Slocum, dearest spot on earth,
Success to Thee and Thine!
We greet Thee, City of our birth,
And pledge Thee now in wine!"

This was considered a very fine effort, and quite the best thing he had hitherto done. Slocum was as yet only a town of some eighteen hundred inhabitants, but of course it would grow. But a peculiar and serious difficulty arose. Those who had temperance principles objected to pledging Slocum or any other place "in wine," and insisted that these sentiments must be changed or they would withdraw. This looked serious, so Lemuel sought the privacy of his chamber and after another seance with the muse produced the following, from which they could choose:

"Fair Slocum, may Thy woes grow less,
Thy blessings never fail!
We proudly drink to Thy success
In Pierce's Ginger Ale!"

or

"O Slocum, none than Thee more fair,
May Thy glories never fade!
We pledge Thee in a brimming bowl
Of sparkling Lemonade!"

Everyone felt that Lemuel had done what he could to conciliate all parties; but there was so much wrangling as to which verses to omit and which to retain that finally, on the suggestion of Ebenezer Young, who was something of a wag, they compromised by singing the whole thing, which amounted to thirteen verses—alas! unlucky number!

However, barring these minor matters, everything went well. The practices were well attended, the weekly meetings bore their usual crop of love affairs, and everybody was delighted. The accompanist was pretty Sadie Pendicott, the Mayor's daughter, and as she gracefully took her place at the piano mixing eyes in her direction; but after practice it was the professor who accompanied her home, poor Lemuel feeling that he had not the ghost of a chance against so much genius.

Lemuel as poet was admired and envied by everyone, till Professor Waterhouse set the ode to music. He was possessed of little originality, and the tune was a delightful combination of "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "Rock of Ages;" but it won all hearts, and the ladies declared it "awfully nice."

As the day fixed for the celebration drew near the professor began to grow anxious. No tenors had as yet put in an appearance. Names were mentioned of several who sang tenor, and these were sought out by the professor and his minions; but in spite of being cajoled and coaxed and bribed with prominent parts in the celebration they kept strictly out of the game. There was one man in particular that had been angled for to no purpose. This was no less a person than Aaron Pendicott, Mayor of Slocum. He was the fortunate possessor of a rich tenor voice, which time seemed to make more mellow. It was certain that if they could only get Aaron won over to the good cause several others would follow in his train. They would be sure to get Deacon Lillimug, who sang in a sort of falsetto; but, as Lem said, "it would pass all right in a crowd." Then there was Dave Stivers, a coffin-maker by trade, who had a wonderful voice, but not the least idea of tune. If he could be put alongside of someone who could keep him in the right key he was warranted to go like a trombone. And there were two or three others who were sure to join once the ice was broken. But the question was how to get Aaron Pendicott. Every means under the sun was tried except that of actually carrying him to the practice hall; as Aaron was a man who stood over six feet two in his stockings and weighed in the neighborhood of two hundred pounds, this plan was left as a last resort.

First Lemuel Cadbury and Ebenezer Young, the schoolmaster, formed themselves into a deputation and waited upon him, but Aaron said he had no time "to bother with any of these new lilts; he left them for the young folks." Several times Professor Waterhouse had broached the subject in the front parlor, backed up, of course, by the fair Sadie, but at last he was so sat upon that he thought it safest to drop the subject. Then the ladies thought they might be able to prevail, and a deputation headed by Mrs. Ketchup and Miss Prinks, the milliner, sought him out at his place of business, the Slocum Carriage Works. All their blandishments were wasted. Aaron was obdurate.

All this time the eventful day was drawing nearer. The singers were all well up in their parts, and the Slocum Band had commenced to practice with them. Bills were posted far and near, and notices were printed in all the leading papers. It had been decided at an early date that all the ladies were to wear white, and most of them were getting their gowns ready. But as yet there was no tenor. The professor and his committee were becoming desperate. If tenors could not be obtained before next practice night the jubilee must fall through. To try to sing choruses without tenors was like trying to make bricks without straw.

Great needs make men rise to great occasions. It was decided to make one supreme appeal to the flinty-hearted Aaron, and not to stop wrestling with him until he consented to sing. With the courage of desperate men, Professor Waterhouse, with his two accomplices, Lem and Ebenezer, bearded the carriage-maker in his den, and after a two hours' struggle Aaron consented to sing. In fact, he gave in as the only way out. Once having given his promise to help, Aaron went into the celebration with all his might. Every night he and the other delinquent tenors whom he had persuaded to join held practices with Miss Sadie in the front parlor, with such good results that when the final practice arrived they had their part perfect.

But if the professor believed that his difficulties were all over he was sadly mistaken. When he tried to arrange the altos behind the sopranos on the stage Mrs. Ketchup and Miss Prinks, who were getting new white silk gowns, strongly objected. If they were going to be hidden from the view of the audience they might as well stop at home. Here they had faithfully attended every practice and had consented to sing alto much against their will, just to oblige the professor, and now they were going to be shoved back out of sight, while that horrid Mrs. Tizzard and that bold minx of a Naylor girl were put right out in the front! They wouldn't stand it! In vain poor Professor Waterhouse used all the arts of flattery at his command. They flatly refused to sing unless they could be seen. To say that they had the professor in a tight place is but putting it genteelly. They must be pacified. It would never do to have any hitch, and the celebration only two nights away. He and Lemuel set the machinery of their mighty brains in motion and evolved a plan. They would have the singers seated in tiers upon the platform. There would be four rows of seats, one above another, of which the two in front would be filled by the sopranos and altos in their white gowns, while behind them and forming a background would be the tenors and basses. This would afford every singer an opportunity to see and be seen. At a very small cost the seats could be put together just for the eventful evening, and everyone thought that when the curtain rose the effect would be fine indeed. To Deacon Lillimug was assigned the duty of getting the seats made at once, so that they could be in place the next evening for the final rehearsal, and others of the men were told off to decorate the old Town Hall and get it into such form as would do honor to the great occasion. Every town and village has its jack-knife carpenter, and Slocum was no exception. The deacon decided to give the carpentering job to Daniel Hemphill, a very deserving man who was always so hard up that it was a charity to put anything in his way. He was not chosen because of his skill as a carpenter, but because he was such a godly man and the father of nine small children. True, he had never been known to do a satisfactory job in his life, but are we not told that "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord"?

All the next day a mighty upheaval was going on in the old Town Hall, which, by the way, had been the scene of a chicken-show a couple of days before. After the sawdust had been removed by the barrel, the floor was scraped and swept and scrubbed with all the energy that Slocum could muster. But all the water of Jordan and all the soap of Slocum could never remove the odor which hung like incense throughout its ancient precincts. That had become as much a part of the Town Hall as the very walls. Small boys could be seen scurrying in all directions, borrowing flags and bunting from various of the Slocum merchants, reluctant to lend, but not daring to refuse. Business was almost suspended, as nearly all the men in the village were tacking up mottoes and inscriptions, such as "God Bless Our Native Town!" "Slocum, We Rise to Greet Thee!" and others. Daniel, the godly parent of the nine small offspring, had made the four rows of seats, and there they stood on the platform with the fresh look of new lumber which was quite inviting.

The final rehearsal was a triumph. Not a single flaw marred its course. The professor asked the men on the two rear rows "to sit as softly as possible," as the seats, being only temporary, might not be quite secure. This was a very necessary precaution, as all the basses and tenors were heavily-built men, and it was best to be on the safe side.

Long looked for comes at last! The jubilee night had arrived. Long before the doors of the Town Hall were opened crowds waited in orderly rows on the sidewalk. People from all the neighboring towns within a radius of twenty miles had come to do honor to Slocum. The building was packed, and hundreds were turned away disappointed. Professor Waterhouse felt that his hour of triumph had at last arrived, and he cavorted excitedly around, giving orders and seeing to things in general. When Lemuel thought of his ode he saw Fame just within his grasp. And what pen can describe the costumes of the performers on that eventful night in Slocum's history? All the ladies were in white, except Miss Clancy, the dressmaker, who had been so busy making the new gowns of the other Slocum ladies that she did not get her own finished. She wore the waist, an elaborate creation, but had to be satisfied to appear in an old black skirt. But as she sat among the altos this, of course, would not be noticed. Every gentleman that was not fortunate enough to possess a black coat borrowed one, and it is safe to say that every dress suit in Slocum was on duty at the celebration. All were faultless as to collars, ties and coats; but there were various delinquencies as to footgear. They fondly imagined that, owing to the arrangement of the seats, their feet would not be visible, so most of them wore just whatever happened to feel comfortable. There was a wonderful assortment of old overshoes, cowhides guiltless of blacking, and boots whose patched soles and well-ventilated uppers bespoke the economy of their owners. Ebenezer Young, having been troubled for some time with corns, wore an elaborate pair of crimson plush slippers embroidered on the toes with gold sunflowers. They had been the gift of his best girl the previous Christmas, and besides being gorgeous were comfortable.

Precisely at half-past eight the curtain rose upon the four tiers of smiling and self-satisfied singers. The professor raised his baton amid the hush that pervaded the throng. The singers rose as one man and began the ode. It took some time to sing through the whole thirteen verses, and when they finished they sat down amid applause which was deafening. Whether it was the applause that turned their heads it is impossible to say, but they forgot to "sit softly." Above the clapping of hands was heard a sound like the cracking of the roof on a winter's night magnified many times. Then followed an appalling crash. It seemed to the audience that a forest of black sleeves and white cuffs, surmounted by sheets of music, rose in the air; then the basses and tenors disappeared backwards, madly plunging. Alas! for the fell results of the number thirteen! The seats had given way. The confusion was frightful. Ebenezer Young, who sat at the end, tried to stop himself by clutching wildly at some of the bunting which decorated the wings. It only served, however, to hinder his exit a moment or two while the audience had a blurred view of crimson and gold-embroidered feet pawing the air. The arms and legs of Deacon Lillimug struck out in a vain endeavor to seize a nearby post, like the tendrils of a honeysuckle seeking a support to cling to.

The effect upon the audience was like that of an electric shock. Some were alarmed, some indignant, some when they thought of the array of feet so ruthlessly exposed to view, laughed till they cried. Old Mrs. Scroggie, who was very deaf and had not been inside the hall for over twenty years, took it all as a matter of course, thinking it some new way of celebrating jubilees.

But more than the dignity of some of the singers was hurt. Young Mr. Styles, a rising young dentist, was so badly hurt that a doctor had to be summoned on to the stage. Aaron Pendicott struck his head on a rusty nail in a piece of board which the deserving Daniel had left lying around loose, and seven of the unlucky jubilee-celebrators were carried to their homes on stretchers.

Very soon after daylight the next morning a tall and portly figure, armed with a snake-whip, might have been seen waiting outside Daniel Hemphill's door. An hour or so later his patience was rewarded, and when Daniel started out he was met by Aaron Pendicott, who administered as severe a drubbing as a much less godly man than Daniel might have looked for. Aaron then made a visit to Lemuel Cadbury, with the result that Lemuel, the poet of Slocum, was incapacitated for business for the space of a week. Rumor has it that he also held an interview with Professor Valentine Waterhouse, with the result that that gentleman has never since been seen in Slocum. Aaron felt that he had been basely misled and humiliated by these three gentlemen, and took the law into his own hands to obtain satisfaction. Even to this day it is not wise to allude in his presence to the Slocum jubilee, which was his last appearance.

Did Burns Write "Comin' thro' the Rye?"

London "Truth."

Mr. Carruthers Gould, in his clever caricature concerning a recent election which resulted in the Liberal candidate "Comin' Thro' the Rye," has, I see, adopted the reading that the "Rye" was a cornfield. It has generally been understood that the Rye referred to was the rivulet in Ayrshire where Burns and his boy friends teased the girls who were wading through the stream with their skirts tucked up, the damsels preferring to be kissed rather than to allow their petticoats to drop into the water. But, although the fact is little known, there is authority for Mr. Gould's reading, at any rate if the lines scratched on a pane of glass at Mauchline be genuinely by Burns. They run:

"Gin a body kiss a body comin' through the grain,
Need a body grudge a body what's a body's ain."

When, however, the song was first heard in London at a pantomime in 1795, it began, "If a body meet a body going to the fair." But, although I should not like to say so in the presence of a Scotsman, there has always, I fancy, been a doubt whether the lines are by Burns at all.

Far-Reaching.

When Mrs. Grundy starts a tale
Of gossip winging far and wide,
The way it speeds o'er hill and dale,
And spreads from town to countryside,
You'd scarce believe 'twas whispered low
In secrecy's most guarded tone—
You'd think, to have it travel so,
She must have used a megaphone.

Mainly About People.

A Yankee tourist who called on Robert Burns's widow, Jean Armour, a few years after his death, had the audacity to ask her: "Can you show me any relics of the poet?" "Sir," answered the old lady, with majestic dignity, "I am the only relict of Robert Burns."

Sir William Kennedy, in his book, "Sport in the Navy," tells the story of a retired boatswain who hired a boy to call him every morning at daybreak with the words, "The captain wants you," merely for the pleasure of saying, "Tell him I won't come," and turning over and going to sleep again.

Among the guests at a dinner in New York given in honor of Daniel Webster was Dr. Benjamin Brandreth, the inventor of a celebrated pill known by his name. A witty guest proposed the following voluntary toast: "To Daniel Webster and Benjamin Brandreth, the pillars of the Constitution."

On a recent day's outing in Westchester County, N.Y., Ernest Haskell, the artist, was painting a bit of the green hillside when a farmer came along, looked at the half-finished water-color, then gazed, much puzzled, at three flat pans containing water which the artist had put on the ground close at hand. Turning away with a look of disgust, he remarked half-aloud: "Homeopath, by gosh!"

An intimate friend of President Grant said to him one day, "General, my little boy has heard that all great men write poor hands, but he says he believes you are a great man in spite of the fact that you write your signature so plainly that anybody can read it." The President took a card from his pocket, wrote his name on it, and handed it to him. "Give that to your boy," he said, "and tell him it is the signature of a man who is not at all great—but that fact must be kept a secret between him and me."

It is told of Bishop Williams of Connecticut, for many years presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in America, who lived all his life a bachelor, that he was talking one day with a young man from the West about a tax a Western State was trying to impose on bachelors, the tax to be increased a certain per cent. for every ten years of bachelorhood. "Why, bishop," said the young man, "at your age you would have to pay about $100 a year." "Well," said the bishop, quietly, and in his old-time vernacular, "it's wuth it."

An Irishman, being annoyed by a howling dog in the night, jumped out of bed to dislodge the offender. It was in the month of January, when the snow was two feet deep. As he did not return his wife went out to see what was the matter, and found him in his nightshirt in the middle of the road, with his teeth chattering and the whole of his body almost paralyzed with cold, holding the struggling dog by the tail. "Good gracious, Pat!" said she, "what would ye be afther?" "Hush!" said he, "don't ye see I'm trying to fraze the baste?"

The old Bridewell burying ground, which is now the subject of legislation in the English Parliament, is the resting place of Mme. Creswell, so often mentioned by the Charles II. dramatists, who died in Bridewell Prison, and left £10 for a sermon to be preached at her funeral, on condition that nothing should be said of her but what was well. The preacher got out of the difficulty rather neatly by saying: "All that I shall say of her is this: She was born well, she lived well and she died well; for she was born with the name of Creswell, she lived in Clerkenwell and she died in Bridewell."

It has been said of the Southern darkey that he has not always a clear idea as to property rights, but on some points it appears that he is not in the least hazy. An old colored man in the days "befo' de wah" was given one of his master's cast-off hats, which he wore with great pride. One Sunday his master met him coming home from a camp-meeting in a pouring rain, bareheaded and holding his hat under his coat. Later on the master questioned him jocosely: "Why didn't you wear your hat, Jerry? Did you feel the need of cooling your head?" "You see it's like dis, sah," responded Jerry. "My head is yours, but my hat is mine, and nachelly I feels like taking care ob it, sah."

When Lord Beaconsfield was at the height of his fame, one of his most ardent supporters in the House of Commons asked as a signal favor that he might bring his son to Downing street, and that "the greatest man of the age" would give the boy some wise maxim of word of counsel which might in after years be the treasure and guide of his life. Lord Beaconsfield, old and gouty, groaned, but consented. The proud papa duly produced young hopeful, whom the veteran statesman thus addressed: "My dear young friend, whatever you do in after life, mind that you never ask who wrote the 'Letters of Junius,' or on which side of Whitehall Charles I. was beheaded. For if you do either of those things you will be considered a bore, and that is something too dreadful for you at your tender age to conceive."

Simplified Oratorios.

The new minister of the First Church in Banbury was consulting the organist as to the music to be sung on his first Sunday.

"And besides the hymn-tunes," said the organist, whose daily occupation was that of plumber and iceman for the village, "we always have two selections from the choir, from real classical music, generally from one of Handel's or Haydn's oratorios.

"Why, that is good news," said the minister, who was no mean musician and had a cultivated taste and ear; "but don't you find the music rather difficult for untrained singers?"

"Well, they aren't untrained, for I train 'em," said the organist, with some resentment. "And besides that, where the music's difficult I alter it for 'em. I strike out all the cadenzas and trills and things of that kind; and where the tune runs too low or too high I either set it up or down an octave. Or if I can't do that I just have 'em quit singing and I put on the vox humana stop and play the tune till it gets into their range again. It's easy enough when you know how to do."

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation. —Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

TIMELY TOPICS

Fra Diavolo is being sung at a Toronto theatre, but then, according to the Ministerial Association, some sort of a Diavolo is always in evidence in Queen City places of amusement.

• • •

The fighting editor of the Ottawa Citizen, Capt. Morrison, has for some time been engaged in a spectacular war with the coal dealers of the Capital. Mainly through the efforts of The Citizen a corporation coal yard was instituted last winter, which helped to keep down the prices, and lately one of The Citizen's staunchest friends started an independent coal yard, which the regular coal dealers are fighting tooth and nail. Naturally, the good people of Ottawa are greatly interested in the matter, and a prominent citizen of the Capital writes to The Citizen with a proposition which if adopted, looks as though it might prove to be a solution of the difficulty which apparently confronts the people of many places, namely, the probability of having to pay exorbitant prices for one of the necessities of life.

• • •

The tenor of the letter in question may be gathered by the following comments regarding it in The Citizen:

The suggestion of our correspondent is that the citizens form a joint stock company with a capital of a certain figure in $1 shares for which consumers will subscribe according to the amount of coal they require. This would have all the advantages of a municipal organization. It would have the additional moral effect that the coal ring would hardly dare try to freeze it out of existence by the methods which prove effective in the case of private competitive dealers. If 4,000 or 5,000 householders of Ottawa were shareholders in the company and the ring attacked it, the company would have sufficient political and other influence to have the law put rigorously in action in a manner which would achieve one of two results, almost equally beneficial: Either the company would vindicate its right to existence as a competitive factor in the coal business, or it would destroy the ring which at present exists not only in Ottawa but throughout Ontario to control the supply of anthracite that comes into this province and forces the consumer to pay "all that the people will stand for."

• • •

It is believed that by following the plan in question stockholders would get their coal at cost, get proper weight or measure, and the supply would be assured. The capital, of course, in a smaller place, might be greatly reduced, but the principle would apply to all places where consumers think they are not being fairly treated. No one, of course, begrudges any merchant a fair profit, but coal prices in this city, where transportation is easy, should compare favorably with any place in Canada. Why, it may be asked, should coal be $7 a ton here now, while it sells at $6.50 in Toronto? Is it "because people will stand for it" and because they cannot help themselves? If the dealers think so it is time the consumers co-operated and taught them a much-needed lesson.

• • •

A correspondent writes: "The Conger Coal Company and other dealers in Toronto are selling coal to the public at $6.50 per ton. Why $7 in Belleville?" Why, indeed? It is time for the coal coon to come down.

DAISY GORDON'S FOLLY

—OR—

THE WORLD LOST FOR LOVE'S SAKE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY,

Author of "The Crime of Hallow-E'en," "The Flirtations of a Beauty," "Willful Gaynell," "Little Leafy," "Only a Mechanic's Daughter," etc.

She walked quickly home — somehow the world seemed a little changed to her. Of course it was the same path she had known for years, but this morning it seemed different; the light of the sun seemed more golden — the fragrance from the flowers in the orchard as she passed by seemed more sweet; even the birds in the branches seemed to be singing a new song.

Margy was surprised at the lovely flush on her face and the happy light in her blue eyes as she entered the kitchen.

"Has the child been lonely?" asked Farmer Gordon, anxiously, of Margy, that afternoon.

"No," answered Margy, slowly, "she has quite forgotten the keen disappointment of being left behind; she has been singing like a bird all the afternoon," and the farmer smiled quite contentedly, little dreaming what made his beautiful young daughter so happy.

The days that followed flew by on golden wings to Daisy. It so happened that no day passed in which she did not see Harold St. John.

It was never by appointment —always by accident as Daisy supposed. And she grew to look forward to seeing him with an eagerness that even she little dreamed of herself.

Oh, foolish, beautiful hours spent by the brook- side or wandering through the glen. The fortnight had almost slipped by, on the morrow was to be the great lawn- fete at Briar Hall, and the following day Hetty and Olive were to return.

Looking into that lovely childish face, Harold St. John was not quite sure whether she loved him or not, and the thought was shaping itself in his heart whether or not he should ever be able to win her —or if he should have to leave her at last.

He loved her for herself, but for all that he would have passed her by, if it had not been for the three millions.

CHAPTER IV.

Only a Farmer's Daughter.

At first Harold St. John became interested in pretty Daisy Gordon, because she was so indifferent to his homage; but as the days flitted by he learned to love her with an intensity that surprised even himself. To youth, love's sweet dream comes quickly; yet there was a reason—ay, and a grave one —why he should have gone on his way and not braved fate by loving this fair young girl.

It was the last day but one before the lawn- fete, and Harold stood with Daisy at the old trysting-place beneath the peach tree, telling her the time had come at last when he must bid her farewell.

"Shall you miss me when I am gone?" he asked. "I am going away tonight, and the keenest pain I have ever known will be leaving you, Daisy."

The startled expression in the lovely blue eyes, half veiled by those long, curling, golden lashes, answered him as no words could have done. Poor Daisy! a great wave of desolation and sorrow swept over her. After tonight it would be all over — this beautiful friendship, these happy hours, these sunny days that she had thought would have no ending. Her dimpled face grew white, and her hands trembled. What would life be to her after he went away?

"Oh, how I wish," he cried, "that I dare tell you something else! I feel like a man whose life is at stake, I long, yet fear to speak. Have you read the beautiful play of 'Romeo and Juliet?' —how love came to Romeo like the swift dart of an arrow the first time he ever looked upon the face of fair Juliet? He loved her as truly as though he had known her long years."

"Yes, I have read the play," she murmured; and looking eagerly into the sweet, downcast face, he took heart of grace, he bent his dark, handsome head over the little white hand, whispering softly:

"Ought I to go away in silence, and let a secret longing eat out my heart? Ah, yes; I know that is what I should do, but I cannot— I must speak. It is this: —What happened to Romeo has happened to me; my heart has left me and has gone out to you. Oh, are you very angry, dear?"

He saw her lovely, dimpled face flush, and the beautiful blue eyes that had been regarding him so wonderingly drop swiftly in the sweetest girlish confusion. Still she was not angry, and that was one point gained. If she would only listen to his pleadings, to the eloquent love stories he knew so well how to tell, he felt sure that he would win her.

"It is true," he murmured, emboldened by her blushes. "I —love —you; won't you tell me my love has not been in vain? Tell me, do you care for me? Does my going bring one pang to your heart?"

For a moment a dead silence fell between them. Daisy's heart throbbed so loudly she felt sure he must hear it. To have won a heart so completely, so entirely, so quickly, was a grand thing to have done, it seemed to her. It was like the romantic stories she had read of. She was pleased, flattered; but it was at the same time very embarrassing. Daisy did not know in the least what to do or say; still it was delightful to have this little change in her monotonous young life, of which her gay, restless spirit had grown so weary.

"Shall you miss me when I am gone?" he asked, drawing a little nearer to her.

"You know that I shall miss you, Mr. St. John," she answered simply.

His going was like the setting of the sun and the gloom of night to the flowers.

He caught the little hands in a very transport of joy.

"I believe you do care for me, my Lily," he cried. "I am going to put it to the test. Grant me the favor of letting me see you just once again. Meet me tonight here where we are parting now, just for one brief half hour when the moon is shining. It will be for the last time," he pleaded. "I wonder how desperate the prayer of a dying man is? I should like to make mine the same: it is life or death to me. Will you come, sweet Lily? Let me see you for one brief half hour."

Her better sense said "No," but he looked so handsome, so agitated, and it was all so novel, so piquant, so romantic.

"Perhaps I may come," she answered timidly.

"Ah, you will come?" he cried, and the next moment he had bent his handsome head and kissed her, and for long hours after he had gone that kiss, the first ever pressed upon them by a lover, burned her scarlet lips.

That afternoon, when she was alone in her own little room at the farmhouse she took down the well- worn copy of Shakespeare from the shelf —yes, her romance had been very like Juliet's.

It was sweet to be wooed in such a fashion; it was very pleasant to listen to tender, caressing words from a lover's lips; but whether she loved him with such a love, as deep as Juliet's for handsome Romeo, she could hardly tell; she was afraid not.

Farmer Gordon was smoking his pipe on the door- step when Daisy emerged from the house that evening, her straw hat hanging from her arm by its blue ribbons.

"Where are you going, lass?" he inquired, blowing the wreaths of blue smoke away from her bronzed face.

"Only down to the peach orchard, papa," she answered, a little confusedly, her bright eyes drooping beneath his gaze.

"Do you want me to go along, pet?" he asked.

"No, indeed, papa," she answered in dismay.

"Poor little lass, she's lonesome without Olive and Hetty," he mused, as he watched the slim, graceful figure flit away in the moonlight.

With swift feet Daisy sped onward; as she neared the orchard she saw a tall figure pacing impatiently up and down in the moonlight.

He heard her quick step and turned.

"My Lily!" he cried, starting forward in joyful eagerness and clasping her hands, "how good of you to come! I knew I was asking the greatest possible favor. I hardly dared hope that you would grant it."

"I can stay but a few minutes," she answered timidly. "Papa will miss me shortly, and if I do not return soon he will come out into the grounds in search of me, Mr. St. John."

"Won't you call me Harold?" he asked eagerly; "the name of Mr. St. John sounds so formal."

Together they sat down on a mossy log beside the murmuring brook, and, as he turned his face toward her in the moonlight, Daisy was startled to see how white and haggard it was.

"I have so much to say to you, Lily, that I hardly know how to begin," he said at length. "On your yes or no tonight depends my whole future. My life, my well or evil doing, all depend on what you shall say to me tonight."

Daisy looked up anxiously at him.

"I do not understand," she said, simply. "You— you— frighten me, Mr.— Mr.— Harold."

He was silent for a moment, and she guessed rather than knew that some great struggle was going on in his mind.

(To be continued.)

Ills That Come With Constipation

EMPHASIZE THE NECESSITY OF KEEPING THE KIDNEYS, LIVER AND BOWELS REGULAR AND ACTIVE BY USING

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Did you ever ask a person who has had appendicitis what was the cause of their ailment? Did you ever question a person recovering from typhoid fever as to what brought on the disease?

If you have we venture to say that in each case you will find constipation to be at the beginning of the trouble.

And yet you neglect to keep the bowels regular. It may be you have not resorted to proper treatment. This is why we suggest the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

It is well known that bile is nature's cathartic, and hence it is necessary to keep the liver actively engaged in filtering the bile from the blood and pouring it into the intestines. When the bowels become constipated the kidneys and liver become clogged as well, and no mere purgative will afford lasting relief.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills not only regulate the bowels, but also strengthen and invigorate the action of the liver and kidneys, and so ensure a cleansing of the whole system. It is undoubtedly this direct and combined action of this great medicine on the filtering and excretory organs of the body that makes it so successful where other remedies fail.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills positively cure kidney disease, liver complaint, biliousness and constipation. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

improvement, but he did not agree altogether with the resolution.

Ald. Sinclair—"We all feel that the Post Office could be improved, the same as our own business." He believed the change in the status of the Post Office was made after careful consideration. He believed the Post Office Department at Ottawa did what was done in regard to the Belleville Post Office after mature deliberation. He would like the resolution amended so as to ask Sir Wm. Mulock to improve the service. The resolution as proposed, he thought, would be like a red rag held before a bull. He would like to have the resolution worded so that all could support it, which could not be done as it was now worded.

Mayor Graham suggested that the resolution be amended so that all could support it.

Col. Ponton—What we want is that the Post Office be restored to its former status. This was essential and would create a better standing for the clerks.

Mr. Leavens stated that Mr. Ross, an inspector, intended coming here shortly, but this resolution, if adopted, might be the means of keeping him away.

Mr. Johnson asked what was the matter with the resolution. In view of what had been stated he would withdraw the resolution and allow the public to judge of the matter, through the newspaper reports.

The Chairman said he regretted that Mr. Johnson had withdrawn the resolution.

Mr. McCamon—"I concur in the first paragraph of the resolution and think that that is all that is necessary."

Mr. Johnson—"After some further consideration I leave the resolution in the hands of the Chairman, to do with it as he pleases."

Ald. Sinclair said he did not believe that Sir Wm. Mulock would be dictated to by the Board of Trade of this city. He considered that it would be a waste of a two cent stamp to send such a resolution to the Postmaster-General.

Mayor Graham thought that there was nothing disrespectful in the resolution.

Mr. Johnson considered that it was only by having the former status of the Post Office restored that efficiency could be secured.

Mr. McCamon thought that just as efficient service could be secured under the present status of the Post Office as would be if the office were under the Civil Service system.

Mr. Gordon stated that the Post Office as at present conducted was a stepping stone to something better. He did not think that Sir Wm. Mulock was such a thin-skinned man that the resolution would insult him. He would support it.

The Resolution Amended.

After a brief consultation between some of the members, Mr. Johnson assented to the amending of the resolution by striking out the words "The Honorable, the Postmaster-General," and substituting therefore the words "Post Office Department."

The motion as amended was then voted upon and carried, there being only three votes against it, namely, Ald. Sinclair, Mr. C. P. Holton and Mr. McCamon. Some gentlemen did not vote, however.

This concluded the business for the evening and the Board adjourned.

THE POOR DYSPEPTIC

IS THE MOST MISERABLE OF MORTALS—ONLY SIMILAR SUFFERERS CAN UNDERSTAND HIS HOURS OF AGONY.

There is no mortal more miserable than the poor dyspeptic. He is never healthy, never happy—always ailing, always out of sorts. Every mouthful of food brings hours of distress—every moment of the day is spoiled and soured.

If you are a dyspeptic, you know the signs; the coated tongue, the dull headaches, the heartburn, the biliousness, the persistent torment after meals, the hopeless despondency. Any one of these signs points to indigestion. The one sure cure for indigestion is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new blood—that's the whole secret. Through the blood they will brace up your strength, waken your liver and set your stomach right. If you ask your neighbors you will find proof of this right at your own home. Mr. Charles Wood, Mara, Ont., one of the thousands of dyspeptics cured by the use of these pills, says:—"For upwards of twelve years I was a great sufferer from indigestion and nervousness. Everything I ate tortured me. I doctored almost continuously, and used almost everything recommended for this trouble, but never got more than temporary relief until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Words cannot express the good these pills have done me. I am in better health than I have enjoyed in years before, and I have proved that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure when other medicines fail."

Bad blood is the mother of filthy diseases, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure them all, because they convert bad blood into good, rich, red blood, without which there can be neither health nor strength. Don't be persuaded to try something else—take nothing but the genuine Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent post paid at 50c a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SUITS FOR MEN

The Entirely Different Sorts.

Not satisfied with equaling in style, fit and excellence of workmanship the made-to-measure garments the best tailors produce, our makers are now fashioning their suits from the same fabrics which have heretofore been exclusive with the Custom Tailors.

Our showing of these suits is very extensive.

They are suits that the average man wants—they give him the style and exclusiveness he seeks without the extra cost of the tailors.

Even the most expert criticism will fail to discover that these suits were not custom made.

The brood showing we make including as it does every size for men of different propostions practically assurs a perfect fit for every man.

But in some cases an exact fit cannot be secured immediately and then we do as the tailors would do at a try on—make the necessary alterations that would secure perfection of fit.

Fancy mixed cashmeres—neat effects in Cheviots—three and four button sack styles including the new straight front.

BREAKFASTED WITH DISTINGUISHED PARTY

DELEGATION FROM BOARD OF TRADE DELIGHTFULLY ENTERTAINED THIS MORNING — MATTERS OF INTEREST TO BELLEVILLE DISCUSSED.

In accordance with the resolution of the Board of Trade, and in response to the kind invitation extended by the President and Directors of the Grand Trunk Railway, the following gentlemen, representing the Board, were entertained at breakfast this morning in the President's and General Manager's private cars, viz: President C. M. Stork, Vice-President C. M. Reid, Mayor Graham, ex-Mayor Johnson, Colonel Ponton, W. J. McCamon and W. E. Foster.

These gentlemen met, and had a very pleasant social and very satisfactory business interview with Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, Sir William Young, Mr. Smithers, General Manager Hays, 3rd Vice-President Morse, Mr. McGuigan and other officials.

Belleville's representatives were hospitably entertained, and Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, in acknowledging the resolution of the Board of Trade, expressed the great satisfaction of himself and his colleagues at this public recognition of the great Canadian work which was being projected, a work which was needed even under existing circumstances in Canada, but which was also expected to do Canada a great deal of good in her forward march in the near future.

The Mayor, Col. Ponton, and Mr. C. M. Stork breakfasted with Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson; Messrs. McCamon, Johnson and Reid with Mr. Hays and daughters, whose charming affability delighted their guests. During breakfast, matters of local interest, such as the re-opening of the connecting link between Madoc and Eldorado, the facilities of local traffic, the possible establishment of additional works here, and the consideration of the local industries now being promoted, were taken up, and favorably considered.

Sir Charles pleasantly recalled the fact that the records of the Company showed that 50 years ago Mr. John Bell, K.C., was, as now, acting as solicitor of the G.T.R., and that two of the first directors of the road were the late Hon. John Ross and the late William Hamilton Ponton.

Subsequently Lady Wilson was introduced to the party, and a very pleasant quarter of an hour was spent in conversation regarding the Bay of Quinte, and the two previous experiences of the visitors in this district, which they were good enough to say always carried with them pleasant recollections.

The distinguished party left for the East at 9.30.

DIED IN WINNIPEG

DEMISE OF A GENTLEMAN WHO HAS MANY RELATIVES IN THIS VICINITY.

A despatch was received in this city yesterday afternoon, announcing the death at Winnipeg on Monday of Mr. Robert Gordon, of that city, after four days' illness. Mr. Gordon was the oldest son of Mr. John Gordon, of the Lodgeroom, near Tweed, and was born there in 1851. He went to Manitoba about fifteen years ago, and, like his other brothers there, succeeded in his business enterprises. Two years ago he entered into partnership with his brother, Elliott, as ranchers, the firm being known as Gordon & Gordon.

Mr. Gordon spent some weeks in this county and city last winter, renewing old friendships. He was then in the enjoyment of the best of health, and the news of his death will be a shock to many.

Mr. Gordon married Miss Dafoe, of Bogart, a sister of D. Dafoe, of Madoc. She and a family of five daughters and one son are bereaved of a most affectionate husband and father. Mr. W. H. Gordon, of this city, and the deceased were cousins and were chums in their boyhood days. The Intelligencer extends its sympathy to the numerous relatives in Manitoba and this county.

INFLAMED NOSE AND THROAT

And such diseases of the respiratory organs as bronchitis, weak lungs, cold in the head and nasal catarrh, are treated with marvellous success on strictly scientific principles by Catarrhozone. The medicated vapor of Catarrhozone quickly traverses every air passage possible to be reached by any treatment. All soreness, pain, congestion and inflammation are at once dispelled, and by means of the healing powers of Catarrhozone the vitiated tissues are quickly restored. Where Catarrhozone is used colds last only ten minutes, coughs half an hour, and catarrh, consumption, asthma and bronchitis flee as from fire. A trial will convince anyone of the startling merit of Catarrhozone. Costs $1.00, small size 25c. At druggists', or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE POST OFFICE DISCUSSED BY THE BOARD OF TRADE

Ex Mayor Johnson Introduces a Resolution Asking That Affairs be Bettered

Postmaster Leavens Concurs, but Other Grit Speakers Object to the Resolution

Only Three Vote Against it, However—Deputation Waits on Eminent Visitors

The meeting of the Board of Trade last night was, without exception, probably the banner meeting in the history of that organization. The attendance was exceptionally large, and the interest displayed gratifying. The principal subject discussed was the necessity for a change in the present service at the local Post Office, and the discussion, always earnest, at times waxed exceedingly warm.

The following were present at the meeting: Messrs. J. W. Johnson, W. P. Hudson, D. R. Leavens, C. M. Reid, A. McGie, E. Naylor, Col. Ponton, W. H. Gordon, C. P. Holton, Wm. Johnson, Rev. Dr. Crothers, J. Mackie, sr., A. McGinnis, W. J. McCamon, Ald. Pope, G. Wallbridge, C. Clapp, J. A. Tousaw, Dr. Boyce, J. W. McNab, H. C. Hunt, Ald. Sinclair, D. Price and A. E. Lewis.

In the absence of the Chairman, Mr. C. M. Stork, Mr. C. M. Reid, Vice-President, occupied the chair.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and unanimously adopted.

Resolutions Not Forwarded.

Mr. Johnson asked if the resolutions passed at the Board had been forwarded to the City Council. Some important matters had been discussed and resolutions passed, but, judging from the newspaper reports of the Council proceedings, no resolutions had reached that body.

The Secretary said it was no doubt his duty to do so, but he had forgotten it. These matters would be attended to by him in the future.

Col. Ponton said one Alderman had told him that no resolution had ever been sent to the City Council from the Board. The desire of the Board was to communicate matters to the City Council. There was no programme for this evening's meeting on the notice which had been sent out to the members of the Board. The Board had been revived and the public were watching the proceedings. The relation of banks to the public was a subject that was proposed at the last meeting by ex-Mayor Johnson, and should have been on the notice for discussion at this meeting.

The Chairman said he hoped the Secretary would in future attend to these matters. It was rather a slur on the Board that matters were not forwarded to the proper authorities.

Communications.

A communication was read from Mayor Graham, stating that he would not attend the meeting, as there was no programme for the evening.

A communication was read from Rev. Dr. Chown, of Toronto, in reference to political corruption, and asking bodies to assist in putting it down. The communication was from a branch of the Methodist Church, of which Dr. Chown is Secretary.

Dr. P. G. Goldsmith was proposed and accepted as a member of the Board.

The Gas Question.

Ex-Mayor Johnson spoke in reference to the gas question. He had not heard from Mr. Noxon, directly or indirectly, in reference to the matters. He had intended to advertise in Montreal and Toronto papers in reference to the leasing of the concern, but Mr. Noxon was being communicated with and he would wait a day or two to see if that gentleman intended to take any action.

Distinguished Visitors.

Col. Ponton stated that distinguished gentlemen connected with the G.T.R. Company were in the city, and he desired to know if a delegation of the Board might not wait on these gentlemen in reference to matters appertaining to that railway. This line was important to the city. He asked Ald. Pope if a deputation from the Board would be received.

Ald. Pope said he had no doubt the officials would be pleased to receive a visit from a deputation from the Board. The future of the G.T.R. here was problematical. A large increase of trade on the Midland would be of benefit to Belleville. He (the speaker) would ascertain if a deputation would be received and when.

The Chairman spoke of the special trains which used to run into the city on market days, which brought many here and proved beneficial to the merchants. This matter might be discussed with the G.T.R. officials.

Ex-Mayor Johnson said that these trains had been abolished all along the line.

Gas Question Again.

The chairman said it would be disastrous to the city if the gas concern was allowed to lapse. There was a possibility that the works might be closed for a time and if anything could be done to prevent this the works might be closed for a time, and if anything could be done to prevent this the Board should take action.

Mr. Hudson was in favor of the city buying the gas works and running them. He believed it would be a paying investment. He suggested that this matter be brought to the attention of the Council.

Ald. Pope stated that this matter had been brought up before the Council, but nothing definite had been heard from Mr. Noxon, who was looked upon as a probable lessee. A proposition for the Council to assume the mortgages had been made. If Mr. Noxon did not take hold of the works then the city should do something in the matter.

Mayor Graham came in.

G. T. R. Matters Again.

Moved by Col. Ponton, seconded by Mr. W. J. McCamon, "That this Board takes the opportunity of the presence in Belleville of the President, General Manager and other officials of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada to express and record their cordial approval of the proposed construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railroad system which will constitute another Imperial link in the chain of commerce and of Imperial unity, and will develop and open up the fertile fields of Canada's great Northwest. This Board pledges itself to do all possible to further this great national undertaking.

"Resolved, that a committee consisting of the President, Vice-President, the Mayor, Ex-Mayor Johnson, Colonel Ponton and W. J. McCamon, Esq., wait upon the President and officials of the Grand Trunk Railway and present to them a copy of this resolution and also confer with them regarding matters of local and mutual interest and moment."

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

Ald. Pope left the meeting in order to meet the G.T.R. magnates and ascertain when the deputation might wait upon them. He returned in a few minutes and stated that Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson would be pleased to have the deputation and other officials meet him at 8 o'clock in the morning and be his guests at breakfast in the dining car of the special train in which they were travelling.

This invitation was received with applause and unanimously accepted.

Dominion Day Celebration.

Mayor Graham asked if anything had been done in reference to a celebration here on Dominion Day?

Ald. Pope said the 57th Regiment of Peterboro were anxious to come to Belleville on Dominion Day. He had communicated with Col. Halliwell in reference to the matter. He had no doubt a profitable demonstration could be arranged for that day.

Mr. A. McGie stated that nothing definite had been done so far as the Sons of Scotland were concerned, as they were waiting to see what action the local regiment would take in the matter.

Freight Matters.

Mr. A. McGie said that some merchants complained of the delay of freight at the freight shed here. The shed was considered to be too small. This was a matter which might be brought before the G.T.R. officials.

Mayor Graham said there was some trouble, but it was largely owing to the fact that some merchants did not remove their goods as rapidly as was necessary.

Mr. Johnson thought this was a local matter which could be arranged here.

The chairman stated that the firm with which he was connected had found some trouble in this connection.

This matter was slated to be brought before the G.T.R. officials.

Col. Ponton referred to the fact that there were complaints as to cars being left on the line down Pinnacle street and also that property-owners had asked for remission of taxes on that account. All these matters were of local interest and could be brought to the officials' attention.

Mr. McCamon said that $50,000 had been voted some years ago by the city to the G.T.R. upon certain conditions, and this matter might be brought up in order to see if something more for this city could not be secured from the Company.

Ex-Mayor Johnson thought that the city had been recompensed for the $25,000 which had been paid over. The city received a large sum annually from the G.T.R. in taxes. The monthly pay roll here was from $15,000 to $20,000. He thought it would be unwise to resurrect this matter.

Col. Ponton asked if it was true that the Deseronto Junction had been abolished and if it was necessary now to go to Napanee in order to reach Deseronto.

Several of the members said that such was the case, but the fare had not been increased.

The Post Office.

Ex-Mayor Johnson said that he had a subject to bring before the Board, namely, the management of the local Post Office. The business should be done in a prompt and business-like manner. This was a matter in which politics should not enter. A petition should be sent to Parliament, asking that this office be made as efficient as possible, and this could only be done by having efficient and capable clerks. There were too many apprentices and not enough journeymen to do the work properly. A memorial could be sent to the Postmaster-General and our local members of Parliament would see to it that the matter was attended to. He moved, seconded to Mayor Graham, the following resolution:

"The Board of Trade of the City of Belleville respectively petition the Government to bring about a more efficient administration of the business pertaining to the Post Office in Belleville, regarding which there exists great dissatisfaction, and of which daily complaints are being made.

"The Board is not desirous of attaching blame to the Postmaster or any individual connected with the office; the inefficiency that exists is the result of the change made by the Honorable the Postmaster-General some years ago, by which officials who had become skilful and efficient through years of experience were lost to the service.

"A clerk in the office now gets only the pay of an apprentice, he can look forward neither to increase in salary nor permanence of position, and the consequence is that after a few months', or a year's service, just when he is becoming somewhat efficient, he resigns to take employment in which he can satisfy his natural desire for promotion and increased remuneration.

"Prompt, accurate and business-like management prevails in the Post Offices of other cities under the conditions that formerly prevailed in Belleville. This community is entitled to as efficient Post Office service as obtains elsewhere, and, as a matter of simple justice, the Government is respectively requested to provide it.

"A copy of this petition is directed to be sent to the Honorable the Postmaster-General and to the members for West and East Hastings, in order that this matter may be brought before the Government and Parliament at an early date."

The Postmaster Was Pleased.

Mr. Leavens said he was pleased with the resolution, and thought it would awaken the Government to the situation. There had been some complaints, but he did not think it fair that parties having complaints should run to the newspapers instead of coming to him personally.

Mr. McCamon Smells Politics.

Mr. W. J. McCamon said he would like to discuss the matter free from politics, but he considered the resolution, as worded, to be a slap at Sir Wm. Mulock, the Postmaster-General. Some years ago the local Post Office cost thousands of dollars annually to manage, and a change was made whereby much saving in expenditure was made. The clerks, he contended, were well paid, the lowest salary to any clerk being $300 per year. If there are complaints they should be made to the Postmaster or to the Inspector, Mr. Merrick, who resides at Kingston. He was opposed to the motion, or, at least, to a portion of it.

Ald. Pope stated that the clerks were being changed in the Post Office continually, which, to his mind, was evidence that they did not get pay enough. He thought that it was a proper matter for the Board to discuss and take action upon.

Mr. C. P. Holton—"Who has the paying of the clerks, the Postmaster or the Government?"

Mr. Leavens said the salaries today were larger than they formerly were. The lowest salary paid to any clerk was $300 per annum. As to who fixed them he did not think he should answer.

Mr. Johnson said, We are protesting against something which exists in Belleville and which does not exist in other places. Belleville did not get as efficient a service as it should. The Post Office here had been degraded by the Government. If the citizens did not get a service which was right he would protest against it, no matter what Government was in power. All he desired was justice in this important matter. The Postmaster, he contended, did not get the salary he was entitled to. The Collector of Customs gets some $1400 or $1500 a year, whereas Mr. Leavens gets only $1000. He disclaimed politics in this matter. All he desired was justice to this fair city. He desired to have the status of the post office restored.

Mr. McCamon considered the resolution was a reflection upon Sir Wm. Mulock or upon the Postmaster.

Mr. Johnson—"Either we have an efficient service or we have not."

Mr. McCamon—"As far as I am concerned the service is satisfactory to me. I have no complaint." By reading The Intelligencer he saw that complaints were made. He found very few who had complaints against the management of the Post Office.

Mr. C. P. Holton—"I received a postal card from a friend 30 days after date." There was, no doubt, room for

VESSELS COLLIDE IN FOG

Steamer Hamilton Strikes the Saginaw and the Latter Sinks.

Clyde Steamer Cut in Two, and So Far as Ascertainable Twenty People Were Lost in the Ocean—The Rush of Water Into the Saginaw Which Caused the Decks to Burst Asunder With a Roar.

Norfolk, Va., May 6.—A collision at sea that cost the lives of 20 or more people and the sinking of the Clyde steamship Saginaw by the Old Dominion Steamship Company's liner Hamilton, occurred between Winter Quarter Lightship and Fenwick Island Lightship on the Virginia coast, at 4.40 o'clock yesterday morning. The Hamilton left New York Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, for Norfolk, and the Saginaw passed out the Virginia Capes at 9 o'clock Monday night, bound from Richmond, and Norfolk for Philadelphia. A dense fog settled along the coast shortly after nightfall, and, while going through this fog at reduced speed, the Hamilton crashed into the Saginaw's side about 20 feet from the stern. The scene of the collision is about 13 or 14 miles off the shore, and between 180 and 200 miles south of New York, and between 125 and 140 miles north of Norfolk.

According to Captain Boaz of the Hamilton, his ship was making about 9 knots an hour, and the Saginaw about 10. The fog was so thick that objects a ship's length away were invisible, and, when the two crafts hove in sight of each other, bow on, there was but a moment's interim before they met.

The Saginaw veered, as did the Hamilton, but they had not time to clear each other, and the knife-like steel prow of the southbound vessel struck the Clyde ship on the port quarter, about 20 feet from her stern, cutting the entire rear of the ship away. Engines already reversed were put full steam to the rear, and the Hamilton circled to the scene of the wreck, at the same time lowering two lifeboats.

Passenger's Frantic Rush.

There was consternation among the passengers of the Old Dominion ship, and the first thought was for their safety, but, so soon as it was discovered that the ship was undamaged, except that some bow plates were stove in, all efforts were directed to the rescue of those on the Saginaw.

When the Saginaw was again sighted her stern was under water, and her bow high in the air. Panic-stricken people rushed over her decks and scrambled toward the bow. Lifeboats were lowered, and into the first 15 colored women were placed, according to Second Officer Morris, who was in command. The boat was swamped as it struck the water, and its occupants were thrown into the sea. All were drowned except the second officer, and the colored stewardess, and she died before the small boat reached the Hamilton, more from injuries received by the impact of the collision than by drowning.

In the meantime the rush of water into the bow of the Saginaw had caused the decks to burst from their fastenings with a roar like the report of big guns, and tons of frieght of all description soon littered the sea.

Strike Situation at Montreal Becoming More Grave—Regular Troops.

Montreal, May 6.—The city yesterday decided to accept the Government's offer to replace the Montreal militia by regular troops from St. John's, Quebec, Kingston and perhaps from Toronto.

It was announced yesterday that another strike of considerable dimensions had taken place. This time it is the employes of the sash and door factories, who, to the number of 400, have quit work.

The situation may be briefly summed up as follows: The first break in the ranks of the longshoremen took place yesterday afternoon, when several of their foremen returned to work. The shipping men are determined in the stand they have taken, and their position has not changed. Even if the whole trade of the country is tied up, they will stick to their guns to the very last. They have done all they intend to do in the way of conciliation.

There is no talk of further conference between the opposing forces, and Mr. Robert Bickerdike, who succeeded in bringing masters and men together on Sunday, said yesterday that negotiations have not been renewed, and that everything is in statu quo.

Toronto Troops Withdrawn.

Toronto, May 6.—The Government has withdrawn order for the troops here to go to Montreal, it is said, because trouble is feared locally ere long.

Replace Striking Switchmen.

Ottawa, May 6.—Yesterday a gang of 75 Swedes were sent up to the Western Division of the Canada Atlantic Railway, on the regular train, to replace the striking trackmen on the different sections.

2,100 New Settlers.

Halifax, N.S., May 6.—The Hamburg-American Line steamer Adria, from Hamburg, via Boulogne, with over 1,400 immigrants, arrived yesterday afternoon. The Allan Line steamer Mongolian, from Glasgow, with 700 passengers, arrived last night.

TURKS AND REBELS BATTLE.

Both Sides Suffered Severely at Okrina on May 2.

Salonica, May 6.—In the engagement between Turkish troops and revolutionists at Okrina, May 2, seventy revolutionists were killed and ten officers and six men wounded.

After an interview with the Governor-General, the British and Italian Consuls have expressed themselves as satisfied with the precautionary measures taken. All foreign consulates and banking establishments are guarded by troops, while the streets are patrolled constantly.

May Rip Up Streets.

Ottawa, May 6.—In the Supreme Court yesterday the city of Ottawa lost its appeal in the celebrated railway crossing cases against C. P. R. and C.A.R. By this judgment an order of the Railway Committee of the Privy Council is sufficient for a railway company to rip up streets and put down level crossings without the consent of the municipality.

CURED BY

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure.

Charles Harradine, Esq., and His Daughter Florence Completely Cured of Painful Rheumatism.

The People Are Impressed With the Wonderful Power of This Remedy to Cure Rheumatism—It Demonstrates Its Value Quickly and Cures to Stay Cured

"To relieve suffering and restore health is my greatest happiness."—MUNYON.

I do not care at what stage of the disease your rheumatism may be—if it is far advanced and chronic, or if it is only a few months' standing, my Rheumatic Specific will cure it quickly and for all time. It neutralizes the acid in the blood, eradicates the poison from the system, and cures the malady permanently. The interest that has been taken in my Rheumatism Cure by the people of Canada is solely and entirely due to the fact that it cures rheumatism. If it were otherwise, I would expect the sale of my remedies to be prohibited by law."—Munyon.

WHAT THE FATHER SAYS.

"I have had rheumatism in my hand and arm for several years, and suffered great pain. At times my hand would get quite numb, and I would have no feeling in it. Then it would stiffen up and I could not shut it. After I had taken Munyon's Rheumatism Cure a short time I noticed great improvement. I am now completely cured, and have no more rheumatic pains." Mr. Charles Harradine, 288 Parliament street, Toronto, Dec. 22nd, 1902.

WHAT THE DAUGHTER SAYS.

"I have had Rheumatism of a severe form in my knee. I could not bend it at times, and I suffered great pain. Munyon's Rheumatism Cure has cured me, and I am now entirely well." Miss Florence Harradine, 288 Parliament street Toronto, Dec. 22nd, 1902.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

An Awful Death.

Toronto, May 7.—Fatally scalded, Frederick LeRoy was yesterday found by fellow-workmen struggling out of a vat of boiling water at the Swansea Bolt Works. His loud, agonized cries attracted the attention of the other employes, who quickly took him out of the water and administered what aid they could to relieve his awful suffering.

LeRoy was stripped of his clothing and his body wrapped in cotton batting, soaked in oil. At an early hour this morning he was reported to be in an exceedingly critical condition, with no hope held out for recovery.

LeRoy is 21 years of age, and has been in the employ of the company for only three months. He lives with his parents at 21 Sorauren avenue.

GAMEY INQUIRY HAS ADJOURNED

Will Not Reassemble Again Until Next Tuesday.

THE DEFENCE IS CONCLUDED

Judges Desire to Obtain Information on Certain Other Points—"Jim" Conmee Gives Evidence—Tells of Talks With Gamey and About Protests in New Ontario—After Gamey Told Him He Would Support the Government, Mr. Conmee Put Up the Protest Deposit Against Him—Evidence in Rebuttal—Interesting Story of a Lumberman Who Was Notified of a Timber Limits Trespass by Assistant Commissioner of Crown Lands.

Toronto, May 7.—The Gamey investigation was yesterday afternoon adjourned on suggestion of Chancellor Sir John Boyd, until Tuesday next at 10 a.m., when, by arrangement, the reply of the prosecution will be proceeded with. The defence concluded its case with the evidence of Mr. James Conmee yesterday morning.

Evidence in the Rebuttal.

In the afternoon Miss Carrie Jeffreys, acting secretary for the Premier in September last; R. A. Campbell, Registrar of Renfrew; and J. E. H. Barnet were examined briefly in rebuttal. It was announced that Mr. Gamey would take the stand next week.

The judges also stated that they desired to have two matters on which evidence had not been presented, cleared up. One was the matter of the letter sent to Gamey by Mr. D. A. Jones, of Beeton. The Chancellor announced that they would call Mr. Jones and take his testimony themselves.

How Did the Premier Get It.

Another matter which they thought it necessary to clear up was the question of how Gamey's letter of Sept. 10 came into the hands of Premier Ross. Mr. Johnston demurred at this, and said he hadn't thought it worth while to call other Cabinet Ministers for there was nothing material on which they could testify. The Chancellor insisted that this must be cleared up, and it is likely that the Premier will be called. The judges also alluded to the fact that Captain John Sullivan had not been called; but, after consideration, did not deem it necessary, as it was not shown that he had broached anything to Gamey.

Bank Books in Camera.

Yesterday morning there was a secret examination of the Ontario Bank's books by judges and counsel, Mr. Walter Barwick, K.C., representing the bank. Nothing was revealed as to what took place. When the court rose at 1 o'clock it was agreed that some expert accountant nominated by the court should look over the entries in the books of the revenue-producing branches of the Government on or about the dates involved.

JIM CONMEE CALLED.

Last Evidence Tendered by the Defence Before the Commission.

At the opening of the Gamey Commission yesterday morning the first witness was Mr. James Conmee, M. P.P. Both before and after the elections he spoke with Mr. Gamey about mining and other matters. They discussed starting a smelter, and whether the Government would grant a subsidy. Between the 4th and 11th of June, in the Rossin House, Gamey again discussed the smelter, and he told Gamey that the Government was favorable to some form of assistance. Gamey mentioned a water-power which could be used in connection with the smelter, and said he thought he could raise $10,000 to put into it. In the conversation Gamey said that Mr. Whitney, in a speech at Sudbury, showed ignorance of mining matters.

Independent Support For Ross.

Gamey said that if the Ross Government carried out its policy he would give it an independent support. About the end of June he met Gamey again on the train, and Gamey said he had made up his mind to give the Ross Government his support. The protest was mentioned, and Conmee said he did not think it would be pressed if he (Gamey) were going to be a Government supporter. His attention was called to the denial made by Mr. Gamey in his evidence that he said he would support the Government. Mr. Conmee was positive Gamey did say so, and, moreover, that it was understood at nomination that he would be independent. Gamey further told him that he was not bound to support any party, and that he had tried to put his party right on these matters.

The Government Slow.

In cross-examination Mr. Conmee said he had been urging the Government to establish a customs smelter, but none was yet built. The Government was a little slow about the matter. He had urged it upon Mr. Hardy, both as Commissioner and as Premier. He reminded Mr. Gamey that if the Government was not very fast his political friends were very bad in opposing such a policy. After the election Gamey told him that, though he ran as a Conservative, he was not a strict party man. Though he was anxious to see those districts go the right way, he had no charge over them.

Gamey asked him in June if his being a Conservative would be a detriment to the enterprise of starting a smelter or prevent the Government from giving assistance. He said he did not think so, for his experience was that the Conservatives frequently got the best of it. The Conservatives got favors that the Liberals ought to get, Mr. Conmee said in a bantering way. He thought it would do the company no harm if he (Gamey) continued a Conservative.

He Was Independent, Too.

It was then Gamey said he was not a strict party man, and would give the Government independent support. He told Gamey that he was an independent supporter and told the Liberal convention that if he accepted the nomination it was on condition that he might reserve to himself the right to judge for himself any measures that might be proposed. He himself had voted against the Government many times, but not under Mr. Ross' Premiership, but hoped he was still in the Liberal party.

"Doubtful Jim."

"And hope to be Minister of Mines?" asked Mr. Ritchie.

"I don't know."

"If it was offered to you you might accept."

"And I might not."

"You might."

"Well, I think it would be very doubtful."

The Chancellor—You would take it into your serious consideration.

Continuing, he was asked if Mr. Brodie, who was on the train with Gamey, was a politician. "A candidate," said Mr. Conmee.

"Oh, I see; a candidate, but not a politician," replied Mr. Ritchie. Continuing, he said that at this interview on the train Mr. Gamey said that many Liberals had voted for him and seemed more resolved to support the Government.

Put Up the Deposit.

Some time afterwards he told Mr. Stratton what Gamey said. He also told it to Mr. Grant who had charge of the election protests. He was asked by Mr. Fraser, the Liberal candidate, to see Mr. Grant about the Manitoulin protest. He had promised Mr. Fraser that, if necessary, he would put up the deposit. He did put up the deposit about the end of June. It was not by check, but by parcel. He was not sure how much he drew in Toronto. He had drawn a couple of thousand dollars in connection with some lands, and as the other partner did not show up he carried the money in his pocket. Some of it was in express orders and the balance, $800 or $1,000, from the Ontario Bank.

Money Parcel Was Small.

For about a month he kept this $2,000 either in his pocket or his trunk. He had often carried more and for a longer time. He did not remember the denominations, of the bills—"they were not very small; it wasn't a big parcel." Fraser has not yet refunded him the money. He could not recollect the date on which he paid Grant the $1,000.

He paid Mr. Grant in his office, but he did not know the denominations of the bills. He did not take a receipt.

"Trusting and confiding about that?" asked Mr. Ritchie.

"Quite so," Mr. Conmee answered.

Deposit Not Returned.

Mr. Conmee, continuing, said he had accounts in the Ontario Bank and the Home Savings & Loan Company. He had drawn money from the Ontario Bank in June. He recollected a conversation with Sheriff Jackson in September at the Rossin House, but he did not recollect having any conversation with Capt. Sullivan then. He did not say to Sheriff Jackson, "Don't worry. We have got Manitoulin all right." He said that he understood Gamey was going to support the Government, but did not use those words. He knew the petition was dismissed, but did not know the 31,000 deposit was paid back to Mr. Grant. He thought it would go back to Mr. Fraser, and that was why he did not ask Grant. He had not seen Fraser since, and so far has not got any of it back.

No Strong Evidence Against Gamey.

In the conversation with Gamey the latter part of June or beginning of July he did not tell him that he had put up the protest deposit against him, nor did he tell Mr. Gamey that the money would not be needed as Gamey was going to support the Government, he took that for what it was worth. He told Stratton that Gamey had said he would support the Government. What he told Grant was that he had sent a man to Manitoulin, who, after making enquiry, reported to him that he couldn't get very strong evidence against Mr. Gamey. While he thought Gamey was in earnest when he made the statement, he didn't think he would be so courageous when he got among his Conservative friends. He had already conveyed to Mr. Grant that he did not think there was very strong evidence. He had not as a fact told Mr. Grant that Gamey had said he would support the Government.

Mr. Conmee's Protest Opinion.

When Gamey spoke to him about the protest, he knew he had furnished the deposit and that Fraser intended going on, but he did not know that the protest had been entered until Mr. Gamey told him so. He did not make any statement to Mr. Gamey about the protest, except to express the opinion that if he were a supporter of the Government, as he said he was, it would not be pressed. He thought he had said to Mr. Grant before the 7th of July that Gamey was talking as if he was going to support the Government. He thought it was about this time that he paid Mr. Grant the deposit money.

General Campaign Fund.

He was asked if he had put up two other deposits of $1,000 each, and declined to say.

Mr. Ritchie—I was going to follow it up by asking whether these moneys came from the general campaign? A.—I will answer that; any money I put up was my own.

Q.—Take it from August. Did you know there was a general campaign fund in August? A.—I did not.

Q.—Had you heard of it? A.—I had not.

Q.—So you pledge your oath so far as your knowledge goes there was no general campaign fund? A.—Oh, no. I say I did not have anything to do with any general campaign fund, or know anything about it.

Q.—So far as your knowledge or information goes there was none? A.—I simply say I did not know of it.

Q.—So that you do not say you did not have information about it? A.—I have no knowledge.

The Sore Spot.

Mr. Riddell—I object.

The Chancellor—It is assumed there is a campaign fund, and the enquiry is the condition of it in August, September, and down to March.

Mr. Ritchie—If that is covered by your Lordships' ruling of yesterday—

The Chancellor—Yes; according to Mr. Gamey he was first approached in August, and that will cover all the period.

Mr. Ritchie—Of course your Lordships' ruling also covers the question as to whether he had made a subscription to a fund after August? A.—I made no subscription after August.

Q.—Any in July?

The Chancellor—That is out of it; you can ask from first of August down to March, inclusive.

A Mark For Highwaymen.

Re-examined by Mr. Riddell, the witness said that at election time there was a general rumor that Gamey was an Independent.

Q.—Are you in the habit of carrying large sums of money? A.—Yes.

Mr. Blake—All northern people carry large sums.

Witness said that he told Mr. Stratton in the latter part of July or in the middle of September that Gamey was likely to support the Government.

Question of Adjournment.

Then followed the discussion about adjourning till Tuesday, the evidence to be submitted, etc., between the court and counsel summarized at the beginning of to-day's report, and the court adjourned till 2 o'clock.

Gamey's Letter in Good Company.

At the afternoon session of the Gamey Commission Miss Carrie Jeffreys, who in September last was Acting-Secretary for Premier Ross, was called, and testified that she first saw the letter of Sep. 10 signed by Mr. Gamey in Mr. Aylesworth's office, early in the month mentioned. It came in through the mail in the usual way, and was deposited in the Premier's private drawer.

What particularly recalled the circumstance to her mind was the fact that Mr. Ross directed her to place it in this drawer. Very few letters were kept in this depository; the only other ones she recalled having placed there being communications from Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Richard Cartwright. She knew nothing of the letter sent from Gore Bay on October 27. It was her custom to glance over all the letters, so that she could tell the Premier the purport of them in case he asked her. In this case he did not ask.

To Mr. Johnston she said she was only acting as private secretary from the time of Mr. Percival's return until about the 6th of October.

Chief Justice Falconbridge—When did you surrender the key? A.—I put the key back in the drawer when Mr. Percival came back.

The Chancellor—That closes your case.

Mr. Johnston—Yes, except that I am considering with my colleagues certain questions.

In Rebuttal.

Robert A. Campbell, Registrar of Deeds for the County of Renfrew, and formerly member of the Legislature for South Renfrew, said to Mr. Ritchie he knew Mr. Alex. Barnet, lumber merchant, of Renfrew, and also his son, J. E. H. Barnet. He could not say whether the latter was interested in his father's business. He heard there was a claim made by the Government against the Barnets for trespass upon timber limits. On several occasions he assisted Mr. Barnet in defining the boundary line between a timber limit he held and Government property. He did not know what amount was claimed by the Government for the trespass, and never received any moneys from the Barnets for transmission to the Government in that connection. Mr. Barnet and he came to Toronto on a few occasions to discuss the boundary line with the Commissioner of Crown Lands. No money or trespass was mentioned at the last meeting with the Commissioner that he heard. He did not know the date, but the Palmer House register would tell that. He had nothing to do with any money paid directly or indirectly with regard to this trespass claim.

J. E. H. Barnet.

J. E. H. Barnet, who purchased the timber limit in question, said there was no claim against him for trespass, but there was a notice sent him by the Assistant Commissioner of Crown Lands to the effect that there was a considerable trespass. He considered it an insult, and he told Mr. Campbell so. No sum was mentioned nor particulars of the claim given. He never admitted there had been a trespass, and didn't believe there is a trespass yet. The claim had not been settled and there never was an amount discussed for settlement neither directly nor indirectly with the Government or anyone else.

Last of the Bills.

Q.—Do you recollect making a statement to anybody when you produced a roll of fifty dollar bills, that were the last bills in connection with a settlement with the Government, and that you guessed Gamey was the one that got them? A.—I made a statement that those were the kind of bills Gamey is supposed to have received.

Q.—How did you make that statement? A.—Because I was approached and asked for money for what is supposed to be, what I have heard spoken of as a corruption fund, and I did not wish to subscribe any money to that, I thought I could use my money to suit myself better.

"I Won't Swear."

Q.—Did you say you guessed that was the last of your little pile after giving three thousand dollars to the Government? A.—I don't remember saying anything like that.

Q.—Will you swear you did not? A.—I am telling you.

Q.—These were the last you had left after paying over to the Government? A.—I won't swear; I do not remember of saying it.

Q.—Will you contradict it; I am instructed you did in the presence of two people? A.—I won't swear, because I don't remember exactly what I said.

Holding a Trespass Over His Head.

Q.—You were jollying? A.—I was jollying; and I will further state that I had used the expression that the Crown were holding a trespass over my head, and not to ask me to subscribe any money, that I did not want to, and they might possibly get me into trouble.

Q.—At all events you may have made these statements, and if they were made they were not true? A.—I won't say I made statements as you say.

Q.—The result is, apparently, you made some statements that have given you a trip to Toronto? A.—I have had a trip to Toronto; much to my displeasure.

The Commission then adjourned to 10 a. m. on Tuesday next, May 12th.

Mr. Gamey Has Gone Home.

R. R. Gamey is now en route to his home in Gore Bay. The member for Manitoulin left Toronto last night, going by way of North Bay and Sudbury.

Mr. Gamey said last night that he was glad of the opportunity to get home once more. "The only thing I hope," he said, "is that your newspaper men don't chase me up in the same way that you did on my Buffalo trip. I want to spend a day or two at home, quietly and without interruption."

ALMOST FROM BIRTH.

"Almost from birth my little girl was troubled with bronchitis and a harsh, hacking couth. Angier's Petroleum Emulsion was prescribed. It cured her cough, and she almost immediately gained in flesh and color. To-day she is strong and robust."—Al Pudsey, Toronto, Canada.

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S SCANDAL.

More Testimony About Wells' Alleged Connection With the Deal.

Victoria, B.C., May 7.—At the investigation into the alleged scandal in connection with the repudiated land grants in South Kootenay, which were to have been awarded to the Canadian Pacific Railway as the Columbia and Western subsidy, W. J. Taylor of Eberts & Taylor, when recalled yesterday, said he was impressed that W. C. Wells, Minister of Land and Works, expected personally to get something out of the deal when he took the land grants to Montreal to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy. Taylor had been in Montreal on private business and was not connected with the C.P.R. nor with the land grant matter in any way, when Wells spoke of the matter to him. His impression of that conversation was that Wells had gone to Montreal with a proposition to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy and that Wells expected something personally.

Literary Notes

THE STRUGGLE FOR LIFE, OR THE STRUGGLE FOR THE LIFE OF OTHERS?

The struggle between duty to self and duty to others, or, as Clara E. Laughlin puts it in the June Delineator, between the Struggle for Life and the Struggle for the Life of Others, is one that comes to thousands of young men and women with impressive significance. Selfdevelopment along chosen lines, or renouncement and devotion to those who may need you—is a question that can be decided only by the individual; and whichever way he may take, if he but be guided by the best light that he has, he will do all that is expected of him. The two great evils to be guarded against are: Lest the development of self make us selfish, or devotion to others make us negligent of self. A "true balance" should be aimed at.

Resolution of Sympathy

THE DUAL LANGUAGE QUESTION IN CANADA.

(Col. Ponton in Canadian Law Review.)

I fully recognise the natural tenacity and national sensitivity with which our French-Canadian confreres cling to the almost exclusive use of their mother tongue, and with what pride and jealousy they resist any interference with its full and official recognition; nor do I forget Treaty rights. But will not this complete assimilation of laws be impossible while Quebec remains thus isolated? There are, no doubt, many good points about the Civil Code. There may be some good points about the Notarial powers, but is not Quebec to all intents and purposes a foreign country to the lawyers of all the other Provinces? Take the ten leading lawyers of Toronto to-day. What would be their position if they were transplanted to Montreal? I quite admit that there are two points of view, and our Quebec friends may possibly think that we are isolated, but it must be remembered that we speak the almost universal tongue of the British Empire, and the language of commerce, if not the language of diplomacy. It would be absurd, impolitic, to even suggest the suppression of any language in these modern days of development, but may it not be asked whether we in Canada are doing our share in breaking down the barriers and rendering possible that complete Imperial unity which must depend upon united law as well as upon united sentiment. The American nation, with its seventy millions, permits no disintregrating factor, and recognises no official language save the English. How idle it is to speak of future union of North America other than through conquest; for the whole policy of the United States would have to be changed before the present rights of Quebec could be recognized by them. Can there not be a compromise effected in Canada? The universities are discussing this provincial isolation. The medical profession realize it. Can not lawyers act as the cement? If things remain as they are there may be complete harmony; there cannot be real unity. The dual language is not merely cumbersome and expensive, but with it there can be no blending of the races. Canada is groping, and time brings light, but can we not through our profession hasten the time? Language is part of a heritage. Let it always remain as to the individual; but situated as we are,—one assimilable people in Canada,—should there be two national heritages of this kind, when we consider the greatest good to the greatest number?

I love the chivalrous French, and am proud to have some acquaintance with the language of France, and some ancestry that hailed from sunny Normandy, and, therefore, I write these notes with no pro-English prejudice; it is the broad, the national question, I suggest as a topic for friendly and temperate discussion in your columns. I know from experience what good friends and gallant comrades men of French descent have been and are, and I know that they wield the pen as well as the sword. It may be expected, therefore, that a confrere from Quebec may give his views or his suggestions from his standpoint.

Indeed, it is not a question of French and English alone, for we may note in an advertisement in the Toronto Globe of the twenty-fourth of March, 1903, an example of—shall we say the Scotch dialect?—which would require an etymological gymnast to interpret. Verily our profession in Scotland must be a close corporation, and judged by its legal vocabulary, Scotland must be to England a foreign nation! Possibly the author of "The Unspeakable Scot" had this example before him when he penned his malignant aspersions on the Scottish people!

J. ARTHUR MARSH.

THE RETORT COURTEOUS.

The following letter explains itself:

Mon cher Colonel,—It was with deep interest I read your article on "Dual Language" in the Law Review. Like everything you pen, it bears the impress of the man. Of course, it aiming at the "unity" of language in Canada and therefore at the official suppression of the tongue to which I belong, I could not in toto subscribe to the ideas therein contained.

Language is so closely allied to the life, religious as well as national, the institutions, manners, customs, thoughts, aspirations, of a people, you can hardly touch one without touching all. A book could be written on this question. A profound writer once said: The chief glory of a country lies not so much with her statesmen or soldiers (and by inference with her commerce) as with her authors. If this assumption be true and we look at the galaxy of men French Canada can boast in the fields of literature, history, oratory, fiction, poetry, etc., etc., then, to my mind at least, should we "make haste slowly" in matters that would tend to an alteration of the status quo.

Not less brave than wise, the French through their discoverers, missionaries, martyrs, have given Canada to civilization, whilst their descendants, on more than one occasion, helped to preserve it to the British Crown under whose generous sway we are proud to live. Names as those of Cartier, Champlain, Maisonneuve, Joliet, La Salle, Brebeuf, Lalemant, Garneau, Ferland, Papineau, Lafontaine, Laval, Chapleau, Laurier, Lemoine, Cremazie, Frechette, and a host of others have won such a place in Canada's past and present that the genius of their race must long continue to develop itself in its own way before it is chilled by interests of a mercantile nature, however great these may be.

But as Sir George Etienne Cartier once said: "We are British men speaking French," proud undoubtedly of our Norman blood, yet happy to be a portion of an Empire than which the world has known no greater!

Amities et remerciments,
P. Denys.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The fact that Lord Dundonald made some speeches which displeased Laurier's chum, Bourassa, should send the G.O.C. up very high in the estimation of loyal Canadian people.

As was expected, Gen. Baden-Powell, having arrived in England, denies that he ever made any remarks criticizing the U. S. cavalry. Another yellow journal fabrication.

Toronto will lose $25,000 a year in taxes if Premier Ross' Municipal Taxation bill becomes law. The city's present income assessment, based on the $750 exemption, is about $5,500,000. The new Act proposes to increase the amount exempted to $1,000, thus reducing the total income assessment to about $4,125,000. This will mean a loss of nearly $25,000 in taxes. Other places, besides Toronto, will, of course, be seriously affected by the new bill.

• • •

The Ottawa City Council appointed a civic committee to investigate the alleged existence of a combine in that city to keep up the price of coal. The committee found that a combine did exist, but advised that, as there was now opposition in the city, criminal proceedings should not be instituted at present. That may be all right for Ottawa, but how about places in which there is no opposition?

• • •

Hamilton wanted a Highlanders' regiment, and Doc Borden and the Government have turned them down hard. "No room for any more show regiments in Canada," they say. Rather rough on Hamilton, that, which had the men and the money ready. But then Hamilton is a Conservative city, and the present Government is quite ready to refuse little requests made by such places. Belleville people can testify to that.

• • •

Rumor says that some of the leading Grits of this city are very warm under the collar because Postmaster Leavens endorsed the resolution submitted by ex-Mayor Johnson at the Board of Trade meeting on Tuesday night. It is even said that Mr. Leavens may be called on to resign. Curious state of affairs, isn't it? Funny thing if Mr. Leavens could not give his approval to a resolution which he knew to be right.

Lord Lansdowne has set his foot down hard, and given all other nations to understand that they must keep their hands off the Persian Gulf. Any nation that tries to establish a naval base there will find out it is off its base.

• • •

The Gamey commission has adjourned, and up to the hour of going to press about all that seems to have come to light is that Gamey says he was bribed by Stratton and Stratton denies it. Some of the Liberal witnesses have developed a most astonishing memory for details, which, in ordinary people, might in itself look suspicious. But then the Liberal witnesses are not ordinary people. Much of the evidence given was hearsay evidence, tending to show that Gamey, like many other politicians, said more than his prayers sometimes. But he was not in the witness box then. Just at present it would puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer to foreshadow how the case will terminate.

DATES FOR FALL FAIRS

DELEGATES MEET AT MARMORA AND SETTLE THEM.

A meeting of delegates from the various Agricultural Societies of this district in Central Ontario was held at Marmora on Tuesday, to arrange a mutually satisfactory list of dates for holding their fall fairs without conflicting with each other, and also in order to secure the presence of the expert judges on live stock which the Government will send to all societies requiring them. Mr. Creelman, the superintendent of this branch of the government work, was also present and delivered an instructive and helpful address.

The following list of dates was arranged, and at which the expert judges will be present:

Frankford	Sept. 17, 18
East Hastings	Sept. 18, 19
North Hastings	Sept. 22, 23
Campbellford	Sept. 24, 25
Shannonville	Sept. 26
Marmora	Sept. 29
L'Amable	Sept. 30
Coe Hill	October 1
Ameliasburg	October 2, 3
Warkworth	October 6, 7
Castleton	October 8
Wooler	October 9
Norwood	October 13, 14

An organization to include the above societies was effected for the general governing of all matters affecting agricultural fairs in this district in the future. Mr. A. Mulholland, of Campbellford, was elected president, and Dr. Butler, V.S., of Marmora, secretary-treasurer. The next meeting will be held in Frankford.

WHAT WE WANT.

(We want the Oak Hall clothing store to be a necessity to every man who makes a point of dressing well. It is already a successful store, gauged by its business—a business that grows faster and faster every season. An Old Soldier Tells What O. R. Kidney Cure Did for Him.

Belleville, Ont., July 25, 1902.

The O. R. Medicine Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.:

Dear Sirs,—While suffering severely with pain in my groin from kidney and bladder trouble, I was strongly advised by several of my neighbors to use the O. R. Kidney Cure. Before I had taken one bottle it fully satisfied me that I had secured the right thing, and since being cured, I, like my friends, have told others of this wonderful remedy for all diseases of the kidneys and for urinary troubles.

I remain, dear sirs,

Caught in a Stampede.

TWO years ago, when the cowboys of north-eastern Arizona came together to find out who was the "best man" in various ways, James Evans won the steer-tying championship by roping, throwing and tying a vicious steer in twenty-four seconds. But in a recent round-up the champion did a more remarkable thing, by which, says the Kansas City "Star," he saved his own and another man's life.

While he and some companions were camping for the night on a high tableland, which ended a few miles away in an abrupt drop of two hundred feet, a storm swept through the mountains. Made nervous by the lightning, the herd of fifteen hundred cattle stampeded in the direction of the precipice. Evans and his men mounted hurriedly and, circling to the front of the maddened cattle, tried with whoops and revolver-shots to turn them back.

In the dense blackness of the night Evans's horse missed his footing and went down in a heap, one leg in a gopher-hole. The horse of a cowboy named Davis, running close behind, stumbled over Evans's horse, and Davis, too, came to earth and lay still, unconscious.

Fifty yards away came the herd, and a short flash of lightning showed Evans the situation. The swiftly moving sea of cattle reached one hundred yards each way. Unable to arouse Davis, and never thinking of leaving his disabled comrade, Evans took the only chance of saving both. He emptied his own revolver and his companion's into the center of the herd, cutting a breach in the front of the mass. Then, throwing the inanimate form of Davis over his shoulder, he awaited his opportunity.

As one of the leaders brushed by, Evans, with one movement, put the body of Davis across the shoulders of the steer, and mounted, also. Vainly the animal leaped, bucked and sidejumped. With his legs wrapped tightly around the body of his mount, Evans drove his spurs deep in, and held himself and Davis in place.

The steer, wild with rage, agony and fright, rapidly left the herd in the rear, and, veering to the right in a furious gallop, carried his riders out of danger. Then Evans rolled off the back of his strange rescuer, and a half-hour later, when his cowboys turned the herd at the rim of the canyon, and rode back to look for the foreman and Davis, they found them, both unconscious. The weary steer, with his sides covered with blood, lay exhausted a short distance away.

The outfit ordered a medal for Evans, and the steer has been pensioned for life on the best alfalfa in the valley.

A Revolutionary Age.

Soulless corporations, heartless coquettes and conscienceless rascals of various sorts we have had with us now these many years, and it looks very much now as if a kind of providence was about to even things up a little by providing us with such useful contrivances as wireless telegraphy, heatless light, smokeless powder, boneless shad and seedless oranges. If some genius will rise up now and give us a breed of biteless dogs and stingless mosquitoes, together with some loseless umbrellas and spendless cash, we shall all be happy and content.—"Leslie's Weekly."

Man as an Incarnation.

PEOPLE of a materialistic frame of mind, to whom man is but a machine, says an editorial writer in the "Hospital," are apt to put on one side all that cannot be weighed and measured as not only inexplicable or unthinkable, but as quite beyond the range of reasonable discussion. Such people are advised to attend a meeting of the Society for Psychical Research for "a change of scene." What they will see is thus described:

"There they will find people, quite as convinced as they are of their own sanity, and quite as content as they can possibly be with the correctness of their own interpretation of things, asserting the most astounding propositions, without turning a hair. To those who are so self-centered as to think that there is something cranky about all who do not see as they do, it is a wholesome awakening to find good, solid, comfortable, and respectable people believing in telepathy as a thing indisputable, and holding that man, as we see him engaged in his various more or less ignoble pursuits, in the city and elsewhere, is but the incarnation of one little bit of himself as he exists in an intangible and ethereal form. At the last meeting of the Psychical Research Society, Dr. Oliver Lodge, F.R.S., said that he did not hold that the whole of any one of us was incarnated in their terrestrial bodies; certainly not in childhood; more, but perhaps not so very much more, in adult life. What was manifest was only a definite portion of a much larger whole. What the rest was doing during the years spent here he did not know. Perhaps it was asleep; but probably, he said, it was not entirely asleep with men of genius, nor perhaps was it all completely inactive with people called mediums. Now to the modern materialist all this is absolute 'rot.' Yet Dr. Lodge is not exactly a man to pooh-pooh. Indeed, may not the immaterialists retort that this is a Christian country and that our very religion teaches us not to weigh and measure too exactly? Again, Roentgen, Tesla, and Marconi have of late been giving many shocks to old ideas. At any rate, this is clear, that we must not too rigidly put outside the bounds of sanity belief in the unthinkable. It is a queer world, and which half of it is sane appears still undecided."

An English Departure in Insurance.

A CORRESPONDENT writing from London under date of February 13 says: "One queer phase of the present smallpox scare is the smallpox insurance department opened at Lloyd's. The current rates are 2 1-2 per cent. if recently vaccinated, and 3 1-2 if not vaccinated since infancy. The insurance becomes due on the doctor's certificate that the policy-holder has smallpox." He adds: "After jogging along comfortably with smallpox in its midst for six months, London is now beginning to get worried, and a large contributing cause of that worry is that if the plague spreads much more it is going to frighten away the profitable American cousin, who is expected to come over in unprecedented shoals for the coronation season and scatter dollars right and left. Trouble began away back in August, and has been slowly growing, off and on, ever since, until the average lately has been about 50 new cases a day. One day last week it ran up to 82. There were 188 new cases in September, 309 in October, 473 in November, 804 in December and 1,295 in January. Yet, according to previous experience, smallpox reaches its height in London from January to May. Consequently it would be well for readers planning a trip to see King Edward's crown put on to watch the smallpox returns from London for the next four or five weeks. At present the plague can be said to be well under control, but a big sudden increase would tax London's resources to the utmost and might cause a panic."

Onions and Epidemics.

A READER of "Marmaduke's" letters in London "Truth" has sent him the following:

"Whilst turning over some old books in my library last week I stumbled upon the following paragraph in the 'Rural World' of 1863. As there is an epidemic of smallpox in London it has occurred to me to send this to you, for some of your medical readers may be either able to prove or disprove the statements it contains:

"'Onions and Epidemics.—In the spring of 1849 I was in charge of one hundred men on shipboard, with the cholera among the men. We had onions, which a number of the men ate freely. Those who did so were soon attacked, and nearly all died. As soon as I made this discovery their use was forbidden. After mature deliberation I came to the conclusion that onions should never be eaten during the prevalence of epidemics, for the reason that they absorb the virus, and communicate the disease, and that the proper use for them is sliced and placed in the sick-room, and replaced with fresh ones every few hours. . . . After maintaining the foregoing opinion for eighteen years, I have found the following well attested: Onions placed in the room where there is smallpox will blister and decompose with great rapidity; not only so, but will prevent the spread of the disease. I think that as a disinfectant they have no equal if properly used. If needed, the foregoing (which I have greatly abbreviated) can be attested on oath.'"

It is a curious echo of a bygone preventive, and it is given here without much hope that the suggestion can be valuable.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alternative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

A woman never knows where the match box is.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation.—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

BRITISH MONROE DOCTRINE.

Lord Lansdowne Declares Such in the Persian Gulf.

London, May 7.—Foreign Secretary Lansdowne has proclaimed a British Monroe doctrine in the Persian Gulf, and has practically notified the competing powers that any attempt on their part to establish a naval base or fortified post in those waters means war with Great Britain.

"I say without hesitation," said the Foreign Secretary, dealing with the subject in the House of Lords last evening, "that we should regard the establishment of a naval base or a fortified port in the Persian Gulf by any other power as a very grave menace to British interests, and we should certainly resist it with all the means at our disposal."

Lord Lansdowne's attitude in this matter generally meets with approval, although the answers thereto of the other powers interested in the Gulf are awaited with some anxiety.

Transvaal Loan Passed.

London, May 7.—In moving in the House of Commons yesterday a formal resolution guaranteeing the Transvaal loan of $175,000,000, Colonial Secretary Chamberlain delivered a lengthy, optimistic speech on the future of the new South African colonies. He explained that it had been decided to purchase all the existing railways, which would absorb $65,000,000 of the new loan, and $25,000,000 more will be expended as quickly as possible on the development of railways; $12,500,000 would be spent on land settlement, and $10,000,000 on public works. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Ritchie, declined to reveal the rate of interest in advance of the issuing of the prospectus. After some debate the resolution was agreed to.

2. In case of disputes arising, the the right to apply to the shipping companies to have the said grievances adjusted.

DAISY GORDON'S FOLLY

—OR—

THE WORLD LOST FOR LOVE'S SAKE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY,

Author of "The Crime of Hallow-E'en," "The Flirtations of a Beauty," "Willful Gaynell," "Little Leafy," "Only a Mechanic's Daughter," etc.

"Lily!" he cried. "I am obliged to leave here suddenly. I ought to be away from here now, but I could not leave you—I could not!"

"Perhaps you may come back some time—soon," she answered, faintly.

A curious shudder passed over his dark, handsome face.

"I would come back if the prayer of my heart was answered tonight," he said, hoarsely. "You must not be startled when I tell you what it is."

She laughed a gay, rippling laugh, to see how earnest he was; but the smile died from her lips when she saw his face grow even whiter.

He drew nearer to her, pausing as though to collect his strength for a desperate effort.

"Lily," he said, "marry me, and come with me; it is my only salvation—my only hope."

Daisy drew back quite frightened.

"Marry you," she repeated, with colorless cheeks, "oh, I cannot—that would be quite impossible. I am frightened at the very word. Every one has always said: 'Never think of marrying until you are twenty;' and I am not seventeen, you know. I would not marry any one and leave home with him for the world."

"Marry me, and remain here for a year, if you will, and I will return for you," he urged. "Let me feel sure that you are bound to me so firmly that no one could take you from me. Mine is the prayer of a desperate man. Let your own heart plead for me."

"No, no, you must not ask me," cried Daisy, sobbingly.

But love has an eloquence all its own—what maiden can steel her heart in youth's spring-time against an eager lover's wooing. And then there was no argument possible that he did not use.

And while he pleaded, painting in glowing words what their future would be like, a strange idea had occurred to Daisy—what a glorious revenge it would be upon Hetty and Olive for leaving her here in the dreary old farmhouse for two long weeks, to come home and find her married—yes, actually married—she, the little willful romp of the family, married before either one of her elder sisters, and to a handsome young husband who fairly adored her.

It would be something, too, very like the romance of poor Cinderella, whom her sisters left at home while they went off to enjoy the grand ball.

Daisy's eyes sparkled with amusement; yes, indeed, it would certainly be a glorious revenge upon cross Olive and impertinent Hetty. The seriousness and solemnity of marriage never once entered her pretty head.

Poor Daisy, she was so young—she did not realize the importance of such a step, and too guileless to know that marriage without the consent of those who were nearest and dearest to her should never have been thought of for a single moment.

"Lily," cried her lover, "you are so silent that I begin to fear that—Will you marry me, or will you send me away to destruction and death?"

His passionate words alarmed her. Ah, how much he must love her to say that he would surely go to destruction if he lost her. That was indeed love.

An hour later they were standing in the dim old church.

The wind seemed to sob outside, and the leaves of the trees that tossed their branches against the window-pane seemed to quiver like lost spirits in distress.

To Daisy it seemed like a strange, weird dream.

The feeble old minister looked in wonder at the pair before him—the girl so young and exquisitely lovely, the man so handsome but ill at ease. The bridegroom knew that it was the cruelest thing he could do to link this fair young life to his own dark, checkered one; but he did not spare her, and the fatal ceremony which was to bind these two lives together until God set one or the other free went on to the end.

Daisy noticed, too, in wonder that the minister, all through the ceremony, had addressed her as Lillian Ruthven, instead of her own name, Daisy Gordon; but then the minister—an evangelical preacher—was a stranger in the neighborhood—he did not know her.

It was not until she was standing alone with Harold St. John out in the moonlight that she fully realized what she had done, and a strange, deadly chill crept over her.

"Lillian, my darling, my bride," he was murmuring.

And in that moment, while his kisses were upon her lips, the horrible thought swept over her heart that she did not love him. With the changing of the hour she had repented bitterly that she had been persuaded into marrying him. Young as she was, she realized dimly that it was a strange, foolish, mad marriage; yet it was legal and binding. She was Harold St. John's bride.

She turned to him with wondering eyes.

"Harold," she said quickly, "why did the minister call me Lillian Ruthven?"

He looked down at her smiling, as he answered, gallantly:

"Because you were Lillian Ruthven; but you are Lillian Ruthven no longer. You are Lillian St. John now—my wife."

"I do not understand you, Harold," said Daisy, in growing dismay. "Lillian Ruthven, the heiress at Briar hall, is a far different person from me, only poor little Daisy Gordon, a farmer's daughter."

He sprung from her side as though he had received a terrible blow.

"Tell me!" he cried, grasping her arm so tightly that poor Daisy was startled by his fierceness; "surely there has been no mistake. You are, or were, Lillian Ruthven, the heiress?"

"If you thought that, you were mistaken, Harold," she said. "I wondered why you always called me Lily. Can it be that you thought me the heiress?"

"Yes, I—I thought so," he answered slowly, and his voice was so hoarse and unnatural, it frightened poor Daisy.

"But now you know that I am only Daisy Gordon, a farmer's daughter, does it make any difference, Harold?" she asked, piteously.

He had drawn back from her with a face as white as death.

"And I have risked so much for this!" he cried, with a mirthless laugh terrible to hear.

In a flash poor Daisy understood the bitter, cruel truth.

"If you married me for money, believing you had married Lillian Ruthven, the heiress, you have been strangely misled. Oh, Harold, is it true? tell me that it is not, that you married me because you loved me, or I shall fall dead at your feet," she sobbed wildly.

He shook off the clinging clasp of those white hands impatiently enough.

"Of course I cared for you; but you may as well know the truth," he added, thinking little enough of her woe in the chagrin of his own defeat. "Unless I had believed you to be Lillian Ruthven whom I was wooing, I should have been away from here days ago, and—— No, I should never have married you."

Those were the cruelest words that ever broke a young girl's heart. Without a cry, without a moan, Daisy threw up her hands and fell down in a lifeless heap at his feet.

And in that instant he heard the sound of approaching footsteps. Before Harold St. John could spring forward to raise her, a man's form appeared around the curve of the path. Harold St. John stepped quickly to one side, devoutly hoping the little slim figure would not be observed lying amid the tall grass.

Was it possible the man was searching for some one or something?

In an instant he had espied the little figure in the grass.

He sprung forward with a mighty cry, and flung himself down on his knees in the grass beside her, crying:—

"Great God! it is Daisy. My darling! my little Daisy; she is dead!"

But no, the heart throbbed ever so faintly.

With a fervent "Thank God, she is alive!" Farmer Gordon, for it was he, raised the slight, limp figure in his stalwart arms, and started down the path that led over the hills to the farmhouse.

CHAPTER V.

What Occurred at the Grand Ball.

When Daisy opened her eyes to consciousness, she found herself lying in her own little room at the farmhouse, with Margy and her father bending anxiously over her.

She starts up with a wild, piteous cry.

Pneumonia More Fatal Than Smallpox

STATISTICS SHOW A RAPID INCREASE OF DEATHS FROM PNEUMONIA—PREVENTION AND CURE FOUND IN

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

Ten times as many people die of pneumonia as of smallpox, and yet the fear of smallpox is so great that many people almost forget that there is such a disease as pneumonia.

Health authorities are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars to stamp out smallpox and ignore the conditions that cause pneumonia. Damp, unventilated houses, dirty alleys and streets, stagnant pools of water, insufficient food and clothing—all these things cause pneumonia.

Anyone who is in a weak and run-down condition and contracts a cold is liable to have pneumonia, and, therefore, the object of every person should be to keep their health at high water mark by the use of such a blood builder and nerve restorative as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Should you find yourself the victim of a cold that has fastened itself on the bronchial tubes causing difficult breathing, pain in the chest or lungs when coughing or other indications of approaching pneumonia, there is no preparation that will help you so promptly as Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

No off-hand prescription from a doctor, hastily written and hastily compounded in a drug store, can be compared to this great treatment, which has so firmly established itself in the homes of this land.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is mother's favorite remedy for croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, coughs and colds, and is wonderfully effective in relieving and curing asthma. Twenty-five cents a bottle, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Company, Toronto.

SPEECH ON THAT MEASURE BY MR. W. B. NORTHRUP, M.P., IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

True, they did come in under Orders in Council; and if the Minister of Justice will read the Imperial Orders in Council, under which Prince Edward Island, British Columbia and other provinces came in, he will find that in each case the Order in Council provided that in pursuance of the 146th section of the British North America Act they came in subject to the provisions of this Act, for in fact an Order in Council would have no power to vary the British North America Act, it would be as invalid as an Act of this House, except for clause 146, which provided that on an address from a province, with a similar address and on similar terms from this House, the Queen in Council might approve of their addresses and allow that province to come in on the terms agreed upon, but in every case subject to the provisions of that Act. So that when British Columbia or Prince Edward Island came into the union, they came in subject to the provisions of the British North America Act. The Imperial Order in Council has no power to vary that, and whatever its provisions were, they had to accept them.

Now the Minister of Justice seemed to think that if there were four partners, and two or three others came in, they must come in on equal terms. Surely no wilder statement of law than that could be imagined. One can understand four gentlemen owning a business, each holding a one-quarter interest; and they decide to take in, we will say, their head clerk. There is nothing to prevent them giving each one his share of one-eighth, or one-sixteenth or one-thirty second, or any interest they like, to that clerk. It is wholly a matter of contract between them, and even if that clerk had ten times the brains of the original four, and contributed ten times as much to the success of the business as the original partners, when he came to claim his share of the profits, he would have to abide by the terms on which he came in. If the Minister of Justice will look at the terms on which these provinces came into the union he will find that there was a provision that they should have the benefit of certain terms from the old provinces, they were given a benefit here and there, but there is not a single word to show that the old provinces lost the rights they had already acquired by Imperial legislation. It would be easy for any one to infer that the provinces should have equal rights, but they did not get equal rights, as is shown by the exceptional representation given to British Columbia. Therefore, we find that the provinces have come in with different rights between themselves. Now, if they have come in with different rights between themselves, why should it be argued that they would necessarily come in with equal rights as against the old partners? I venture to submit that the true view of the British North America Act is that laid down by Sir John A. Macdonald in his state paper of 1870, when he said that the purview of the British North America Act was evidently confined to the original four provinces. That Act was framed by the ablest statesmen of Canada. They were building wisely and well, and they knew the country was liable to have an unlimited expansion; they knew it was impossible to foresee the possibilities of this country, and therefore, in providing for the present, as far as possible they provided for the future in general, but not in details. They provided that other provinces might come in, but the details they left to be arranged while the original partners of the British North America Act secured Imperial legislation, a charter which they hold to-day. I will not say anything further on this point than to claim that in view of the circumstances under which this clause was inserted in the British North America Act, in view of the guarantee of the charter that the provinces have under the British North America Act, in view of the fact that not one word is to be found in any Order of Council or in any address on which an Order in Council is issued, leading to the conclusion that the original provinces were divested of any powers they had, whereas on the contrary, they have been given new powers, certain specified powers, it seems to me that the case is not free from doubt, and this is as far as it is necessary to go for the purposes of my argument. But if the question be not free from doubt, admitting that the right hon. gentleman wishes to do what is fair, is it the part of a practical man of business to obtain an opinion from an inferior court when he could obtain one from a superior court? Is it wise to obtain an opinion that has no intrinsic value beyond the value that may be given to it from the personal standing of the judges when, if the case be referred to the Privy Council, we shall then have an authoritative decision which will be beyond question. Therefore, I hope that the right hon. leader of the Government, considering that this is only the third session of this Parliament, that the Parliament is still in its infancy, that there is ample time to secure the decision of the Privy Council and pass this legislation long before this Parliament comes to its natural end, will not cause the money of this country to be expended and the time of hon. members perhaps, to be wasted in fruitlessly discussing legislation, which the decision of the Privy Council, a few months later on, may show to be utterly abortive.

The Origin of the Loving Cup.

THE loving cup is very common nowadays, and we see it everywhere. But many years ago there were no such things as these queer three handled affairs, and the following story tells how they first happened to be made:

Once upon a time centuries before us, there lived a great and powerful king, who was extremely fond of hunting. He was one day in a forest pursuing a stag, but it was so fleet and clever that it eluded him and his band of followers, and led them entirely out of their way. After wandering about in a hopeless fashion they finally came upon a little hut, and the king himself dismounted and rapped smartly upon the door.

A young girl answered his knock, and soon showed the men the right path. The king was about to go, when he saw a well near the house, and at the sight of the clear water immediately felt thirsty, and, going back, asked the girl for a drink. Without hesitation she went into the house and came out with an earthen jug filled with the well water. But, instead of offering his royal majesty the handle, as most people would do, she held that herself, and handed him the cup the wrong way.

The king said nothing, thanked the girl, and he and his band soon found their way out of the wood.

But when he reached his palace he determined to reward the girl for giving him the water and at the same time to teach her a lesson in politeness.

Sending to his jeweler, he bade him make a silver cup, with two handles, and deliver it to the young girl, without a word as to whence it came.

Perhaps a month after this the king again hunted in that same forest, sought the hut and asked the girl for another drink of water.

This time she entered the house and came out with a beautiful silver cup, full of the sparkling water. "Now," thought the king, "she has certainly learned a lesson." But never was he more mistaken, for the poor, ignorant girl took a handle in each hand, and for the second time offered her liege lord nothing save the side of the cup.

The king rode away deeply perplexed. He resolved to teach the girl the polite way to hand a cup without directly rebuking her, and many were the hours he spent in cudgelling his brains for some way in which to do it. At last a bright idea struck him, and he sent for his jeweler a second time. "Make me," said he to the man, "a silver cup, heavily chased, and with my royal crest, and put three handles on it." The jeweler, much surprised—for remember, no such thing had ever been heard of up to this time—did as he was told, and soon the mug was finished. As before, the king had it privately sent to the girl who lived in the little hut.

One day not long after this for the third time he rode into that forest, and, taking the now well-known path, soon reached the cottage. Dismounting, he knocked at the door and asked humbly for a drink of clear water.

The girl immediately came out with the beautiful three-handled cup, and, taking two of the handles in her hands, she offered him the third.

So the king rode away well pleased with his strategy and, reaching home, ordered three-handled cups to be made in every sort of ware, and they became so popular that we now have them in all our shops and stores.

An Unfortunate Experiment.

SOME years ago there lived in Turin a physician noted far and wide as a specialist of brain diseases. Men and women came to him from the ends of the earth. With the development of fortune, for his fees were in proportion to his prominence, he cultivated a pleasing taste for those precious relics of antiquity in which millionaires alone are privileged to indulge. He had in his library a collection of costly objects of art. The fame of his treasures was loud in the world's ears with the note of his skill. One day a rich American banker came to consult him about his wife, a confirmed kleptomaniac. His life was a burden to him, following her from store to store, continually guarding her reputation against the encroachment of her fingers. Though it had cost him thousands, his wife knew nothing, suspected nothing of her own weakness. Nor should she ever know if he could prevent it.

"If I brought her here to consult you as a physician," said the afflicted husband, "I fear she would suspect something and it would kill her. If you will permit it I'll bring her to call on you as a collector of antiquities. Do not be disconcerted, however, if during the interview you find her pilfering, slipping your relics and coins into her umbrella or pockets. That is the ailment, and, of course, whatever she takes will be returned to you at once. My references are So and So, bankers." This with much dignity and the production of documents.

The physician made the appointment, and next day the couple came. The doctor brought out his treasures, wonderful coins, antique jewelry, on which he descanted with much graceful learning. Every now and then the lady slipped into her pocket or dropped into her parasol a coin, a jewel, a vase, and as she did so her husband winked at the doctor to draw attention to her theft. When the physician finally gave the signal that he had learned all he required, she had accumulated the rarest of his possessions.

"I'll be back within an hour," said the Chicago banker, "with the things my wife has taken. Poor, poor girl!" he burst out. "Doctor, my fortune, my life are yours if you can but cure her."

Two hours passed, then three, then the interval lengthened to five. The physician, rather alarmed, sent his servant to the American's hotel. No persons of the name were staying there. The police were called in, descriptions given, detectives went forth. They identified the culprits, who had time to make their escape. They were London pickpockets, two thieves whose characters and depredations were notorious all over England.

"Why do you call the fast bicycle rider a scorcher?" "Because he goes at a hot pace, makes pedestrians boiling mad, warms up the police, gets roasted in court, and then thinks the whole thing is a burning shame."—"Tit-Bits."

Guest (impatiently)—Say, waiter, how long have you been employed here? Waiter—'Bout a week, sah. Guest—Oh, is that all! Then I must have given my order to some other waiter.—Chicago

SUITS FOR MEN

The Entirely Different Sorts.

Not satisfied with equaling in style, fit and excellence of workmanship the made-to-measure garments the best tailors produce, our makers are now fashioning their suits from the same fabrics which have heretofore been exclusive with the Custom Tailors.

Our showing of these suits is very extensive.

They are suits that the average man wants—they give him the style and exclusiveness he seeks without the extra cost of the tailors.

Even the most expert criticism will fail to discover that these suits were not custom made.

The broad showing we make including as it does every size for men of different propostions practically assurs a perfect fit for every man.

But in some cases an exact fit cannot be secured immediately and then we do as the tailors would do at a try on—make the necessary alterations that would secure perfection of fit.

Fancy mixed cashmeres—neat effects in Cheviots—three and four button sack styles including the new straight front.

$6.50 to $15.00

And by the way you can better judge the unassailable quality of these suits if you'll do a little comparing.

BRIGHT YOUNG LIFE ENDED

MISS BESSIE WARREN PASSED AWAY THIS MORNING.

Miss Bessie Warren, a daughter of the late Mr. W. H. Warren, of Montreal, died this morning at the home of her mother, who resides on the corner of Victoria Avenue and Albert St. Deceased was in her 18th year and was an exceptionally clever young lady. She recently passed her examination in music at the Dominion College, Montreal, and her diploma arrived this morning after she died. Miss Warren had been ill but a few days. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church. Although she had been in the city but a short time, she had many friends who will deplore her demise. The remains will be taken to Montreal for interment.

Exit the Scorcher.

The day of the scorching record-breaker is over. People ride the bicycle to-day because it is a sensible, exhilirating exercise, and because it saves time. It is the easiest and most economical means of locomotion we have. The person who rides to business can select the prettiest route, the quiet street; the mind is not distracted and possibly irritated at the beginning of the day by coming down town in a jostling, crowded street car. That is why the scorching faddist has given place to people of sense who ride for reason. And the reasonable man or woman can find plenty of reasons for riding a bicycle.

SPRING AND SUMMER UNDERWEAR.

To be convinced that Quick & Robertson are selling underwear cheap take a look at the north window and see what is being offered at 25c each. Being in a position to handle large quantities, we took advantage of a mill offering and purchased at a ridiculously low figure, something over 300 dozens. Our advice is to buy early and secure best choice.

DENOMINATIONAL FLOATERS,

WHO RAMBLE FROM ONE CHURCH TO ANOTHER.

(Knoxonian.)

How would it do to try the doubling up process in the older Home Mission fields, and send some of the men now employed there to the Northwest? We have been told repeatedly by men at work in those older fields—thoroughly trustworthy men—that when a station has been supplied by different men for fifteen or twenty or more years, the people lose their denominational preferences. They go to their own church at a certain hour when they have supply, to some other church at another hour, and at the end of fifteen or twenty years all churches are pretty much alike to them. A generation has grown that has attended two or more churches, and cares about as much or as little for one as for another. Far be it from us to say this is a good state of things, but practical men must deal with things as they find them. Now, if such fields exist, and we are told they exist in considerable numbers, why not withdraw a lot of good missionaries from fields in which they are not much wanted and send them to fields in which they are both needed and wanted? The people who are crowding into the prairies from the Old Country and from the older parts of Canada, do most decidedly prefer their own church. Instead of keeping out of new and promising fields by arrangement with some other church, why not withdraw our men from fields that are neither new nor promising, and send them where they are needed and wanted by the people? In a short time an over-churched village of two or three hundred people ceases to a great extent to have denominational preferences. A missionary laboring among people who do not care much for any church in particular, might well be asked to labor among people who do care very much to have a minister of their own church. We respectfully suggest that the good men be moved to some place where the people do not think all churches are alike and are willing to show their preference by supporting their own.

POLICEMEN HAD LIVELY EXPERIENCE

MALE AND FEMALE ROSEBUSHES MADE THINGS WARM FOR THEM.

Police Officers McCrodan and Cook, last evening, about 9 o'clock, had for a few minutes a rather lively experience, but eventually came out victors. Two young men, named George and Wm. Rosabush, who were somewhat under the influence of liquor, were acting in a disorderly manner near the lower bridge, and when the officers made an attempt to arrest them trouble commenced. The men resisted the arrest most vigorously, using their fists and even feet at a rapid rate. Two sisters of the men appeared on the scene and they, too, took a hand in the affray by endeavoring to get their brothers away from the officers. One of the women kicked Officer McCrodan several times. A number of spectators were present, and the police were compelled to call for assistance, which was rendered them, and the men were locked up. The charges preferred against them were serious, namely, being drunk and disorderly, fighting and resisting the police.

The accused were brought up before the Magistrate this morning and pleaded guilty to the charge. George, the elder brother, stated that he did not remember resisting the police, but, as he was intoxicated at the time, claimed he was not responsible for what was done.

The Magistrate, after commenting upon the gravity of the offences charged, remanded the accused until Monday next for sentence.

TO FORCE THROUGH GRAND TRUNK BILL

PACIFIC LINE COMES UP IN COMMITTEE TO-DAY.

Ottawa, May 6.—The railway lobbyists are gathered in full force to-night preparatory to the meeting of the Railway Committee to-morrow, at which the Grand Trunk Pacific Bill is the first order. An urgent whip has gone out to all the Liberal members of the committee to be on hand, and they have been instructed to vote for the bill to pass in the form in which it has been introduced. The C.P.R. are passive spectators in the fight. The Canadian Northern opposition has been stifled on the intimation that if they persisted in blocking the measure they need not look for any further assistance from the Government. Hence the company will simply watch the bill, to see that the route of the G.T.R. Pacific does not interfere with the Canadian Northern's territory.

The trans-Canada project is the under dog in the situation. Messrs. H. M. Price and J. G. Scott, of Quebec, were here to-day, and with Mr. Talbot, M.P., had a lengthy interview with the Premier. Sir Wilfrid, it is understood, did not hold out any encouragement to them of assistance to their pet project, but promised that the Government would do its utmost to secure the Eastern terminus of the Grand Trunk line at Quebec City.

MORE GAME WARDENS NEEDED

ILLEGAL SHOOTING GOING ON IN PARTS OF NEW ONTARIO.

The report of the Ontario Game Commissioners for 1902, which has just been issued, states that throughout the older portions of the province it is believed that the game laws are well observed. Last year was a disastrous one to the young quail and partridge in low-lying districts. Woodcock was also very scarce, while ducks were unusually plentiful in the small reserves, but in the larger ones scarce.

The commissioners have under discussion plans for the propagation of quail. They are yearly becoming fewer and the Government may be asked to set apart a few hundred acres of land in Lambton, Essex, Kent and Middlesex Counties as breeding grounds.

The chief game warden in his report recommends the appointment of two wardens in New Ontario, and he has reason to believe that much illegal killing of large game occurs there during the winter. Twenty-seven deputy game wardens were added to the list during the year, making 285 in all. Regret is expressed that settlers' permits have been abused, and if it continues the privileges should be withdrawn, the game warden thinks.

Otter and beaver are not increasing to the extent desired, the amount received for their skins being a strong incentive to Indians and trappers to incur the risk of illegally killing them.

During the year 200 non-resident licenses were issued; 150 moose licenses and 5,165 deer licenses, an increase of 75 over the issue of 1901. The number of wolves killed was 161, at a cost of $2,715, or $15 a head.

A Genuine Old Tramp

The old man, Thomas Henderson, who on Saturday last was taken to the hospital, and who was unable to tell where his home was, was yesterday sent to jail for a month. It appears that he is a genuine old tramp and was sent up from here two years ago on a charge of vagrancy. He evidently has no home or friends in this section of the country.

New C. O. R. Station at Trenton

Trenton Courier: Mr. Alford, contractor, placed a gang of masons on the foundation on Monday, in excavating which he was able to quarry nearly enough stone to build the walls. The building will contain Waiting Room, Ticket and Telegraph Offices and Baggage Room on the ground floor, offices for the manager, superintendent, treasurer and other officials with a hall (where the directors will meet) on the second floor, and storerooms on the third floor. There will also be a large warehouse on the north for the storage of goods. The walls are to be of pressed "Don" brick from Toronto. The walks of cement.

Boys Are Practising Hard.

Much interest is taken in lacrosse and a large number of players are out practising each evening. The club have rented the old cricket field on the bay shore and the grounds will be put in first-class shape for practices and matches.

Port Hope a Great Lacrosse Town.

Port Hope Times: This town can certainly beat any town twice its size in Canada, for lacrosse teams. This year will see eight teams in Port Hope, all having different uniforms, and no one player figuring on two teams. They have a senior and junior team in the C.L.A., then the three town league teams and the last acquisition to this popular game is three clubs, which will be formed into a juvenile league. Who is there that will dare say these youngsters, who are all under seventeen, can't play lacrosse? Anyone who is in doubt as to their ability to play the game will have their doubts dispelled if they only wander up to the town park and see these kidlets handle the best hickory and cleek cord in a way that will make some of the older heads stare with amazement.

Bill for Seven Cents

One day lately a city clergyman kindly visited the Kingston Penitentiary and held service. Afterwards he had a cup of coffee and a sandwich. He thought he was worthy of his hire, and that the Government would not object to allowing him refreshments. Imagine his surprise and indignation when one day last week he received a bill from the Penitentiary authorities for seven cents. This is certainly small business.

BULGARIA THREATENED.

The Porte Holds That Country Responsible For Disturbances.

Constantinople, May 7.—The situation in Turkish official circles against Bulgaria is constantly growing more acute, and the Government of that Principality has been formally notified, in rigorous language, that the Porte holds it responsible for the outrages arising from the freedom of action which the Macedonian agitators living in Bulgaria have been allowed.

It is reported that the Porte has decided to mobilize the whole of the Second and Third Army Corps, stationed at Adrianople and Salonica, respectively.

An Engagement at Van-Itza.

Salonica, May 7.—An engagement is reported to have occurred at the village of Van-Itza between Turkish troops and a Bulgarian band, in which sixty Bulgarians, including their leader, Deltzeff, were killed, while the Turks had four men killed and three wounded. Thirty houses in Van-Itza were burned. A Bulgarian band, led by Petroff, has been routed at Krapestza. Seven of the Bulgarians were killed.

A number of dynamite bombs were captured here, and martial law was proclaimed in Salonica Tuesday.

The battleships Sandegna and Francesco Morosini, the cruiser Carlo Alberto, and the torpedo cruiser Calat Fimi of the Italian navy have arrived.

Vienna, May 7.—An unconfirmed rumor is current here that Albanians have murdered the Turkish general of the Uskub District.

Boiler Exploded; One Hurt.

Comber, May 7.—During the noon hour yesterday one of the boilers in Petit Bros. mill, about four miles from here, exploded. Three of the employes were sitting near the boiler eating their dinner when the boiler left its bed, but only one was injured. Herb Manly, a boy 14 years old, was seriously, but not fatally injured.

15 SAILORS WERE DROWNED

Schooner Gloriana Goes to Pieces Off Canadian Coast.

The Dories Were Launched, But Were Smashed as Soon as They Struck the Water—Cries of Men in Rigging Could Be Heard But They Could Not Be Reached—Men Perished Near Shore—Three Men Only Escaped.

Canso, N.S., May 7—The American fishing schooner Gloriana, Capt. George Stoddart of Gloucester, Mass., ran ashore on Thrump Cape Breakers at Dover Tuesday night, and 15 of the crew were drowned, out of a total of 18. The survivors were brought to Canso yesterday afternoon, and are being cared for by the American Consul. The names of the survivors are as follows:

Richard, Eugene Leblanc and Frank Nickerson.

The vessel struck the breakers at 12 o'clock. An attempt was made to escape in the dories, but they were smashed as soon as they were launched. The vessel drifted into the shore. Leblanc, Nickerson and Richard jumped from the jib-boom on to a rock. The vessel then turned side on to the rocks. The seas were washing over her, and washed several of the crew overboard. Their cries could be heard, but there was no possible way to save them. They were seen clinging to the rigging till daylight. The vessel then went to pieces, and 15 fishermen went to the bottom. The names of the drowned are not obtainable at present.

BOYS STRUCK BY TRAIN.

One Killed by International Limited Going West From Prescott.

Prescott, May 7.—A fatal accident occurred about three miles west of Prescott on the G. T. R. Fred Lane and his brother, Rollin, sons of Reid Lane of Augusta, aged 13 and 15 years, were returning home from town, walking on the track, when Rollin stepped out of the way of a freight train going east, did not notice the International Limited going west at the same time, was struck by the engine and so seriously injured that he died before he reached Brockville. His brother Fred was only slightly injured. The boys were living with their mother about four miles west of here.

AN ELECTION THIS FALL.

Liberal Government Engages Man to Turn Out Campaign Literature.

Ottawa, May 7.—All signs go to show that the Government will go to the country before the snow falls, or before it would in reason be time to call another session. The Printing Bureau is engaged in turning out the necessary blank forms, and the Government has engaged an experienced man to prepare its campaign literature. Then, what does the increase of 10 per cent. in the wages of the mechanical force of the I.C.R. indicate? There are many reasons why the Government should desire an early dissolution.

LIBERAL MEMBER DEAD.

Death of Dr. Bridgland at Bracebridge Follows Long Illness.

Bracebridge, May 7.—Dr. Samuel Bridgland, Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature for the District of Muskoka, died last night at his home here of Bright's disease.

Dr. Bridgland was 55 years of age, and was first elected to represent Muskoka in the Local House in the general elections of 1898, being returned for a second time in May last by a majority of 89.

His death leaves three vacancies—North Renfrew, Sault Ste. Marie and Muskoka. The Ross Government has now a majority of four.

Dr. Bridgland practised medicine for 33 years, and was extremely popular throughout Muskoka and in the Legislature.

A SEVERE CASE OF LUMBAGO.

MR. JAS. A. SEARLS, NORWICH, ONT., QUICKLY AND PERMANENTLY CURED BY

DR. PITCHER'S BACKACHE-KIDNEY TABLETS

Know what Lumbago is?

Pain catches you right in the small of the back—makes stooping over or rising up excruciating agony.

Wrong kidney action is the cause of the trouble, and if you let Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets set the kidneys working right, you'll be quickly and permanently cured.

Mr. Jas. A. Searls, the well and favorably known boot and shoe merchant of Norwich, Ont., made this statement:

"During a recent sharp attack of lumbago, in which the pain was extremely severe, I took a bottle of Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets. They took the pain out of my back so quickly, and so far as I can see made a cure so permanent, that I consider them unequalled for that most prevalent and painful affliction. I am only too pleased to recommend them to other people who may be suffering as I was."

Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets are 50 cents a bottle at druggists or by mail. The Dr. Zina Pitcher Co., Toronto, Ont.

POWER WHEELS ARE INERT

Members on Both Sides Oppose Premier's Power Bill.

Conservatives Say It Is a Poor Substitute For Government Utilization of Niagara Falls Water Power—Acting Premier's Pledge re. Centre Bruce Aired—Shabby Treatment of Hugh Clark—Premier Turned Colleague Down.

Toronto, May 8.—The death of Dr. Bridgland, M.P.P., for Muskoka, was the subject of touching references in the Legislature yesterday afternoon, both leaders paying tribute to the worth of the late member. The Speaker said he had directed that a wreath be sent to Bracebridge, to be laid on the coffin of the late member.

Niagara Falls Power.

In moving the second reading of his bill, the Premier said there had been some agitation in the press and on the platform on the question of the Government placing within the reach of the manufacturers of Ontario the electrical energy stored at Niagara Falls. Three franchises had been granted, each providing for a development of from 100,000 to 125,000 horse-power, but the bill was proposed to enable municipalities either singly or jointly, to embark in the enterprise. It was proposed to put them in the position of installing their own plant, and building transmission works in order that they might place electrical energy within the reach of their own people. The municipalities are empowered to appoint three commissioners to report on the scheme, as to the cost of the work, the expenses of maintenance, the productive capacity of the works, the probable demand for power, the cost to consumers, the amount of power in use, the proportion of contribution by municipalities, the desirability of the undertaking, time required to complete the works and the extension of existing works to other municipalities, and in the event of any of the commissioners being favorable to the undertaking the municipalities are empowered to submit a bylaw to the ratepayers. In the event of the passage of the bylaw by the various municipalities, the bill provides that a board of commissioners shall be appointed to carry out the work.

Leeway of Ten Per Cent.

If any of the municipalities vote against the proposal it is provided that the remaining municipalities may go ahead, providing it is shown to the satisfaction of the Chief Justice of Ontario that the acquisition and construction of the works so modified shall not have the effect of increasing the liability for the cost of the work more than ten per cent beyond the amount assented to by the ratepayers.

Mr. Ross said the principles of the bill were very simple, but the chief difficulty would be the working out of the scheme by the municipalities. The question would arise whether the municipalities desire sites at Niagara Falls for their own use. The report of the Park Commissioners, which was laid on the table a few days ago, dealt with the available sites remaining at Niagara Falls for power plants.

Mr. Whitney said that the members of the Opposition had been unable to lay hands on the report.

Mr. Ross, continuing, said there were still four sites equally as good as the ones already granted. The estimated cost of transmission was $3,600 a mile and the cost of maintenance $185 a mile.

For the Whole People.

Mr. Whitney said the members were face to face with the problem without having seen the report of the Park Commissioners, and without a practical explanation of the bill by its promoter. The House would like to have understood what they might expect would be the benefits to accrue from the carrying out of the proposition. It appeared to the speaker that the Government had brought themselves to accept the principle rather than adopt the scheme proposed by the Opposition, which was that the Government should spare enough time to devise a scheme for the utilization of the forces of nature for the benefit of the whole people. He was unable, in the absence of any information, to speak in regard to the water power that was still available, and there was no explanation of the way it was proposed the proposition would work out. The best way to deal with the question would be for the Government to be the controlling or central authority.

One Defect in the Bill.

He considered one defect of the bill to be that it proposes to carry out the scheme against the will of one or more of the municipalities, which may enter into the arrangement and then back out.

In explaining the absence of a more elaborate presentation of the principles of the measure, Mr. Ross said he had assumed that the members of the Legislature would read it. He did not think, however, that the leader of the Opposition had read ten clauses of the bill.

Mr. Whitney said the Premier paid the House the doubtful compliment of presenting a bill and being either unwilling or unable to give an intelligent explanation of it.

Mr. Carscallen (Hamilton) asked if the bill applied to other powers than Niagara Falls, and the Premier replied that it did.

Mr. Carscallen believed that the bill would lead municipalities into all sorts of difficulties. He would rather give municipalities special privileges than pass a general bill. This was fraught with danger to the municipalities.

Mr. Hoyle said the general principle of the bill was a principle which the municipalities had been asking for. The municipalities have a right to demand the privilege of generating their own electrical energy.

Mr. Morrison was in accord with the principle of the bill.

Mr. Pattullo Opposed.

Mr. Pattullo said he could not see the great advantage that the promoters of the scheme were predicting for it. He was opposed to the policy of the Government developing electric power, for he saw many difficulties in the way. The speaker did not think the steam power was more expensive than electric. One large factory in Toronto produced steam power at a cost of $5 per horse-power per annum. He wished it to be understood that he was an advocate of municipal ownership, but he did not favor the principle of municipal trading. He regarded the bill as opening the door to the most insidious principle of municipal bonusing, and doubted if the municipalities would take advantage of the privilege as much as some people expect.

What he would like to see was the distribution of power of Niagara Falls by commissioners appointed by the Government.

Mr. Matheson—That is what we proposed last year, and you voted against it.

Mr. Pattullo—No, sir. What you proposed was that the Government should develop the power.

Continuing, Mr. Pattullo enlarged upon the idea of the Government undertaking to distribute the power developed at the Falls.

Mr. Matheson—Where would you get the power?

Mr. Pattullo—From whichever of the present companies would sell power the cheapest.

Mr. Matheson—Why should not the Government develop the power, rather than pay the profit of the private companies?

Mr. Pattullo said if terms could not be made with the companies, then the Government might undertake the generation of power. He did not believe that any leader would adopt such a policy as outlined by Mr. Matheson.

Dr. Nesbitt For Municipal Power.

Dr. Nesbitt said he came back to the original proposition for the Government to generate the power and deliver it to the municipalities, but would accept the principle of giving the municipalities the power to develop power, on the ground that half a loaf is better than no bread. By giving away our valuable water privileges, you are going to handicap the people of the Province of Ontario for all time to come. A Government that gave away concessions to private corporations was not protecting the people as it should do. He charged that the Government had given away the most valuable concessions at Niagara Falls.

The bill was then read a second time and sent to the Municipal Committee.

The Centre Bruce Saw-Off.

On motion to go into supply, Mr. Clark (Centre Bruce) opened a discussion on the proposed saw-off of the Centre Bruce protest. He read correspondence which passed between Hon. Mr. Harcourt, Acting Premier, while Mr. Ross was in England, Mr. Bristol, the Conservative lawyer, and Mr. R. A. Grant, the Liberal lawyer.

In the letter of June 25, Mr. Harcourt said: "I am in receipt of your letter of June 25, enclosing copy of letter from Mr. Grant. The agreement was entered into, must be carried out, and I will at once so state to Mr. Grant." He repeated the same determination in subsequent letters, but notwithstanding this the protest against Centre Bruce had not been dropped. On Sept. 16, Premier Ross wrote Mr. Bristol saying he would see Mr. R. A. Grant and discuss the case of Centre Bruce with him. He said that as the difficulty had occurred in his absence, he was not familiar with the circumstances, and could not express an opinion without further information. Mr. Clark said he believed Mr. Harcourt had done everything in his power to carry out the agreement entered into, short of resigning. The Premier, however, stood with those who opposed his colleague in this and went into Centre Bruce because he thought he would reap a political advantage.

Mr. Harcourt's Reply.

Mr. Harcourt in reply said he had been a member of the Legislature longer than any one there, and gave his version of the conference of the two political parties on June 23. He knew very little of what was done there, for, when he went into the room the parties had a list of 40 seats set off one against the other. When it was proposed that no protest should be entered against any of the seats Mr. Grant said it must be understood that it could not be done. This particular petition had its origin in Centre Bruce, and the most that could be said of the saw-off agreement was that it was a conditional one. At the conference the suggestion was made that the petition in North York should be sawed off, but it was pointed out that it was impossible to control local conditions, one of the Conservative representatives saying he would do it if he could.

Mr. Harcourt said, after the time for filing a petition in Monck had expired, the Conservatives would have protested South Perth, East Lambton and Welland, where they would have had a good chance, but there was not one chance in a million that they would carry Monck. Moreover, on the list Monck was opposite Ottawa.

Mr. Clark said it was one list against the other.

Mr. Harcourt said he did not want his hon. friends opposite to think that he would willingly put his initials to a document if he was not able to carry out the bargain. He made a personal appeal to the candidate, Dr. Stewart, and he asked his colleagues to make a personal appeal, and they were met with the statement that the petition could not be dropped. He believed that in Centre Bruce three Liberals to one would have preferred to drop the protest. Had he thought that after June 24 his political opponents would have been disadvantaged he would have taken another course. This was the first time in 25 years he had had to make a personal explanation.

After some further discussion, in which Mr. Foy, Hon. Mr. Stratton, Dr. Nesbitt, Mr. St. John, Dr. Jamieson and Mr. Whitney, who remarked, in closing the debate, that Mr. Harcourt's own words proved that he tried to carry out the bargain he had made, but all would regret that he did not have sufficient stamina to insist on his colleagues' supporting his action, and he could have forced them to come down.

Export of Natural Gas.

Dr. Reaume brought up the condition of the natural gas supply in Essex. He contended the supply had been ruthlessly wasted, and said that it was not until the gas was nearly exhausted that the protection was put in force.

Mr. Auld said the last speaker was talking too much gas. The natural gas belonged to South Essex and he was there as representative of that constituency.

About 11 o'clock the House went into supply and passed [illegible] for maintenance of public institutions.

Hon. Mr. Latchford promised to get a report on the damage by bush fires in North Hastings, near Bancroft.

A number of bills were read a first time and the House adjourned.

Dominion Parliament.

Ottawa, May 8.—The House was occupied nearly all yesterday afternoon considering Mr. Blair's bill, consolidating the Railway Act, and appointing a Railway Commission. Progress was very slow. Mr. Kemp asked whether express companies were to be included, and Mr. Maclean suggested that the Railway Commission might deal with express companies, telegraph and telephone lines. Mr. Blair declined to discuss the question at this stage, and the bill was laid over. The House then went into Supply. The House adjourned at 12.30 o'clock.

Murdered For His Money.

Winnipeg, May 8.—Dewitt C. Kinsey, an old man of 61 years of age, one of the pioneers of this city, was found in his room at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, his head in a pool of blood, dead. There was every reason to believe that the old man, who is known to be possessed of considerable money, was murdered. The police are investigating the affair.

MINISTERS INTERVENE.

Sir Wm. Mulock and Hon. Wm. Prefontaine Confer With the Leaders in the Montreal Strike.

Montreal, Que., May 8.—Sir William Mulock and Hon. Mr. Prefontaine, who reached here last evening from Ottawa, with a view to confer with the shippers and longshoremen, and if possible bring about a settlement, have been closeted with both parties up to midnight, and so far the result is unknown.

At 1 o'clock a.m., Sir William Mulock gave out a statement to the effect that he had made certain propositions to the shippers, which they would consider to-day. If they are accepted, the Postmaster-General will then submit them to the men. The impression generally prevails that to-morrow will see the end of the strike. Sir William would not indicate the nature of his propositions to the shipping men.

TRANSVAAL LOAN SUBSCRIBED.

Twenty Times More Cash Offered Than Can Be Handled.

London, May 8.—The issue of the prospectus of the Transvaal loan was awaited with the greatest interest in financial circles here, and there was a scene of considerable excitement at the Bank of England yesterday, where thousands of people congregated hours before it was finally given out that the prospectus announced the issue of $150,000,000 of the $175,000,000 authorized, and that the price would be at par, with interest at 3 per cent. The loan is redeemable in 1953. A sinking fund of 1 per cent. will be applied to the purchase of stock when below par. The Government of the Transvaal reserves the right to pay off stock at any time after May 1, 1923, subject to six months' notice. The instalments on stock are payable as follows: Three per cent. on application, 7 per cent. May 22, and the balance to be distributed from June to December. The instalments may be paid in full May 22, under a discount of 2 per cent. The list closes on or before May 12.

It was understood late yesterday afternoon that the loan had been subscribed for twenty times.

LAND SCANDAL INQUIRY.

Hon. Mr. Wells Denies in Toto the Story Told by Taylor.

Victoria, B.C., May 8.—At the inquiry into the South Kootenay land scandal yesterday Wells denied the statement of Taylor in toto. He alleged that Taylor had long been acting in the C.P.R. interests. He said that Taylor had telegraphed to Eberts suggesting the change of the lands in question from British Columbia Southern to Columbia and Western, and Eberts replied "impossible." He said Taylor had come to him with propositions that a company of twenty shares was being formed to acquire the lands, one share to go to Wells. He said Taylor urged him to deliver the grants.

Commencing May 2nd and during June, July and August The Intelligencer Office will close on Saturdays at 5 p.m. sharp. Customers and subscribers will please note this.

Could Not Use the Cars

This week 1,000 flat cars were forwarded by the Grand Trunk Railroad Company from the yards at York and Belleville to Montreal, where it was intended to load them with railroad iron which had arrived by steamship, but owing to the strike of longshoremen the iron could not be handled. The disposal of the cars then became a problem for the railroad authorities to solve, all the yard room in Montreal and Point St. Charles being fully occupied, as the strike had created a blockade. Finally the cars had to be sent back to Belleville and York, there to await such time as it is found possible to handle the railroad iron.

THE BUSINESS VIEW.

Sensible and patriotic people, in this country, we think, will certainly agree with the sentiments expressed by the Canadian Trade Review, which, referring to the fact that during the past seven months Canada has imported from the United States goods to the value of $67,000,000, while the importation from all other countries in the world amounted to only $53,000,000, and the importations from the United Kingdom were valued at only $32,000,000, says:

> "Of course, many reasons can be cited for this state of affairs. In the first place the Americans use Canada as a slaughter market for their surplus stock. In the second place they thoroughly understand our needs. In the third place they exploit the country with travellers, while the British manufacturers depend upon catalogues which are only silent sellers and are not equal to the glib-tongued American traveller with a line of goods to sell at cut prices. Thus, naturally, the Americans capture our trade. They are on the spot. They know exactly what we want, and are prepared to give it to us at lower prices than they would charge in their own market—simply because it is surplus product. But this is not fair, either to the British or the local manufacturer. And, thus, it would seem to call for a readjustment of the tariff. Why should the American be entitled to a preference in this market, as he practically is? He should be placed on the same line as the British exporter, and he should not be allowed to compete at advantage with our local industries. This is simply justice. And the Government can easily remedy it, if they wish. The United States have a tariff which is practically prohibitory against Canadian goods or produce. Why, then, should we favor them, as we do? Our motto should be Canada first and all the time. Next to that should be the interests of the great empire to which we belong, and not those of a foreign country."

Note New Prices

From now until further notice the price of Beefsteak and Potatoes in our Lunch Room will be 20c. instead of 15c as formerly.

This change is made necessary by the present high price of good Beefsteak.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Surely it is enough to make people smile through their tears when they hear certain Grits of this city, stating that the agitation for reforms in the local Post Office emanated from politicians, "Tory heelers," as they are called, who simply made use of a hatched-up story to have a fling at the Government. This, we respectfully submit, is simply adding insult to the injury which has for years been borne by the people of this good city.

• • •

If anything were needed to show that the resolution introduced by ex-Mayor Johnson was a useful and necessary one, is it not furnished by the evidence of the Postmaster himself, who, to quote the words of the report,

> "Said he was pleased with the resolution, and thought it would awaken the Government to the situation."

Surely the Postmaster, an official appointed by the Government, who is in touch with the whole situation, ought to know what the needs of the local office are! Is this testimony to be sneered at as a "Tory yarn" by the people who were instrumental in securing his appointment? No, no! Whatever people say about Mr. Leavens they cannot say he is a "Tory heeler." Therefore, when we see him approving of the resolution and admitting that "the Government needs to be awakened to the situation," we must decline to have a political herring drawn over the trail in the endeavor to burk the movement for a much-needed change.

It is extremely regretable that men cannot be fair-minded enough to drop politics in discussing this matter, and work fairly and above board to bring about a change which would substantially benefit this city. At present both business men and private citizens are subjected to annoyances and delays; the status of the office, being low, denies to certain young men of Liberal tendencies the opportunities and emoluments they are fairly entitled to, and yet a few—very few, happily—of our citizens cannot put off their party spectacles long enough to subscribe candidly and fairly to an unequivocal statement of fact. We must admit that we had hoped for better things from our friends the Grits!

Mr. Andrew Carnegie, the much-talked-of millionaire, is never so happy as when giving away advice, or libraries. Most people find both of his gifts equally hard to accept. However, the words of a successful man always carry weight, therefore even those who dislike the Man Who is Afraid of Dying Rich may find some meat in the following epigrams culled from "The Empire of Business," Mr. Carnegie's new book, —He says, among other things:

Be king in your dreams.

Boss your boss as soon as you can; try it early.

Put all your eggs into one basket and then watch that basket.

Do not be particular; take what the gods offer.

Instead of the question, "What must I do for my employer?" substitute, "What can I do?"

You will often hear the false axiom, "Obey orders if you break owners." Don't you do it. Always break orders to save owners.

Remember President Garfield's doctrine: "The richest heritage a young man can be born to is poverty."

Do not forget that liquor and speculation are the Scylla and Charybdis of the young man's business sea, and endorsement his rock ahead.

It is a great mistake to think that the man who works all the time wins. Have your amusements.

There is always a "boom" in brains; cultivate that crop.

If tempted to speculate, say to the tempter that you would prefer to go to a well-conducted house where they cheat fair.

BELLEVILLE MINSTRELS AT DESERONTO

WENT DOWN ON THE ANNIE LAKE —HAD A GOOD TIME AND A GOOD HOUSE.

The good ship Annie Lake bore herself proudly yesterday afternoon, as, about 2.30 o'clock, she steamed out of the harbor for Deseronto. Strict orders had been given that no one should talk to the man at the wheel, for this was no ordinary occasion, mind you. On board the Annie were the Amateur Minstrels of Belleville, who, loaded down to the gunwale with high spirits, were en route to Deseronto to give one of their sparkling entertainments for the benefit of the good people of Rathbunville. Before leaving, a heavy life insurance had been placed on the lives of the Minstrels, as the fear was freely expressed that some of the jokes might sink the ship. Such fears were groundless. The Annie floated like a cork. As she rounded the Grand Junction dock a crowd of urchins on the shore threw a few bouquets, but the range was too great, and they fell short. All went well till Massassaga was reached, when the manager saw with alarm that the interlocutor was sea-sick. He was given a piece of smoked glass to look through, and soon recovered. Arrived at Deseronto, a tremendous crowd of people was seen to be upon the dock, who gazed with curious and not unkindly glances at the talented Bellevillians as they formed in line for procession, which, by general consent, was the warmest thing of the kind ever seen in Deseronto. First went the Band, playing a selection from Floradora. As they played the strain, "Tell me, handsome stranger, are there any more at home like you?" the crowd joined in the chorus with great heartiness. The Band marched gracefully uptown, hotly pursued by the endmen, each carrying a cane, an expansive smile and a silk hat of modern vintage. Right behind them was the boy choir. The ladies in Deseronto fell in love with the boys on the spot, and the manager had to keep a sharp eye open to see that none of them were abducted. Following the boy choir came the youth and beauty of Belleville, who swell out their chests and sing in the choruses. The procession reached a hotel and stopped. The streets were thronged with people, and it was evident the news of the coming of the Belleville Minstrels had spread far and wide. When the curtain went up at night the house was full. Everything went with a swing, and the audience haven't stopped laughing yet at some of the jokes. The applause was so loud that people heard it over on Foresters' island. The good people of Deseronto expressed themselves as delighted with the performance. The Annie Lake, with her precious freight, got back safely early this morning, and now the Minstrels are full of fresh air and delight with the trip. Their next performance may be at the St. Louis exposition—or the World's Fair at Shannonville.

Slater Shoe Advertising.

Shoe Cost.

Short talks by the Slater Shoe ad. man, No. 4.

It costs less to advertise and sell the "Slater Shoe" than it costs to sell ordinary shoes without advertising.

If a thousand people know a shoe is good more people will want that shoe than if only ten people know it.

If the "whole city" knows it more people will want it than if only the people passing the store where it is sold, know it merely by hearsay.

The "Slater Shoe" makers, knowing the "Slater Shoe" will back up the expense of advertising it, give it wide publicity—they tell the "whole city" about it.

It follows then as the "Slater Shoe" is better known through advertising than unadvertized shoes, that more "Slater Shoes" of equal grades are sold, which is a fact.

So the fixed charges of manufacturing, wholesaling and retailing are divided among a greater number of pairs of shoes than is the case in unknown shoes of smaller sales.

For instance:—Take a salesman's salary at $2.00 per day:—if his sales are only ten pairs per day the cost of retailing alone is 20 cents per pair.

But if advertising will enable him to sell fifty pairs per day the cost is only four cents per pair and thus such fixed expenses as rent, light, taxes, salaries, interest, etc., are reduced and divided.

So the wearer as well as the maker is benefited by the liberal and judicious advertising of a good article like the "Slater Shoe"—and it would be rank folly to risk a large amount of money to advertise a shoe which the wearers would not buy a second time.

Alleged Theft of Wheel

On Tuesday last Mr. Joseph Clement, who resides at Canifton, left his bicycle outside of a business place on Front street, and when he came out the wheel was gone. The police recovered it yesterday. It was taken by a lad named Duesberry, and it is alleged that he sold it for a trifling sum. The matter will be ventilated in the police court.

ALL DRUGGISTS WARRANT EVERY BOTTLE.

If troubled with rheumatism, give Chamberlain's Pain Balm a trial. It will not cost you a cent if it does no good. One application will relieve the pain. It also cures sprains and bruises in one-third the time required by any other treatment. For sale by all druggists,

Congratulations to Sir Mackenzie Bowell.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—I do not think that the appointment of our honored fellow-citizen, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, to be the Honorary Colonel of the gallant 49th Regiment Hastings Rifles, should pass without an expression of the gratification which must be felt by all old and young "veterans" and all officers on the active list. This fitting recognition of long and faithful service in both the 15th and 49th Regiments, will be especially gratifying to the old and present officers of both corps. It is not often nowadays that one "obtains that which he merits, or merits that which he obtains," but the eternal fitness of things, has, in Sir Mackenzie Bowell's case, been consummated, more especially when we remember that part of his service consisted in doing duty at the front and part as the Minister of Militia and Defence of Canada. On the occasion of a visit to Quebec with Sir Mackenzie, his companions were much struck with the special and more than cordial attention which he received continuously during his stay, from Sir Adolphe Caron, the former Minister of Militia, and indeed from all his French compatriots, who told us that they appreciated him because they always knew just exactly where he stood, and what they had a right to expect. An incident of the trip also that was especially noted, was the courtesy extended by the present Minister of Marine and Fisheries, then Mayor Prefontaine, of Montreal. Good soldiers and good citizens—terms perhaps which are identical and interchangeable—will unite in congratulating the veteran and vigorous octogenarian upon his appointment, and also the 49th Regiment upon the honor which they worthily share.

Yours,
W. N. PONTON, Lt.-Col.,
Reserve of Officers.

The Bachelor Girl's Creed.

Article I.—I believe it is better to remain happily unmarried than to be unhappily married.

Article II.—I believe there is more satisfaction in hoeing your own row than in sitting idly by and letting somebody hoe it for you.

Article III.— I believe the world would go to ruin without maiden aunts.

Article IV.—I believe there would be some miserable bachelors if they had no nice "old maid" sisters.

Article V.—I believe there are plenty of men good enough for friends, but precious few for ideals.

Article VI.—I believe women would appreciate one another if they were not so taken up with appreciation of the other sex.

Article VII.—I believe babies are adorable when they're good; but when they're not it's mighty nice to go away and shut the door and thank heaven they don't belong to you.

Article VIII.—I believe a women understands a man ten times better than a man can ever hope to understand a woman.

Article IX.—I believe that at least one of the contracting parties has got to be a saint if marriage is not to be a failure.

Article X.—I believe marriage is the highest mission on earth for the woman who is called to it; but that there are thousands of women for whom some other work has been mapped out which could never be done if they married.

Article XI.—Hence, I believe the bachelor girl is a particular, necessary creature, for whom the world ought to give thanks, instead of pitying her because she didn't sacrifice her happiness and usefulness to passing sentiment.

Article XII.—Amendments may be added to this creed, in case I ever change my mind.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alternative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

If thy friend is honey, do not lick him up altogether.

Will be Found an Excellent Remedy for sick headache. Carter's Little Liver Pills. Thousands of letters from people who have used them prove this fact. Try them.

Over 250,000 copies of Charles Dickens' novels are sold annually.

The Well Known Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

The average watch represents but 12 hours of human labor.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer Complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

A woman never knows where the match box is.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

Wedding rings in St. Kilda used to be made of worsted.

Will positively cure sick headache and prevent its return. Carter's Little Liver Pills. This is not talk, but truth. One pill a dose. See advertisement. Small pill. Small dose. Small price.

Many a man's self-conceit is due to his ignorance.

Holloway's Corn Cure is the medicine to remove all kinds of corns and warts, and only costs the small sum of twenty-five cents.

Coral is a talisman against thunder and evils by flood and field.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation. —Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

Attend no auctions if thou hast no money.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed),
T. S. McINTEE.

The best wheel of fortune is honest labor.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I knew of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption.

WHY WE LEAD

Our word stands guard over every transaction in our house, insuring your satisfaction, not merely for the worth of your money, but to the full limit of values. Our word is behind every advertised statement, insuring you of its absolute truth. The throngs of people who visit our store speak for our methods better than we can. If you have nothing else to do—even if you do not care to buy—come and look. It is interesting to watch others, sometimes you will see with your own eyes and hear with your own ears the whys and wherefores of our leadership.

Ready At All Times

Because it is summer on Saturday and winter on Monday, that need not puzzle you. We are always prepared for warm weather or cold, wet weather or dry. But spring is a coy young thing, only playing with you, happy if she can catch you unprepared on the bright to-morrow.

We forgot yesterday to congratulate Mr. William Johnson on being re-elected superintendent of Bridge St. Sunday School, but then everybody has got so used to seeing him in that position that they take his re-election as a matter of course. Mr. Johnson is now in the 29th year of his incumbency, and it will be a long while before the big Sunday School thinks it has "too much Johnson."

A correspondent writes: "It is rumored that the reason advanced why a certain hotel should not be deprived of its license this year is because the present lessee went 1000 miles to vote for the Hon. A. G. Blair. Do you consider that a good reason?"

What this great family journal happens to think has, like the poseys that bloom in the spring, precious little to do with the case. If we had our way we'd give the licenses to the hotels which had the best accommodations. That was the old-fashioned way, but times have changed. In former days it was the push of the lessee which got him his license; now he gets it through the pull of the owner of the place.

The reverend editor of The Globe is beginning to find out that it is hard to please everybody. Since his illuminating essays began to appear on the editorial page of Canada's leading Liberal journal we have seen and heard Philistines scoffing at what they termed "the pharasaical attitude of The Globe;" one lesser light of Gritism actually said it was "trying to undermine the War Cry in its peculiar field." Now, alas! and alack a day! we see the reverend editor condemned by a body of his own political brethren because he is not goody-goody enough, and does not bring pressure to bear on his wicked partners on The Globe staff to cause them to eliminate the worldliness which they display in their writings. If this kind of cross-firing keeps on his reverence will know how to appreciate the remark of another reverend editor, who, after a year's duty, said he "felt as though he had been sandpapered" by too much criticism.

INFLAMED NOSE AND THROAT

And such diseases of the respiratory organs as bronchitis, weak lungs, cold in the head and nasal catarrh, are treated with marvellous success on strictly scientific principles by Catarrhozone. The medicated vapor of Catarrhozone quickly traverses every air passage possible to be reached by any treatment. All soreness, pain, congestion and inflammation are at once dispelled, and by means of the healing powers of Catarrhozone the vitiated tissues are quickly restored. Where Catarrhozone is used colds last only ten minutes, coughs half an hour, and catarrh, consumption, asthma and bronchitis flee as from fire. A trial will convince anyone of the startling merit of Catarrhozone. Costs $1.00, small size 25c. At druggists', or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

How the World Assimilates Improvements.

How quickly the world assimilates new improvements which in many instances radically affect the habits of living of a large proportion of the public has been often demonstrated. Electric lights, telephones and trolley cars were all introduced to popular use within the memory of the present generation. Yet, whoever stops to wonder at an electric light, who marvels at the "no pullee—no pushee" street car and who gives the telephone more than a passing thought—save to register a kick at unsatisfactory service. And the bicycle came in, was a nine days wonder and then settled into the rut of a commonplace utility. And thoughtless people said the "fad had died out." No, it merely became an everyday necessity. It excites no more comment than electric lights or telephones or trolley cars. Being more personal than any other modern utility, it is less talked about than the public utilities, for the same reason that people do not frequently discuss their shoes or clothes or hats. Yet the bicycle is now almost as much a part of the daily life of the public and a personal necessity to thousands as their clothing or shoes or hats.

DAISY GORDON'S FOLLY

—OR—

THE WORLD LOST FOR LOVE'S SAKE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY,

Author of "The Crime of Hallow-E'en," "The Flirtations of a Beauty," "Willful Gaynell," "Little Leafy," "Only a Mechanic's Daughter," etc.

"Was it all a dream, papa?" she asks, in an awful whisper, raising a pair of terrified blue eyes to his sunburned face.

Farmer Gordon draws nearer the white bed, and lays his hand on the curly, golden head.

"It's not a dream, child; you fainted by the roadside. What was the cause of it?"

Daisy tried to speak; but no word fell from her white lips.

"You'd been gone a long time, lass," he went on, "and I started out in search of you; I thought, mayhap, you'd fallen asleep somewhere, and as I walked along the path that leads over the hill, I saw you lying all in a white heap in the long grass by the roadside, an' I picked you up and brought you home. You gave me a mighty scare, lass — a mighty scare."

He wondered why Daisy drew her white arms round his neck, begging, with tears in her lovely eyes, that he would pardon her for what she had done.

"I reckon I'll have to, providin' you don't stay out so late again, lass," he answered.

He little knew what those words meant, then; but there came a dark day when they came back to him all too plainly.

Daisy longed to ask her father if she was quite alone when he found her, but she knew it must be so, else he would have spoken of it had it been otherwise.

Where then was her young husband? The thought bewildered her.

Should she tell her father what had happened? Would he be very angry with her, she wondered? Young as she was, she realized dimly that it was a strange, foolish, mad marriage; yet it was legal and binding. She was Harold St. John's bride.

"Ah, no, she could not tell him what she had done; at least, not just yet," she decided, and beautiful, guilty Daisy hid her face in the pillow, with the story of her romantic, secret marriage a heavy weight on her heart.

"Harold will come tomorrow and tell papa all, and claim me," she murmured. "He can tell him all so much better than I could," and with that thought in her heart, Daisy brushed the tears from her golden lashes and tried to sleep; but sleep would not come to her eyes.

A dark, handsome face seem' to float before her mental vision, and a voice rung in her ears uttering those cruel words:

"I may as well admit the truth. I believed you to be the heiress, or I should never have married you."

Those were the heartless words that had nipped poor little Daisy's romantic love-dream in the bud, and caused her to look at the picture of the future, which must be spent with this handsome, unloving young husband, with horror too great for words.

Both the farmer and Margy were startled at the white, wan, piteous face with which Daisy greeted them the next morning.

Farmer Gordon looked anxiously at his darling from over the rim of his steel-barred glasses.

"You are ill, lass!" he exclaimed. "Come and tell father what is the matter with his pet."

Poor Daisy! she felt an irresistible impulse to fling herself into his strong arms and tell him what she had done, and beg him to tell Harold St. John when he came to claim her, that she would not go with him, now that all the glamor and excitement and novelty of that hasty marriage was over, and she had discovered that Harold St. John had married her through a fatal error, not through love.

A great abhorrence filled her soul toward him, and she owned to herself she would rather die than go away with him.

"I am not ill, papa," she answered, "it is only the heat."

"Hetty and Olive will be back today," remarked the farmer. "You won't be lonesome much longer, pet."

Daisy hid her colorless face on his shoulder, making no reply.

"Here they are now," cried Margy, from the window, and the next moment the two girls came dancing over the wide porch into the summer kitchen.

Daisy did not spring to meet them, as was her wont, but hung back timidly aloof, fearful lest the sharp eyes of either Hetty or Olive should discern that she was laboring under intense suppressed excitement.

"Why don't you ask us if we had a good time?" laughed Olive, turning to her younger sister. "I suppose you're over the sulks by this time about going, aren't you?"

"Oh, Olive, if you had but taken me with you," sobbed Daisy, flinging herself at her sister's feet with hysterical sobs.

"Well, now, who ever heard the beat of that!" cried Hetty, looking on in amazement. "Daisy is getting to be more of a baby every day. The idea of crying about going to anything after it's all over."

It struck Olive's keen perceptions that it was not altogether that which caused Daisy to weep so hysterically.

Now that she looked keenly into the lovely young face, she saw that there was a wonderful change in it. She was rather puzzled.

"Did you take being left here so very much to heart?" she asked, slowly.

"Yes," answerd Daisy, piteously. "But tell me about it," she went on, nervously anxious to change the subject.

"We had a delightful time," declared Hetty. "The two weeks slipped by far too quickly for me. You ought to have seen Lillian Ruthven, the heiress; she takes the hearts of all the gentlemen by storm, and she's as proud as she is pretty, and that's saying a great deal.

"By the way, the funniest mistake happened on the night we came away that ever was heard of," Hetty went on, thoughtlessly. "The grand ball was at its height, when suddenly two officers made their appearance guarding a manacled stranger between them, and called for Lillian Ruthven.

"Oh, but this strange young man was handsome, dark and splendid looking like the picture of Romeo.

"We soon learned that he was one of the most noted of criminals — a blackguard of the deepest dye. It seems that he was convicted of some terrible crime, and while he was being taken to prison, by a daring leap into the darkness, while the train was passing at full speed over a high-bridge, he made his escape. The officers had been searching for him ever since.

"By the merest chance, as they were riding along last night, they came face to face with their man. He fought desperately, but they overpowered him, and took him. In his breast-pocket they found, much to their amazement, a marriage certificate, certifying that on that day he had wedded Lillian Ruthven the heiress."

They were all so much interested in the narrative they did not notice how white Daisy had grown—how her beautiful eyes dilated with terror, and how she clutched her little fluttering white hands over her heart with a wild, piteous sob.

Hetty went on quickly:

"The officers, who knew Colonel Ruthven well, were surprised that this handsome fellow should have met, wooed and won the heiress— all unobserved and in so short a time. They took him to Briar Hall without delay, and called for Miss Ruthven; and now comes the strangest part of all—the heiress, when she found out her handsome young husband's true character, denied her marriage to him, point-blank, and so vehemently she nearly went into hysterics."

"And he— what did the young man do, and say?" faltered Daisy, scarcely breathing in her intense excitement.

"He!— why, he refused to speak one word either admitting or denying her statement; but then, why should he!— there was the certificate to speak for itself.

"The minister who wedded them was sent for— he is old and nearly blind— he identified the young man as one of the contracting parties he had wedded within that hour, but he was uncertain about the lady; she was young— very young, slender and fair of face, crowned with a sheen of golden hair that fell to her waist in heavy curls. The old church was very dimly lighted, and he did not quite see her face. All this, you see, is a very good description of Lillian Ruthven.

"And then, another thing— at the very time this marriage took place no one at Briar Hall can remember having seen Miss Ruthven. She declares she stole away from her guests and went up to her room for a short rest; but her maid was not rung for, so no one believes that. Miss Ruthven fell in a deep, death-like swoon, and the handsome prisoner was led away to pay the penalty of his crime, which he had tried so hard to escape from— ten years at Sing Sing. I was sorry for him, he was so handsome."

Disease Lurks on Every Hand

AND FINDS LODGMENT IN THE WEAK RUNDOWN AND EXHAUSTED SYSTEM — PROTECT YOURSELF BY USING

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The spring air is often laden with disease germs. The waste and decayed matter of winter is thawed out, and forms a reglar hotbed of disease, from which arise poisonous gases and germs of disease.

People with rich blood throbbing through their arteries need have little fear, for disease seeks out the weak and exhausted for its easy victims. For such there is no season more to be dreaded than spring.

The artificial life of winter is such as to leave the blood thin and watery, and as a result the action of the vital organs, such as the heart, stomach, kidneys and liver is weak, sluggish and torpid, appetite becomes poor and digestion is impaired.

All depends on the state of the blood, and because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is, above all else, a builder and enricher of the blood, it is the best spring medicine that can possibly be obtained. Once the blood is made rich and pure the benefit is felt in every nook and corner of the human body. The vital organs perform their work, the nervous system is nourished and rekindled new, firm flesh and tissue is added, and new vigor and vitality permeate the whole system.

Instead of purging the system with salts and sarsaparillas this spring, enrich and purify the blood by a month's treatment with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and see how differently you will feel. As this food cure is composed of nature's greatest restoratives, it is bound to be of benefit to you. 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

FOURTEEN THOUSAND VETERANS KEPT IN SUSPENSE BY MR. DAVIS.

Toronto Telegram: Fourteen thousand lithographed certificates of location to be forwarded to veterans entitled to land grants under the Act presented by Hon. E. J Davis have been delivered at the Parliament Buildings. They will be distributed to the parties entitled to receive them when the Commissioner of Crown Lands says the word. If there is an election in sight the veterans association here refuse to believe that they will receive anything until after that, as the Government will likely hold anything the veterans are entitled to over their heads as a whip.

SWELLING OF THE FEET.

HOT, SWOLLEN, ACHING FEET RELIEVED BY FOOT ELM.

Many people suffer a great deal from feet that get hot and swollen, so that they can hardly remove their shoes at night. A free use of Foot Elm in the shoes for a few days will soon bring about a salutary change. The feet will feel cool and comfortable and the swelling gradually disappear. "A few days later he walked in to the store as straight as a string and handed me a dollar saying, 'give me another bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I want it in the house all the time, for it cured me.'" For sale by all druggists.

MARRIAGES

WHYTE—EAGLESON.—By the Rev. J. B. Stratton, assisted by Rev. George Brown, Chairman of the Lindsay District, at the residence of the bride's father, May 6th, 1903, Rev. Joseph M. Whyte, of Minden, Bay of Quinte Conference, to Olive M., second daughter of David Eagleson, of the Town of Lindsay.

Literature's Anticipations of Science.

A VERY interesting book might be written, as the "Spectator" observes, by collecting together all the cases in which poets and dramatists and novelists have anticipated the triumphs of later science. A correspondent has just called attention to such a case, in which he claims that the Spanish dramatist Calderon uttered "a very clear prevision of Marconi's wireless telegraphy." Freely translated, the passage in question reads as follows: "They say that when two instruments are properly attuned together they communicate to each other their wind-borne echoes; touch the one instrument and the winds excite its fellow, though none be near it." Calderon's reference is, of course, to the well-known principle of resonance, and can scarcely be used as a prophecy of wireless telegraphy, but in the writings of a contemporary of Calderon there is a much closer approximation to Marconi's discovery. Strada, the learned Jesuit historian, tells us how two friends carried on a correspondence "by the help of a certain Loadstone, which had such virtue in it that, if it touched two several needles, when one of the needles so touched began to move, the other, though at never so great a distance, moved at the same time and in the same manner." Strada goes on to describe how these two friends made a kind of "alphabetic telegraph"—a dial-face with the letters of the alphabet placed around its edge, and a needle in the center which could be made to point at any of the letters at will. "When they were some hundreds of miles asunder, each of them shut himself up in his closet at the time appointed, and immediately cast his eye upon his dial-plate. If he had a mind to write anything to his friend, he directed his needle to every letter that formed the words which he had occasion for, making a little pause at the end of every word or sentence to avoid confusion. The friend, in the meanwhile, saw his sympathetic needle moving of itself to every letter which that of his correspondent pointed at. By this means they talked across a whole continent, and conveyed their thoughts to one another in an instant, over cities or mountains, seas or deserts." Not only had these correspondents no necessity for wires; they did not even need the simple apparatus upon which Marconi depends, although there are scientific prophets of our day who believe that we shall yet reach even a higher standard of simplicity in the future.

Recognized Their Old Friend.

THE love which English people, especially British soldiers, feel for Florence Nightingale has been shown at many times and in many places. A new and striking instance of it was recently given by the "Sunday Magazine."

The late Sir John Steell, sculptor to Queen Victoria, was modeling a bust of Miss Nightingale, when an officer of one of the Highland regiments which had suffered so cruelly in the Crimea heard that the bust had just been completed, and was in Sir John's studio. Many of the men in his company had passed through the hospital at Scutari, and he obtained permission from the sculptor to bring some of them to see it. Accordingly a squad of men one day marched into the big studio and stood in line.

They had no idea why they had been mustered in so strange a place. Without a word of warning the bust was uncovered, and then, as by one impulse, the men broke rank, and with cries of "Miss Nightingale! Miss Nightingale!" surrounded the model, and with hats off cheered the figure of their devoted nurse until the roof rang.

So spontaneous and hearty and so inspiring was the whole scene that in after days Sir John Steell declared it to be the greatest compliment of his life.

At a New York Pier.

The traveler fell on his knees and begged for mercy; but the customs inspector was adamant.

"Once, and once only," said the latter, "I let a man go through without offering him every indignity that savage ingenuity can devise. He proved to be a spotter from Washington, and I nearly lost my job. I sha'n't make that mistake again."

Yes, the traveler would have to have his stomach pumped out; most distinctly, yes.—N. Y. "Life."

A Story of Cecil Rhodes.

Mr. Cecil Rhodes' latest biographer, Mr. Hensman, contradicts the story that Rhodes ever used the phrase "he never met a man whom he could not buy." The germ of this fiction, Mr. Hensman says, "is to be found in the fact that one day, many years ago, when discussing his proposed telegraph wire from one end of Africa to the other, somebody asked him how he proposed to carry it across the Soudan, which was then under the domination of the Khalifa. 'Oh, leave it to me,' Rhodes answered. 'I never met the man yet that I could not come to an agreement with, and I shall be able to fix things up with the Khalifa when the time comes.' This is the true version of a story that in its distorted form has been so widely circulated."

Proof Positive.

A convict at a French penal settlement, who was undergoing a life sentence, desired to marry a female convict, such marriages being of common occurrence. The governor of the colony offered no objection, but the priest proceeded to cross-examine the prisoner.

"Did you not marry in France?" he asked.

"Yes."

"And your wife is dead?"

"She is."

"Have you any document to show that she is dead?"

"No."

"Then I must decline to marry you. You must produce some proof that your wife is dead."

There was a pause, and the bride prospective looked at the would-be groom.

Finally he said: "I can prove that my former wife is dead."

"How will you do so?"

"I was sent here for killing her."

The bride accepted him notwithstanding.—"Scotsman"

SUITS FOR MEN

The Entirely Different Sorts.

Not satisfied with equaling in style, fit and excellence of workmanship the made-to-measure garments the best tailors produce, our makers are now fashioning their suits from the same fabrics which have heretofore been exclusive with the Custom Tailors.

Our showing of these suits is very extensive.

They are suits that the average man wants—they give him the style and exclusiveness he seeks without the extra cost of the tailors.

Even the most expert criticism will fail to discover that these suits were not custom made.

The broad showing we make including as it does every size for men of different propostions practically assurs a perfect fit for every man.

But in some cases an exact fit cannot be secured immediately and then we do as the tailors would do at a try on—make the necessary alterations that would secure perfection of fit.

Fancy mixed cashmeres—neat effects in Cheviots—three and four button sack styles including the new straight front.

$6.50 to $15.00

And by the way you can better judge the unassailable quality of these suits if you'll do a little comparing.

A DASTARDLY ACT

SHERIFF HOPE'S LITTLE DAUGHTER THE VICTIM OF A PAINFUL AFFAIR.

On Wednesday evening, Sheriff Hope, in company with his daughter, Kathleen, was riding on a G. T. R. train coming westward, when about two miles east of the station a large stone crashed through the window, beside which sat the little girl. She was struck in the face by the stone and broken glass, resulting in nasty cuts being made on her face. The affair has been reported to the railway authorities and every effort will be made to find out and punish the guilty party.

Laid to Rest

The funeral of the late Mrs. James Fargey took place yesterday, and a large number of relatives and friends were in attendance at the obsequies. Services were held at the residence of Mr. John Fargey, Thurlow, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Bennie, Presbyterian minister at Tweed. The remains were interred in the burying ground at Roslin. The bearers were four sons, Messrs. Peter, Wm. Scott and John Fargey, and two sons-in-law, Messrs. W. P. Hudson and W. A. Huffman.

WARNING TO FRUIT GROWERS

THE DANGEROUS TREES WHICH SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED NEAR ORCHARDS.

Prof. T. D. Jarvis, B. S. A., contributed the following useful advice to the annual report of the Ontario Agricultural College:—

The Mountain Ash, Wild Plum and Chokecherry are three common trees in the fruit districts of Ontario.

Botanically, the Mountain Ash is closely related to the apple and pear, and observation shows that the same insects are to be found on all three. Among these are the bud-moth, cigar case-bearer, tent-caterpillar, canker worm, oyster shell, bark-louse, scurfy bark-louse, apple plant-louse and San Jose scale.

The Wild Plum has the same insect and fungous enemies as the cultivated plum, which is closely related to it. On these can be found the plum curculio, brown rot and the shot-hole disease.

The Chokecherry and the cultivated cherry, which are also close relatives, have the same destructive enemies, viz., the tent-caterpillar, shot-hole disease and the brown rot.

An extensive fruit grower near Hespeler has an orchard (plum), surrounded by a double hedge-row of wild plum trees. Towards the end of June of the past season I inspected his orchard, and found that the plums were badly damaged by brown rot. On inquiry, I found that the farmer had sprayed his plum trees, but had neglected to spray his wild plum hedge. He was surprised that the spraying had done very little good; but when I pointed out the brown rot in abundance on the wild plums, he ceased to wonder that his spraying had so little effect.

In the suburbs of London, Ont., I found an apple orchard surrounded by a row of Mountain Ash trees. This was about the middle of May, when the bud-moth is in the most destructive stage. Nearly all the buds examined on the Mountain Ash trees contained a grub, which was the larva of the bud-moth. The apple trees were in a similar condition, in spite of continued sprayings. The explanation of the apparent ineffectiveness of the spraying in this case was the fact that the Mountain Ash trees harbored successive generations of bud-moths, that migrated yearly to the apple trees.

Complete, thorough and timely spraying would be a satisfactory safeguard, notwithstanding the presence of insects and fungous diseases on neighboring trees; but no spraying is complete, and it is, at the best, running a foolish risk, to keep one's orchard surrounded by a congenial habitation for insect and fungous pests.

As for remedial measures, I would suggest the following:—If the wild trees are few in number, they should be sprayed. On the other hand, if their preservation is not important, they should be cut down.

THE GOVERNMENT TAKES ACTION

Will Endeavor To Bring to an End The Big Strike at Montreal

Proposals Made Which Are Being Considered by the Strikers To day

Montreal, May 7.—The Dominion Government, it appears, has at last awakened to the serious state of affairs produced throughout the country by the dock laborers strike at Montreal, and as a result Sir William Mulock, who, in addition to being Postmaster-General, is also Minister of Labor, came to Montreal to-night in company with Mr. Prefontaine, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and had a protracted conference with the interested parties. The conferences, which were of a private nature, took place at the Windsor Hotel, and were not concluded until after midnight. No definite results were announced. The Ministers made certain proposals, with a view to bringing the strike to an end, which have to be considered by the shipping men and the 'longshoremen, and upon the decision then reached will depend whether the intervention of the Ministers have been successful or not.

The Ministers first received a deputation representing the city's interests, and composed of the Mayor, president of the Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce, and Harbor Commissioners, who represented the harm that was being done the city's interests by the prolongation of the strike. A request was also proposed for troops to relieve the militia. In reply to the latter request, Sir William Mulock explained that the law indicated the course to be pursued in such circumstances. The responsibility rested with the municipal authorities, who have to call on the D. O.C., and had power to draw on the troops throughout the district to relieve each other. After the Ministers had got through with this deputation, a committee representing the shippers were received, and had a protracted conference with the Ministers, lasting until after midnight. It was consequently announced that certain proposals had been made to the shippers which they promised to submit to a general meeting of the shipping men to be held in the morning.

As Mr. O'Neil, the strikers' representative, had been to Ottawa during the day in conference with the Ministers, and the latter was acquainted with the strikers' demands, the proposals will also be submitted to the 'longshoremen to-morrow. The nature of the proposals, which it is hoped will bring about a settlement, the Ministers declined to divulge.

An important meeting of the Montreal Branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, at which over one hundred leading manufacturers and business men were present, was held this afternoon to consider the deplorable condition of affairs resulting from the great dock strike. The discussion was mostly upon the question of foreign agitators coming into Canada and fomenting strikes, and upon the absolute necessity of having trades unions properly incorporated, so that with their rights would come equivalent duties and responsibilities. The opinion was expressed that the dock strike had been established from the other side of the line, and some strong speeches were made along the lines that foreign agitators should not be allowed to come into Canada. A resolution was passed expressing sympathy with the shipping interests in their determination to maintain a free and open labor market in the national port, and declare that all organizations or unions of workingmen should be local in composition, and in all cases so organized as to be amenable to civil law.

The Montreal business men are beginning to be seriously inconvenienced by the continual absence of many of their employees, who are on military service on the wharves, and as the result of a conference with the civic authorities and the Board of Trade to-day a deputation will be sent to Ottawa if the strike continues, despite the statements made by Sir William Mulock, to interview the Premier and the Minister of Militia, and ask that the militia be replaced by members of the permanent corps. The presence of the militia on the wharves is likely to prove a costly item to the city. The civic authorities were to-day presented with a bill for $5,000 to cover preliminary expenses.

SPORTING COMMENT.

In an account of the brush between the Columbia and Reliance, the New York Herald says: For just fourteen minutes the new defender and the old champion fought it out on the wind in a light air, and the result was not edifying, though possibly instructive, to those associated with the former.

The Columbia beat the Reliance considerable in this brush, and, though it does not show anything of a conclusive nature, it must be somewhat discouraging to the owners and all interested in the success of the boat recently finished for cup defence honors.

All the more credit should be given to the old vessel for the exhibition of her windward qualities. The rather poorly-fitting mainsail she carried, though bent for the first time, did not set well, and the leach was as tremulous as a reed shaken by the wind.

If, as it is thought by the experts abroad, the Shamrock III. is much superior to the Shamrock II. on all points of sailing, in all weathers, then there must be a feeling of alarm manifested as to the safety of the America's Cup, as, indeed, the Columbia was not, all things considered, a much better boat than the challenger of two years ago.

Confidence in the Reliance may be somewhat shaken by her windward performance with the Columbia, but it should not be seriously impaired. She may redeem herself and show qualities in a light breeze far superior to the Columbia. But then the friends of the new boat would feel much happier and more enthusiastic if she had not been beaten at all.

For the benefit of the local fans it will not be out of place to make an explanation of the working of the foul strike rule under which games in the two major leagues will be played this season. A foul counts as a strike only when a batter has no previous strikes, or but one other strike. If a batter fouls off two balls he is counted as having two strikes, but he may foul off a dozen more and not be penalized. If he misses the ball, making one strike, or has a strike called on him and then hits a foul, he is put down as having two strikes; or if he hits a foul and then misses or has a strike called, he has two strikes. Rule 44, Sec. 3, says:—"A foul hit, ball not caught on the fly, unless two strikes have already been called, is a strike."

What a lot of duffers they have on the Toronto Baseball team this year! Must be related to the Marlboros.

The presence of Major Maude in the grand stand must have unnerved the Hogtown players, or they would never have dropped the first game on their own grounds.

It looks as though New York would have a 'look-in' for the National League championship this year. They lead Pittsburg 99 points.

TROTTING.

Fast Brockville Mare Sold.

Brockville, May 7.—M. B. Sisek's fast racing mare, Nellie S., was sold to-day to Carl Herriman, the well-known Ogdensburg horseman, and was taken to that city. The price is said to have been about $1,000. Nellie S. is one of the best specimens of horse flesh ever bred in this section; in fact in all Canada. She is six years old, and in her two years on the turf won every race except her entry at the Ottawa meet, often taking two heats. She was injured and withdrawn. She is looked upon to make a mark better than 2.10 before the close of the present season.

SCHOOL SUITS.

Suits for the boys to wear to school are a most trying problem to mothers and the Oak Hall as well. They must not be too costly, and they must be of durable material and strongly made. If the boy has any fun at all he is sure to be hard on his clothes and the "holes" are bound to come. He must appear creditably and we guess the Oak Hall have solved the problem.

PASSED AWAY AT GOOD OLD AGE

FOR MORE THAN 60 YEARS MR. JOHN FINNEGAN HAD LIVED IN BELLEVILLE.

In the death of Mr. John Finnegan, which occurred last night at the family residence, Mill street, another aged and respected resident of this city passed away. For upwards of 60 years the deceased had been a resident of Belleville, 30 years of which he was engaged in the business of carriage manufacturing. Mr. Finnegan was born in the Town of Newery, County of Antrim, Ireland, in the year 1807, being thus 96 years of age. He came out to this country when a young man and resided for a time at Picton. In the year 1843 he came to this city, where he has since made his home. Deceased was well known throughout this section of the community as an upright and conscientious business man, and in consequence made many friends. Owing to infirmity he was compelled to give up business some two years ago, but notwithstanding his advanced age was able to walk about. The fatal illness was of short duration. Mr. Finnegan was a member of St. Michael's Church. The remaining members of the family are one son, Wm., of this city, and two daughters, Mrs. John Sheedy, of this city, and Mrs. John Coughlan, of Chicago.

FOR A COLOSSAL SUBSIDY

Grand Trunk Pacific Bill Before Railway Committee.

Will Ask For the Same Treatment From the Government as Was Received by the Canadian Pacific Railway—Question of Ocean Port—Begins Line at a Dozen Points and Completes Road to Winnipeg First.

Ottawa, May 8.—The long-expected Grand Trunk Pacific Bill came before the Railway Committee yesterday. This bill says nothing of subsidies. That matter, if it comes up, will be dealt with separately.

The big committee-room was packed to the doors. A map of the proposed route filled a large part of the wall behind Chairman Hyman. It showed a line running from Quebec to North Bay, thence north of Lake Nepigon to Winnipeg, thence through Edmonton to the Rockies and the Coast, through Peace or Pine River Pass, a dotted line showing that the route had been deflected so as to run through northerly of Ontario and Quebec, instead of dipping down to North Bay. It will pass not far south of Lake Abittibi. Connection is to be made with Old Ontario by the Temiskaming Railway.

A preliminary skirmish was fought over the map. It was objected that it did not show other lines distinctly, that it was not clear enough, that it was not big enough.

Leighton McCarthy, M.P., opened the case, by arguing that there is congestion of freight in the west, and that the development of Canada is hampered.

Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson.

"This system is promoted," said Sir Charles Rivers Wilson, "under the sponsorship of the Grand Trunk. The company has gone out for more railway facilities. Duty and interest call upon the Grand Trunk to meet the demand. It has immense advantages in its geographical and strategical position, its magnificent road and equipment its terminals, its valuable connections, unequalled elements of strength."

He goes on to give emphatic assurance that the Grand Trunk will carry the project through.

Mr. Blair, Minister of Railways, said that misapprehension was cleared up.

Sir Charles is asserted to have said to the Grand Trunk shareholders that the Grand Trunk is not committed to profit, and will give it only moral support unless Government assistance is forthcoming.

Must Speak With Reserve.

Sir Charles answers that he must speak with reserve as to that. This question of public aid would come up later. He had assured Grand Trunk shareholders that it was their policy not to go into speculative enterprises. He did refer to assistance from the Government, and he expected this enterprise would receive the same aid as the C.P.R. and others had done.

Here followed a long heckling, and Sir Charles finally said he believed there is business awaiting a railway going into that country, and that preference would be given to Canadian ports.

"Is the Grand Trunk prepared to act without a bonus?" he was asked.

Sir Rivers Wilson—That is a point on which I must be excessively guarded.

Mr. Pringle—We must be excessively guarded, too.

Building the Line.

General Manager Hays said—"The Grand Trunk wants to give preference to Canadian ports, but the Canadian ports have no facilities. The Grand Trunk can, in sixty-eight hours, flood the terminals at Montreal and Quebec, and the Intercolonial cannot handle one-third of the Grand Trunk freight. The question is not, Will the Grand Trunk use your ports? but will your ports provide facilities for all we can deliver?"

In answer to other questions, Mr. Hays said the Grand Trunk would do for Canadian ocean terminals all it was doing for Maine, and they were ready to begin work at once as soon as surveys were completed at six or a dozen points. The road would be finished in not less than one year and not more than five.

THE BALKAN SITUATION.

Turkey Appears to Have a Free Hand—France Is Apprehensive.

London, May 8.—The British Government's attitude in the Balkan crisis may be summed up as being one of passive indifference. Although chiefly responsible for bringing Bulgaria into existence, Great Britain never undertook the preservation of Bulgaria's interests, but she is pledged to maintain the integrity of the Ottoman Empire. The British Foreign Office also understands that neither Russia nor Austria intend to interfere, unless some unseen issue becomes involved. Thus Turkey appears to have a clear hand.

As Paris Views It.

Paris, May 8. — The situation throughout the Balkans causes serious apprehension here, but the French Foreign Office says the conditions are not regarded as being critical and are considered to be largely the result of Turkish intrigues. Meantime it is the intention of the Government here to send a French naval division to Salonica as a measure of precaution, and in order to be prepared for a possible spread of the disorder.

Germany Supports Russia.

Berlin, May 8.—The German Government continues to steadily support the Russian policy at Constantinople. The German Foreign Office does not regard the Balkan situation as serious.

Detroit, Mich., May 8.—J. Pierpont Morgan was made a director of the M.C.R. yesterday.

BURNED IN A RAILWAY CAR

Twelve Men Lost Their Lives and Eight Fatally Hurt.

Tie Train, Running at a High Rate of Speed on Main Line of C.P.R. Near Dexter Station, Was Thrown Wholly Into the Ditch—Boarding Car Took Fire With Appalling Results—Injured Passenger's Story.

Winnipeg, Man., May 8.— Twelve men were killed and eight fatally hurt yesterday in one of the worst accidents in the history of the Western railroads of Canada.

The disaster occurred at 1 o'clock yesterday morning on the main line of the C.P.R., near Dexter Station, 52 miles east of Fort William. A tie train, running at a high rate of speed, was derailed and thrown wholly into the ditch. In the boarding car attached to the rear end of the train, and filled with employes, twelve men were burned to death, being unable to extricate themselves from the upturned caboose. Eight others were so seriously injured and burned that a number may die.

An Appalling Scene.

Advices of the terrible affair were rushed to Fort William, and all the available medical aid, with nurses and appliances for the relief of the injured, were despatched to the scene, arriving about 4 o'clock. The injured were given first aid, and then taken to Fort William Hospital. The scene was appalling in the extreme.

The cries of those confined in the burning car were plainly heard, but the fierceness of the flames made all attempts at rescue abortive. For a time it seemed that all the occupants of the car were doomed, when, by some accident, one of them fell through a window, and he was quickly followed by six or seven others. All of them were fearfully burned, and their recovery is doubtful. It is very difficult so far to get details. Those who accompanied the injured here can offer no cause for the wreck. They all agree, however, that the victim suffered very little, some of them being dead before the flames reached them.

Caused by Broken Wheel.

The wrecked train had been distributing ties along the track, and was coming back, when, about a mile out of Dexter Station, a boarding car, with 20 men on board, jumped the track. The cause is supposed to have been a broken wheel. A flat car telescoped the boarding car, which overturned and caught fire, the flames spreading so rapidly as to hamper any rescue. Not a sound of pain was heard.

Dr. Hamilton, the C.P.R. surgeon, went up immediately by special train, and two more doctors followed after, but, later, returned on the delayed express, without reaching the scene of the accident, there being no need of their services.

List of Killed.

Fred Fulk, G. D. Angluck, Ivan Hudena, Murg Kuruc, A. Watin, G. Sunmark, F. Bystrom, L. L. Larson, F. Hokman, A. Johnson, E. Rickson, A. Kundell.

Injured.—Joe Dupont, head hurt; E. Eliard, half scalp torn off, very weak from loss of blood; J. Gagne, back and side hurt; B. K. Udell, leg broken; E. Jakobson, badly scalded on face, arms and body; A. N. Olin, badly hurt back and spine; S. R. Walsh, hip dislocated.

All the above were employes of the tie gang.

Story of a Survivor.

James M. Reid, of Ashburn, Ont., traveling as a passenger, had an arm broken and shoulder dislocated. He said the car in which the men were was the sleeping car, and a flat car was between it and the caboose. When the accident occurred, there was a big fire in the stove in this car, and immediately after the clash, the entire inflammable contents, straw and bedding, burst into flames. He states that moans were heard from the men who perished. In a few minutes, but long enough for seven men to crawl out, there was hardly anything left of the car, and only a few charred bones remained as witness to its human freight.

The dining car, which was ahead, was thrown clear across the ditch on the opposite side of the track, three of its occupants being slightly injured, but not enough to be brought down to Fort William.

The West Lorne Collision.

St. Thomas, May 8.—The adjourned inquest into the West Lorne collision on the Lake Erie and Detroit River Railroad, which happened April 29, killing three men, was resumed yesterday at West Lorne. Five witnesses were examined, employes of the road. They were unanimous in the opinion that had the road been equipped with semaphore signals the collision would not have occurred. The inquest was again adjourned until to-day.

HON. DAVID MILLS IS DEAD

Suddenly as Result of Bursting Blood Vessel.

Justice of Supreme Court of Canada—Once Prominent Figure in Canadian Affairs—Distinguished as a Constitutional Parliamentarian—With Motives of Purest Order He Was Unwilling to See Evil in Others.

Ottawa, Ont., May 9.—Hon. David Mills, Justice of the Supreme Court, died at 10.30 o'clock last evening from the bursting of a blood vessel. Death was very sudden. He sat on the bench in the Supreme Court yesterday morning. Death resulted before medical aid could be summoned. Justice Mills moved to Ottawa a few months ago. The family survivors are the widow, sons, Walter Mills, barrister, of Ridgetown, and David, and one daughter.

Old School Parliamentarian.

Justice Mills was one of the old school of parliamentarians. He had an admiration, amounting to a passion, for the British Constitution, and his constitutional speeches were not of the dry-as-dust variety, but illuminated by history and philosophy. A certain similarity of taste and talent created a strong liking between him and the late Sir Oliver Mowat, and he was associated with Mr. Mowat in the Ontario boundary case about 20 years ago.

HON. DAVID MILLS.

He was one of the old guard that gave a strong individuality to Ontario Liberalism in the years when the party outlook seemed blackets. A man of spotless character, a well-known authority on constitutional law and withal a fine sympathetic public spirit, he was a formidable personality to bring into prominence before the people.

As a Speaker.

In Parliament Hon. David Mills was not a fluent or a magnetic speaker. He was prone to cling to a subject until he had exhausted it, but there was never any question as to the strength of his argument.

No public man in Canada had purer motives than Hon. David Mills. His weakness was his disinclination to look for improper motives in other men. He did not know the world. He saw nothing but the good side of everything.

An interesting personality was Hon. David Mills. In trouble as in happy mood he wore a pleasant smile. Of late years he had shown signs of advancing infirmity. His step lost its elasticity, his shoulders no longer showed the muscular set that marked his carriage in middle life.

Sketch of His Life.

The late Judge was a descendant of an old Puritan family, which went from Plymouth to Holland in Charles the First's time, thence to New England with the Puritans, and to Nova Scotia at the time of the American revolution. He was a son of Nathaniel Mills, who came from Nova Scotia to Ontario in 1817. Deceased was born in the Township of Oxford, Kent County, in March, 1831, and graduated at Michigan University. He was called to the Ontario Bar in 1883, made Q.C. in 1890, and raised to the Supreme Court Bench on Feb. 7, 1902. He held briefs for the Province of Ontario in many notable constitutional cases, beginning in 1872 with the defence of the northwestern boundary of the Province. In 1884 he was one of the counsel employed in the case before the Privy Council, and later represented the Province in the cases relating to Indian titles and Queen's counsel.

As a Parliamentarian Mr. Mills' career was equally distinguished. Entering the House of Commons at confederation as member for Bothwell, he sat continuously for that constituency until 1896, with the exception of one session after the general election of 1882. During the Mackenzie regime he held the portfolio of Minister of the Interior from 1876 to 1878. He was appointed Senator in 1896, and in November, 1897, succeeded Sir Oliver Mowat as Minister of Justice in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Cabinet, which post he held until his elevation to the Supreme Court Bench on Feb. 7, 1902.

Mr. Mills represented Canada at the colonial conference in London in 1901, when representatives were called together to consider the establishment of a new Court of Appeal for the Empire.

The author of several brochures on political subjects, Mr. Mills likewise wrote extensively on public questions for the magazines and newspapers, and he was for five years subsequent to 1882 editor-in-chief of The London Advertiser. Many beautiful poetical pieces also emanated from his pen.

In religion, Mr. Mills was a Methodist. He married in December, 1860, Miss M. J. Brown.

CONTROL OF A MONOPOLY.

Sir Wilfrid Answers Question About Eastern Extens on Telegraph Company.

Ottawa, May 9.—On the orders of the day being called Mr. R. L. Borden asked what liability Canada would incur from recent action of Australian Commonwealth in making concessions to Eastern Extension Telegraph Co.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said before Australia was federated New South Wales agreed to hand over all business in perpetuity to the Eastern Extension Company. The Canadian Government protested, and after the Commonwealth was established the agreement was replaced by a ten years' arrangement covering the whole of Australia. The Canadian Government considered this was a breach of the agreement under which the cable was laid, and had entered a protest with the Commonwealth, taking the ground that a ten years' agreement would firmly establish the monopoly of the Eastern Extension Company.

Marconi System a Success.

During the discussion of estimates for telegraph lines, Mr. Fielding made some explanations as to the Marconi system. He said Marconi had expected to have systems in working order by this time, but owing to temporary hitch it was not yet commercially successful, though its scientific success had been demonstrated. He expected to made it commercially successful at an early day. He was as hopeful as ever and the Government shared his hopefulness.

The House adjourned at 10.45 p. m.

WEST LORNE COLLISION.

The Jury's Verdict Is Culpable Neglect of Railroad Company.

St. Thomas, May 4.—The inquest into the L. E. & D. R. R. collision at West Lorne was concluded yesterday. The evidence of the crew of the colliding train and the despatcher at Ridgetown showed that the rules of the road were differently interpreted by the employes. The jury returned this verdict: "That Thomas Luton, John McNeil and John Edgar, on April 29, at West Lorne, came to their deaths as a result of a rear-end collision between two trains on the Lake Erie and Detroit River Railroad; that the said collision was caused by the culpable neglect of the said railroad company in not adopting a proper system as to the running of trains, and of not furnishing and supplying to their train men proper rules so intelligible to their employes that no misunderstanding could arise as to the duties of their train men; we recommend that semaphores be forthwith constructed on the said railroad at proper distances from the station."

EX-KING MWANGA DEAD.

Son of Celebrated King Mutesa Succumbs in Exile.

Port Victoria, Seychelles Islands, May 9.—Mwanga, the former King of Uganda, is dead. His death was caused by the rupture of an aneurism.

King Mwanga, a son of the celebrated King Mutesa, left Uganda secretly on July 6, 1897, to organize a rising at Buddu against the Government of the British protectorate, but the King's forces were defeated July 20 of the same year by the troops commanded by the British deputy commissioner, Major Ternan, and Mwanga escaped to German territory and surrendered to the Germans, who eventually turned him over to the British. The King was then exiled to the Seychelles Islands. Mwanga's infant son, Daudi Chua, afterwards was proclaimed King (or Kabaka) of Uganda, with a native council of regency.

Ogilvie Elevator Burned.

Winnipeg, May 9.—Minnedosa was visited by a serious conflagration yesterday afternoon. Fire broke out in a grain warehouse owned by Mr. John Wake, and spread to the large elevator of the Ogilvie Milling Company. Both buildings were burned together with about 30,000 bushels of wheat. A number of residences north of the track were also badly scorched. The total loss will be about $50,000.

RUSSIANS INVADE CHINA

Have 14,000 Troops Stationed Near Port Arthur.

Warlike Preparations Have Begun—May Indicate Operations Against Russians in Manchuria—How the Occupation Is Viewed in London—Japan Advises Immediate Opening of Manchuria—Turkey's Note to Bulgaria May Be Modified.

Pekin, May 9.—The Russians, it is announced, have re-occupied Newchwang with a large force, and also have put garrisons in the forts at the mouth of the Liao River. They are further reported to be making extensive warlike preparations.

Fourteen Thousand Troops.

The news of Russian activity, which comes from a most trustworthy source at Newchwang, adds that on their return to Newchwang the Russian troops brought with them several large guns. A large force has been ordered to re-occupy Tienchwangtai. The Russians have 14,000 troops between the mouth of the Liao River and Port Arthur.

Constructing Forts.

The Russians are reported to be constructing forts on the hills near Liaoyung, commanding the road between there and the Yalu River, and they have arranged a large quantity of provisions delivered at Newchwang. A despatch from an official at Newchwang says indications point strongly to these active preparations being intended to forefend operations against the Russians in Manchuria.

Never Evacuated Newchwang.

London, May 9.—The announcement from Pekin that the Russians have "re-occupied" Newchwang must not be understood as implying that they ever fully evacuated the place. The news is taken here to mean that the town has been re-occupied by the force the withdrawal of which was announced in April, when the Russians said that all the troops except the men necessary for the police guard had been removed.

The Russian proceedings at Newchwang are attributed here to China's refusal to comply with the demands which Russia recently submitted.

Japanese Advice to China.

Tokio, May 9.—In the name of Prince Koyone, President of the House of Peers, the Nationalists have telegraphed to Yuan Shih Kai, Viceroy of Pechili, and Chang Chih Tung, Viceroy of Nankin, advising the immediate opening of Manchuria and the granting of a concession for the Wiju-Newchwang Railroad to an Anglo-Japanese-American syndicate.

TURKEY'S DISPOSITION.

The Porte's Note Difficulty With Bulgaria May Be Settled.

London, May 9.—The Sofia correspondent of The Times says: The difficulties regarding the tenor and contents of the Turkish note are likely to be arranged to the satisfaction of both parties, the Sultan appearing disinclined to provoke a controversy.

Wholesale arrests of Bulgarians are reported in all parts of European Turkey, and all the Bulgarian schools in western Macedonia have been closed, and their teachers have been arrested.

French Ships For Salonica.

Toulon, May 9.—Following the receipt by Admiral Pottier of cipher orders, the French flagship Admiral Pothuau and the armored cruiser Latouche-Treville sailed for Salonica early yesterday.

Panic at Monastir.

Constantinople, May 9.—The attempt made Wednesday by a band of Bulgarians to blow up a powder magazine at Monastir caused a panic in that town. The attacking party, which was surprised by Turkish troops, ultimately fled, after a number of men had been killed or wounded.

Albanians Banished.

Berlin, May 9.—A despatch received from Constantinople announces that the Turkish troops have occupied Ipek, Albania, the headquarters of the Sultan's reform commission, which was the seat of hostile Albanians, without opposition. The twenty-two Albanian chiefs, leaders of the opposition to the reforms, who were recently arrested at Prisrend, Albania, have been banished to Mosul, Asiatic Turkey.

Fighting G.T.P. Subsidy.

Fredericton, N. B., May 9.—The Provincial Legislature agreed last night to petition the Dominion Government not to give the Grand Trunk Pacific Company a subsidy for their transcontinental lines, unless they agree to pass through New Brunswick to a Canadian seaport.

Nineteen Bodies Found.

Huntington, W.V., May 9.—Nineteen bodies have been recovered from Eggleston Tunnel. One person was taken out alive and may recover. Search for other bodies continues. There may be five or six more within the tunnel.

Emerson Coatsworth Dead.

Toronto, May 9.—Emerson Coatsworth, City Commissioner, aged 78 years, died here yesterday. He was appointed 30 years ago and was known to almost everybody. The funeral will be public.

11,000 RAILROAD MEN OUT

Australia's Railway Strike Ties Up the Whole Country.

Stopped Trains at the Midnight Hour—Colony of Victoria Gets Into a Tight Place—Curious Dispute Between Government and Its Railway Employes—Refuse to Permit Latter to Affiliate With Trades Union.

Melbourne, May 9.—The railroad strike commenced at midnight. Demonstrations previously occurred in front of the newspaper offices and troops were sent to patrol the streets. Otherwise the city is quiet. All the State railways are tied up.

The dispute between the Government and the railroad employes is regarding the right of the latter to affiliate with the Victoria Trades Hall, the headquarters of trades unionism in this colony. The employes of the railroads are practically civil servants, and the Government claims that in case of a strike in other trades affiliated with the Trades Hall the railroad men would be obliged to strike in sympathy and, therefore, the Government has notified the railroad men that unless they withdrew from the Trades Hall before May 12 they would be dismissed.

The Engineers Association replied that unless the Government withdrew its notification before 5 o'clock last evening they would strike at midnight and leave their locomotives wherever they happened to be. The Government had guaranteed double wages for two months to non-strikers, and notified the men that they will lose their pensions if they strike. About 11,000 railroad men are involved in the dispute.

FAILED TO SETTLE STRIKE.

Ministers at Montreal Found That Both Sides Were Obstinate.

Montreal, May 9.—Sir Wm. Mulock and Hon. Mr. Prefontaine have failed to bring about a settlement of the troubles between the striking longshoremen and the Montreal shippers. The Ministers have left no stone unturned to accomplish the object of their mission.

After consulting all day the shippers informed the Ministers that they would go so far as to give the preference of all vacancies to old men. This was probably meant for union men, but they absolutely refused to recognize anything like the International Union.

2,000 Addressed by Ministers.

Last evening the 2,000 strikers had a meeting to discuss the situation and the Minister of Marine, Postmaster-General and Mr. Bickerdike delivered speeches. The Ministers spoke from the point of view of the country, but they would offer no advice as to the men's acceptance or rejection. Mr. Bickerdike, M.P., went further and told the men to go to work. Vice-president O'Neill of the union spoke calmly, and asked the men to consider their own situation as well as that of their families, which they did by a unanimous refusal to accept the proposed terms. Consequently the strike is still on.

Concession of the Strikers.

Sir Wm. Mulock announced at 12.30 that he will return to Ottawa at once, leaving the strike unsettled. He says that the men ask that the independent labor bureau be abolished and not used to secure non-union laborers after the union will have returned to work. The shippers refuse and they also refuse to allow the men to wear union buttons. The men have at least dropped the claim for recognition of the union, but say they will make no further concessions.

Italian Striker Shot Dead.

Greenwich, Conn., May 9.—An Italian striker was shot to death by one of his fellow countrymen in a riot here yesterday. A contractor's gang was excavating for a residence when twenty Italian strikers induced all but one to quit. Angered by his refusal, the strikers set upon him with clubs and stones. The man was driven slowly backward until he reached a pile of lumber. There he made a stand and drew a revolver. The strikers continued to advance and he fired. One of the assailants was hit in the stomach and died shortly afterwards. The strikers scattered, but six were arrested, together with the man who did the shooting.

Nothing to Arbitrate.

Ottawa, May 9.—Sir William Mulock was waited upon some time ago by a delegation from the trackmen of the Canada Atlantic Railway, asking him to intervene in the strike now going on between themselves and the company. Sir William wrote the company offering the assistance of the Department of Labor. In reply the manager of the Canada Atlantic writes to the Minister that there is nothing to arbitrate.

Trades Disputes Bill Killed.

London, May 9.—The House of Commons yesterday by 426 to 226 votes rejected the Trades' Disputes Bill, intended to legalize peaceful picketing and alter the law affecting the liability of trades' unions' funds. Premier Balfour and other ministers opposed the bill and promised that a royal commission shall be appointed to inquire into the whole position of trades unionism, as affected by court decisions in the recent Taft Vale and similar cases.

MIXED TRAIN WRECKED.

Engine, Coach and Freight Cars in the Ditch Near Palmerston.

Palmerston, May 9.—A wreck occurred on the G. T. R., four miles north of here yesterday morning. The mixed train, which leaves Durham at 8 a.m., left the track. The engine, a passenger coach and three freight cars were derailed. One of the crew was injured, but not seriously. The auxiliary reached here yesterday afternoon to clear the wreck. The engine and passenger coach are badly damaged. Traffic was delayed on the line for several hours.

An Airship That Flies.

Paris, May 9.—An airship constructed for the Lebauly Bros. made a highly successful trip yesterday under pilot Juchmes and Engineer Rey. The start was made from St. Martin. The ship passed over a number of suburban towns. At Nantes it made a circle around the cathedral spire. After further evolutions it returned to the point of departure and descended without accident. The distance covered was 37 kilometers in one hour 36 minutes, against Santos Dumont's record for the Deutsch prize of 11½ kilometers in 30 minutes.

Farmers Will Lose $40,000.

Edrans, Man., May 9.—Surrounded by a wall of fire on three sides, the village of Edrans Thursday night presented a scene of appalling grandeur. The sky was livid with flames. For a mile the bush surrounding the town was a stretch of fire, lighting up the village almost as bright as a noonday sun. The loss to the farmers burned out will amount to $40,000. The fire is under control and the village is safe though the fire still burns in the bush.

Another Brakeman Killed.

Middletown, N. Y., May 9.—A freight wreck occurred on the Erie Railroad at White Bridge, five miles west. Brakeman Flynn of Port Jarvis was buried beneath the wreckage and killed.

MODERN WEDDING PRESENTS.

The month of roses is coming along fast, and before long there will be Wednesday weddings galore. The modern wedding, and the trials and troubles incident to it, is this week discussed in a racy way by a writer in the Insurance Press, who truly says that all the world loves a lover, until the lover makes up his mind to get married, then, when confronted by the wedding present problem, the world votes the lover and his affairs a bore of the most pronounced description. The wedding present business has become a nuisance. Time was when a pickle castor was the acme of good taste, sometimes varied by an ornamental cake basket with a pair of doves perched on the handle. However, as these cost more, the supremacy of the pickle-castor was never in danger.

To-day, all has changed. A wedding invitation is practically an admission ticket, costing twenty dollars, to the church service; reception at the house afterwards, extra; cards to the at-home, more extra. When a man gets an invitation nowadays, he feels as he does when he has been served with a subpoena. He sputters about the idiocy of marriage in general, and wonders why in thunder, or somewhere else where thunder is unknown, those little fools didn't just stand up and get married and get it over with. Then when he calms down he is inveigled into making an appointment with his wife at some jeweller's. There he is met with a bewildering array of silver trowels, meat saws, and minature pitchforks, which his learned wife explains to him are fish-knives, lettuce servers and berry forks respectively. Then, as his eyes wander about the store, he spies a golden ball, perforated with fancy holes, and he ventures the facetious remark to his wife that they might take time by the forelock and send that baby's rattle. Which is met by the chilling rejoinder that "that" is a tea-ball, and is just the very thing. And so the man hands over the necessary and his wife directs where the golden tea-ball shall be sent.

The feeling of a strong, healthy man being required to attach his card to a dinky tea-ball and send it to a young couple as a mark of his good wishes fall either of expression or description. He longs for the good old days of the pickle-castor, but those days, alas! have passed, and in their stead are the days of the tea-ball and the silvered meat saw.

Why not bring the principles of common sense to bear on the wedding present problem. Why not, instead of a golden tea ball, send a chest of tea, or a few tons of coal, or a paid-up life insurance policy, or a receipt for a years pew rent? This is a utilitarian age; why not show it in wedding presents as well as in everything else?

TARTE ATTACKS SIFTON.

During the debate in the House of Commons a few days ago, upon railway facilities to meet the growing trade of Manitoba and the Nor' West, the Hon. Mr. Tarte expressed himself in plain language in condemnation of his former colleague, the Hon. Mr. Sifton. He said:

> "This unholy agitation had been worked up by the Winnipeg newspaper organ of the Minister of the Interior. This unholy work was still going on. Public men in the Canadian Government were engaged in it. The people of Canada would know more of this in the future than in the past. Propositions were shortly to be made to Parliament. These propositions must be narrowly scrutinized. The people of Canada will receive enlightenment as to the motives of men behind them before long. Let the West trust its true friends in the east. They were willing to vote millions for the west for a legitimate purpose, but not for unpatriotic schemes."

Tarte evidently knows the peculiarities of the Minister of the Interior, hence he tells his fellow-members of the Commons that "propositions which will shortly be made to Parliament, must be narrowly scrutinized"; and adds the significant words, "The people of Canada will receive enlightment as to the motives of men behind them before long."

Tarte knows them. Will he enlighten us? Time will tell.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Pembroke Standard: There is a good joke on a young Fitzroy farmer, who lives near Kinburn. He turned out last Sunday morning to work in his fields as usual, unaware that he was desecrating the Sabbath. When apprised of the fact he at once ceased operations, but the laugh is on him.

Not much to laugh at, either, to think that a man in a Christian country did not know when Sunday came.

The Oswego Palladium, which, of course, neither knows nor cares about Belleville's new assessment, has an article, nevertheless, which may prove of interest to many people in this vicinity who know something about it and have reason to care more. The Pall. says:

"Some time ago Mark Twain bought a summer residence in Tarrytown for which he paid $45,000. Before he had spent a single dollar on his new purchase in the way of improvements, the time for the village assessors to make out their assessment rolls came around and they assessed the property at a valuation of $80,000. Mark should have been pleased to ascertain that their visit to his premises has increased his wealth just $35,000. But he wasn't. On the contrary, he regarded it as an attempt to swindle him, and fought the matter in the courts, where he succeeded in getting the assessment reduced to $50,000. Yet he can't figure out just why his property has so suddenly increased in value. Perhaps he never will. It is a way many assessors have. To obtain an increase in revenue, they will assess, excessively, newly purchased property by wealthy persons, upon the principle, probably, that they can afford to pay and will pay rather than enter into litigation. This is a mistake that will work injuriously sooner or later, to the places where the assessors follow such an unjust system. It is as bad for the village or town that pursues such a course as it is in other places where the owners of property place such high valuations upon desirable sites as to preclude their purchase by persons desirous of engaging in manufacturing. If Assessors in the latter case would assess the property by the valuation placed upon it by the owners, the matter would soon be remedied."

WHAT PEOPLE ARE SAYING.

That it is up to somebody to get busy with the old d.s.b.g.

That the guns on the park need a coat of paint.

That Front street is in a very rutty and bumpy condition.

That economy in the Post Office is not to be compared to good service.

That the smile on the Assessment Commissioner's dial is not reflected on the faces of many of his victims.

That the benches on Ald. Panter's park look lonesome.

That the aroma at the north end of Queen Victoria Park does not remind one of the perfumes of Araby the Blest.

That it will soon be time to get a move on if we're going to have a Dominion Day celebration.

That the parsons are looking forward to a good many weddings next month.

That everybody should go to church to-morrow. Pretty soon it will be too hot.

That many people are quietly talking about getting their next winter's coal in by the carload, on the co-operative plan.

That you can't blame them much, with the price at $7 in Belleville, while it is $6.50 in other places.

That bicycle riding seems to be coming into fashion again.

That a couple of the City Fathers should enter for the 25th of May road race.

That the Fifteenth deserves better treatment from the Government than it gets.

That the lower bridge, and its approaches, needs some repairs, and needs it badly.

FRANKFORD'S FIRST FAIR

WAS HELD IN 1838 AND SEEMS TO HAVE BEEN THE FIRST HELD IN ONTARIO.

The annual report of Ontario Fairs and Exhibitions, published by the Department of Agriculture, Toronto, contains an interesting article on "Early Markets and Fairs," which will prove interesting to people in this vicinity. Col. Ponton has the originals of the documents mentioned:

Just how closely our Agricultural Fairs of Exhibitions are related to the old fairs of the British Isles and of Europe is uncertain. Gatherings appear to have been held at first for religious worship, the meetings being at some sacred shrine or place of miraculous or holy associations. These great concourses of people needed to be fed—booths for supplying meat and drink were soon followed by stalls, or stands, for selling all sorts of goods. The introduction of amusement features came inevitably, and ere long the fair became a strange mixture of worship, trade and merry-making. Some laws were necessary in connection with these periodical gatherings, and hence the establishment of what were known as "Courts of Piepoudre." These Courts are well explained in the following extracts:

"Piepowder, or Piepoudre: An ancient court of record in England, once incident to every fair and market, of which the steward or owner or holder of the toll was the judge. It was instituted to administer justice for all commercial injuries done in that fair or market, but not in any preceding one." (Imp. Dict.)

"The lowest, and at the same time the most expeditious, court of justice known to the law of England is the court of piepoudre, curia pedis pulverizati, so called from the dusty feet of the suitors; or, according to Sir Edward Coke, because justice is there done as speedily as the dust can fall from the foot." (Blackstone).

It will thus be seen that the settling of certain disputes by the Directors of an Agricultural Exhibition had its counterpart in some degree in the old "Court of the Dusty Feet."

This old English fair was introduced into Upper Canada and received official sanction or authorization, and is well worth considering in connection with the history of our live stock industry.

Before giving the record of such an early fair, reference might be made to the establishment of markets in the early days of our oldest towns. The market was the first organization of town government.

On July 9th, 1801, the market of Kingston was established by Statute, as follows:

"On and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful for the Commissioners of the Peace in the Midland District, in their Court of Quarter Sessions assembled, and they are hereby authorized and empowered to fix upon and establish some convenient place in the Town of Kingston, where butcher's meat, butter, eggs, poultry, fish and vegetables shall be exposed to sale; and to appoint such days and hours for that purpose, and to make such other orders and regulations relative thereto as they shall deem expedient."

The Commissioners were also empowered to impose fines (not exceeding 20 shillings) for any offence committed against such rules and regulations.

Similar acts were passed providing for the establishment of markets in the following towns: York, 1814; Niagara, 1817; Cornwall, 1818; Perth, 1822.

The above statement gives us the simple beginning of town organization in Upper Canada, and is given herewith to show wherein the market differed from the fair.

I am enabled to give the Letters Patent authorizing the holding of a fair at Frankford in the Township of Sidney, in 1838, through the kindness of Mr. W. N. Ponton, of the Belleville Historical Society. In 1858 Sheriff Moodie was authorised to hold a similar fair or mart at Tweed, in the Township of Hungerford, Hastings County. The cattle fair was a well established institution in all parts of Ontario up to a few years ago, and doubtless official sanction was required in all counties or districts.

The Blue Laws

The Blue Laws of Connecticut were called so because they were printed on blue-tinged paper.

These are some of them:

"No one shall be a freeman or have a vote unless he is converted and a member of one of the Churches allowed in the Dominion.

"No dissenter from the essential worship of this Dominion shall be allowed to give a vote for electing magistrates or any other officer.

"No food or lodging shall be offered to a heretic.

"No one shall cross the river on the Sabbath but an authorized clergyman.

"No one shall travel, cook victuals, make beds, sweep houses, cut hair or shave on the Sabbath day.

"No one shall kiss his or her children on the Sabbath or fasting days.

"The Sabbath day shall begin at sunset on Saturday.

"Whoever wears clothes trimmed with gold, silver or bone lace above one shilling a yard, shall be presented by the grand juror, and the select man shall tax the estate £300.

"Whoever brings cards or dice in to the Dominion shall be fined £5.

"No one shall eat mince pies, dance, play cards, or play any instrument of music except the drum, trumpet or jewsharp.

"No man shall court a maid in person or by letter, without obtaining the consent of her parents; £5 penalty for the first offence, £10 for the second, and for the third, imprisonment during the pleasure of the court."

INFLAMED NOSE AND THROAT

And such diseases of the respiratory organs as bronchitis, weak lungs, cold in the head and nasal catarrh, are treated with marvellous success on strictly scientific principles by Catarrhozone. The medicated vapor of Catarrhozone quickly traverses every air passage possible to be reached by any treatment. All soreness, pain, congestion and inflammation are at once dispelled, and by means of the healing powers of Catarrhozone the vitiated tissues are quickly restored. Where Catarrhozone is used colds last only ten minutes, coughs half an hour, and catarrh, consumption, asthma and bronchitis flee as from fire. A trial will convince anyone of the startling merit of Catarrhozone. Costs $1.00, small size 25c. At druggists', or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

DAISY GORDON'S FOLLY

—OR—

THE WORLD LOST FOR LOVE'S SAKE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY,

Author of "The Crime of Hallow-E'en," "The Flirtations of a Beauty," "Willful Gaynell," "Little Leafy," "Only a Mechanic's Daughter," etc.

No word, no cry broke from Daisy's white lips—no image carved in marble could ever have been whiter; the words Hetty had uttered had struck far down into her heart like a dagger's thrust.

The wind wailing outside amidst the apple trees seemed to take it up with a wild shriek—ten years at Sing Sing! and the wind seemed to mutter something else too. How she trembled lest Hetty and Olive should hear.

She rose from the low footstool beside her father's chair where she had been crouching, and tried to fly from the room, but the floor and ceiling seemed to meet—the light seemed to suddenly die out from the golden sunshine, and the whole world to be shrouded in a pall of darkness.

"Papa!" she cried, in an awful voice.

In a flash Farmer Gordon had sprung to his feet and threw out his strong right arm just in time to catch the swaying figure.

"Oh, my God, girls!" he cried out in a loud voice of agony. "Little Daisy is dying!"

"No, no, papa," cried Olive, springing forward, "she has only swooned; the terrible scene Hetty described was too much for her delicate nerves."

CHAPTER VI.

All for Love of the Same Fair Face.

Both Olive and Hetty were greatly shocked at the terrible change that had come over little Daisy, the pet of the family.

They had left her a bright, joyous, mischievous, willful darling, flying into a rage at every one and everything that chanced to vex her.

Now she gave them the impression of being broken-hearted; she was so meek and humble she frightened them. The poor old farmer was distracted. A doctor was consulted, who recommended change of air and scene at once.

"If I have to sell my farm to take her away I will do it," muttered Farmer Gordon.

When the plan was proposed to Daisy, she threw her arms around her father's neck, sobbing as though her heart would break.

"Yes, these scenes are hateful to me, papa," she sobbed; "but it would be the same everywhere. I—I—wish I could die and end it all!"

At this critical juncture Farmer Gordon's only brother died, and quite an inheritance was left him; from a poor plain farmer, he suddenly found himself a rich man.

Olive and Hetty were wild over the prospect of the glorious future opened out to them; nothing mattered much to poor Daisy.

"We can enjoy life like other girls of our age now," declared Olive, triumphantly. "Papa must take us to Cape May, Long Branch, or Niagara Falls for a season. It will be splendid to have lovely dresses like the fashion magazines, wear fine jewels, and stop at a grand hotel. It will be the dream of my life realized."

No such enthusiasm was awakened in Daisy's breast.

"Let them go, papa," she would say; "I will stay at home with you."

Her lack of interest distressed her father.

"If the girls go to a fashionable watering-place, you shall go with them, pet," he declared.

"Shall I tell you what I wish, papa?" she asked, laying her curly head on his knee.

"Of course, Daisy," he declared. "You can tell me everything."

"I wish," said Daisy, in a low, faltering voice, "we could sell the farm and go away, all of us, very quietly—so far away that no one who ever knew of us could find us; then perhaps I might be happy."

Surely no young girl ever had such a strange wish; but then Daisy was not like other girls.

"It shall be done, Daisy," he declared, cheerily, thinking to humor her. "You must go to Cape May with the girls for a few weeks, and by that time I shall have disposed of the farm. We can settle our destination then."

It was wonderful what cheer that assurance brought to Daisy.

Once alone in her own room, she gave way to a wild paroxysm of tears, sobbing out:

"In ten years he will come for me just as sure as the sun shines and the stars give light, but he will not find me. No, no. If he should find me it would kill me!"

From the papers she learned how beautiful Lillian Ruthven was openly declared to be the noted criminal's bride, despite her protestations to the contrary; and guilty Daisy trembled in terror as she read. How was this terrible complication of affairs to end?

She never forgot the day she went with her sister Olive to Briarvale to bid Miss Ruthven good-bye.

How she shrank back as she looked at the lovely, pale, proud face, and felt the touch of that slender, jeweled hand.

"I hope you will not believe, Olive, that I am that man's wife, despite the network of circumstances which would make me seem so," said the heiress, weeping. "Oh, Olive! it has blighted my whole life most cruelly. I cannot understand why heaven is punishing me in this unmerited way.

"Is your sister ill?" she added, turning to Olive; "she is as pale as a snowdrop. I will ring for a glass of water."

Her words were affecting poor Daisy beyond endurance.

Should she fall at her feet and cry out that her life should not be blasted, that her own life instead should bear the brunt of the folly of that mad, reckless marriage?

But in the very instant of its conception, the good impulse died out of Daisy's heart. No, no! Matters might go as they were until she could think herself out of the tangled web that had closed in around her.

Faint and dizzy with such a sin on her conscience as to see an innocent girl suffer for what she herself had done, Daisy turned away.

"How foolish of Lillian Ruthven to still persist in denying that marriage," laughed Olive, as the two girls rode home. "Now that the young husband has turned out so bad, no wonder she regrets it. Still, such a piece of audacity in boldly denying it is really outrageous. When the fellow gets out of Sing Sing, he will claim her at once. She ought to know that."

"It will be ten long years before—before he gets out," murmured Daisy, "she—she might die before that time."

"It will be less than eight," declared Olive; "they always take off some for good behavior."

"Would the law compel her to live with him?" asked Daisy, piteously, "even though she hated him, Olive—hated him so utterly that death would be preferable to her to going with him?"

"She ought to have thought of all that before she married him," replied Olive, shrugging her shoulders. "Of course she will have to go with him."

Olive heard a little, sharp cry, and turning quickly about she saw Daisy lying back on the seat, white as marble.

"What is the matter with you since recently, Daisy?" cried Olive, in amazement. "There's something the matter with you of late; you're swooning all the time."

"It was a pain at my heart, Olive—a sudden, awful pain. I thought it would break in my bosom," moaned Daisy, with a terrible shudder, her teeth chattering and her little hands clutched tightly over her heart.

"If there's any one who seems to need change of scene it's you," frowned Olive. "Why, you act like a person going into quick consumption."

No person ever had more cause, thought Daisy, bitterly.

It was decided that the girls must have a chaperon, and Mrs. Burnett, Mr. Gordon's married sister, was written to and invited to accompany the girls to Cape May; she was only too delighted to accept the invitation.

When Mrs. Burnett reached the farmhouse, she was shocked at the great change in little Daisy, her favorite. Calling her brother aside, she anxiously inquired into the cause of it.

"Why, there's nothing the matter with little Daisy," laughed the farmer, good-naturedly—"nothing in the world."

"She looks to me like one who is nursing a secret grievance," declared his sister, solemnly. "Has she ever had a lover, John?"

The idea seemed so preposterous to Farmer Gordon that he laughed aloud.

"A lover—of course not—the idea of any one speaking of love or lovers in connection with a child of sixteen," he replied.

"But you married her mother when she was only sixteen," persisted his sister. "Daisy is just that age when young girls are apt to be a little romantically inclined—are you sure she cares for no one?"

"As sure as I am of my life!" declared Farmer Gordon. "Why, the child has never been five miles away from the farm in her life—she has seen no one."

"She is greatly changed," commented Mrs. Burnett.

The season was at its height when Mrs. Burnett and her three charges reached Cape May, and, crowded though it was with beauty and fashion, the arrival of three such pretty young girls created quite a flutter of excitement.

"The tallest and darkest one is a beauty," declared a young gentleman to himself who was searching the hotel register, just as soon as they had written their names, to see who they were and where they were from; "and the second one is almost as pretty—but, by Jove! the youngest one, with the big blue eyes—cheeks like dimpled roseleaves, and hair like spun gold, is the most beautiful little creature that I ever beheld, I will try to win her if I can. I have always laughed at the idea of love at first sight; but now I shall believe in it, it is no delusion."

Harry Joscelyn, the son of a millionaire banker, of Boston, paced the porch expectantly all the afternoon, to catch another glimpse of his affinity, as he called Daisy; but much to his disappointment she did not put in an appearance, though her two sisters had come out on the beach.

Nor did he see her at the six o'clock dinner.

"Now that's exceedingly strange," he muttered, impatiently. "I wonder what has become of the pretty little mystery. Why, there is my old college chum, Aleck Hamilton; I wonder what brings him to Cape May after declaring so vehemently that he could not come here with me. By George! he is stopping and shaking hands with the two beauties. He must be well acquainted, judging from his beaming face; and of course he must know the youngest one too; I'll get him to introduce me."

He little dreamed how his path and Aleck Hamilton's were to cross in the near future—and the bitter feud that would rise between them, and all for love of the same fair face.

CHAPTER VII.

"Tell me you love me, and will be my Bride."

The letter Farmer Gordon had written to Alexander Hamilton—telling him of his change of fortune, and that he intended sending the girls to Cape May,—alarmed the latter at once. He had come on without delay.

Olive and Hetty were delighted to see him, and they both noticed with wonder how anxiously he inquired after Daisy almost before the greetings were over.

"I thought you were to be away a year, and that we should not see you for that length of time, Aleck!" said Hetty, with an arch smile.

"It is a great loss to my business that I am here," he replied ruefully; "but I—I—could not stay away when I heard you were all here."

Both girls blushed violently, but, before either could reply, he asked hurriedly:

"Where is Daisy?"

"Moping in her room at the hotel, I suppose," laughed Olive. "Ah, here she comes now!" she added, espying the slender figure of Daisy, in white tulle and blue ribbons, hurrying over the sand toward them.

Aleck turned quickly, his heart in his eyes, as he watched Daisy.

Daisy stopped short as she saw the tall figure of a man standing beside her sisters.

"Oh, it's you, is it, Mr. Aleck?" she cried, in apparent relief; "I thought it was a stranger."

Aleck's heart gave a great throb as he held the little fluttering white hand in his.

"Are you pleased to see me, Daisy?" he asked eagerly.

"Yes," she answered, and he started back at the strangeness of her voice; and, looking anxiously into her face, he could see by the bright, white light of the moon how pale and wan it was.

Could it be that she had cared for him—that she had missed him, and was grieving over his absence?

It was sad to see how he caught and clung to the wild hope—he loved little Daisy so madly.

It was a torture to both Olive and Hetty Gordon to see Daisy monopolize handsome Aleck's society, during the hour that followed on the beach.

For the first time both the girls noticed how "taken up," to use their own phrase, he was with Daisy; he had no eyes for any one else.

That night the three sister had a violent quarrel in their room.

Both girls insisted that Daisy should be sent home, declaring she should not remain to spoil the chance of either one or the other winning Aleck Hamilton, for he had signified his intention of remaining at least a fortnight.

"If that is all, I will agree to avoid Aleck," said Daisy, wiping the tears from her lovely blue eyes; "either one of you can have him for all I care."

That was how it happened that she avoided Aleck so persistently, and caused him to be most recklessly desperate in his attempts to see her, and have a good talk with her.

He made a confidante of Mrs. Burnett at last, begging her to give him just one opportunity of seeing Daisy, when her body guards, as he designated Olive and Hetty, were not about.

Mrs. Burnett sympathized deeply with the handsome, impetuous young lover; she would have been delighted to have seen Daisy and Aleck marry, if her favorite niece had been older by a year or so; still, as it was, she was not inclined to throw a straw in the way of his wooing.

Matters might have gone on forever in this way had not a thrilling event transpired which changed the currents of two lives.

It happened that Mrs. Burnett and Daisy were walking on the beach one afternoon, when Aleck joined them, and at that very instant a small boy sporting in the waves a few feet from them gave a sharp, quick cry.

In an instant they comprehended what had happened; the lad had lost his hold of the life-rope, and the under-current had carried him out as it receded.

The lad's cry had reached the ears of a lady on the adjacent hotel veranda.

With a cry that those who heard it never forgot, she sprung down the beach, crying:

"Oh, for the love of heaven save him! He is my only son—my only child!"

She was frantic with agony and terror, and those about could hardly restrain her from flinging herself into the mad waters that ingulfed her boy.

A hand, strong and gentle, drew her back; it was Aleck, his noble face all aglow.

"Courage!" he cried. "I will save the boy or perish with him."

In a flash he had torn off his coat and was breasting the mad waves, shouting lustily to the drowning lad.

It seemed to Daisy, who watched with bated breath, an age until he reached the boy.

A hoarse cry rose from the throats of the spectators on shore.

"They are both going—— Look! young Hamilton has sunk. See, there is a violent summer storm coming up. Ah, how heavy the sea is! God help the noble fellow who has periled his life, but I fear it is all useless."

These and many such were the comments Daisy heard all about her.

Then, standing there—watching in agony too pitifully agonizing for words, while he made that violent death struggle—the terrible truth rushed across her mind—she loved Aleck, the girlish heart that had been slumbering awakened now to full consciousness. Yes, she knew the truth now, she loved him, life

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucous which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

TIMELY TOPICS

It really does not look as though the members of the Board of Education want a Collegiate Institute in this city.

* * *

By his action in the Legislature on Wednesday, re the bush fires in North Hastings, it is evident that Mr. J. W. Pearce, M.P.P., is going to keep a keen eye open for the interests of the County. Mr. Pearce's idea in urging the Government to investigate the matter was that, if the cases were as bad as reported, want and suffering might ensue. In that event he thought it would be the duty of the Government to help alleviate it. A very sensible view.

* * *

The remarks made last night by a certain member of the Board of Education, re redcoats coming out of hotels, might very well have been let unsaid. It could have been taken as a reflection on the local regiment, and had absolutely no bearing on the subject under discussion, namely, the proposition to form a cadet corps in connection with the High School. It is doubtful if, from one end of Canada to the other, a body of citizen soldiery can be found which conducts itself better and gives less trouble to the authorities than our own Fifteenth. We do not think that the member of the Board referred to meant to coolly insinuate that association with the local regiment leads boys into temptation, he is too sensible a man for that, but it is a pity he did not weigh his words a little better. The military authorities are not responsible for the actions of citizen soldiery after a parade has been dismissed, and the boys have left for home. The fact of a man or boy having a red coat on will not drive him to drink, neither will it keep him sober, if his tastes run towards absorption of the forbidden fruit. This much can be said, however, and it can be said as the result of personal observation during three years' connection with the Fifteenth: The idea, if such a one prevails, that the youth of this city contract bad habits or get mixed up with questionable associations by connecting themselves with the local regiment is altogether erroneous; the influence of both officers and non-commissioned officers, so far as the writer has seen, has been to deprecate anything and everything pertaining to rowdyism, drunkenness, or, in fact, anything unbecoming to a soldier of the King and a gentleman.

* * *

As to the proposed cadet corps, there is no doubt at all that, if not too expensive, it would be an excellent thing for the boys of the High School, tending as it would to inculcate a spirit of manliness, self-reliance and discipline, three good Anglo-Saxon qualities latent in every Canadian boy, which cannot be cultivated too strongly. By all means give the boys a chance to learn their facings. The millenium is not in sight yet, and there may be future Paardebergs and Hart's Rivers not far off.

Ottawa Citizen: "Belleville is a lake port just across from Oswego, but hard coal is selling there at $7 a ton thus early in the season, while it is selling in Toronto at $6.50 and in Ottawa at $6.75—the latter price of course being due to independent competition."

That's what we need in this beautiful city—a little independent competition.

The Kingston Times is trying hard to get a public bath built in that city. It says:

"The season of the year is once more at hand when the question of public bathing places is timely. At present there is no place within the city limits other than private houses, where a bath can be had in comfort and with regard to decency. And to fully one-half our population there are no bathing arrangements in their homes. The result is that personal cleanliness is neglected and the public health placed in jeopardy."

The same argument exactly applies to Belleville. In other places public baths have proven a boon and a blessing, so they would here. Parents, clergymen, everybody would like to see one built. When will we find some Alderman public-spirited enough to move in the matter?

Kingston Whig: "Kingston will soon possess Belleville in its entirety. The flow of population Kingstonward continues. In the course of a few days a local plumber will wed a fair Belleville maiden, to rescue her from the ennui from which she so long suffered."

It's a cold day when a woman's wit fails her. The New York Herald says: "After having tried in vain to rent a house in Bayonne, and being refused because she has nine children, a woman yesterday fooled a real estate dealer and procured a year's lease of the house she wished. She sent her children for a walk in a cemetery with a relative, and when she was asked by the agent how many children she had she replied, "I have had nine children, but they are all in the cemetery." That's too bad," replied the agent. "You can have the house." To-morrow the nine children will move, with their parents, into their new home."

SPORTING COMMENT.

George Sullivan, the big Kingston pitcher, well known here, was not allowed to put on a sub at the penitentiary while he went playing ball in the Eastern League. The result was that "Sully" has not yet made up his mind to go. The News says: "George Sullivan has not yet taken his departure. He is trying to arrange his holidays so that he can join the league team for a few weeks to see what condition his arm is in. If he does not feel fit to make good he will return home. In the meantime George still does his sentry-go at the prison."

Keeler, of the New York Americans, only gets $70 a day during the baseball season. He must have a difficult task to keep the wolf from the door. He averages almost $1 a minute for actual playing time. And there are many more baseball players in the States whose salaries are as high or higher than Keeler's. No wonder, college graduates, like Matthewson, drift into baseball.

THE WHEEL.

"Majah" Taylor in Australia.

Judging from the following, "Majah" Taylor gave the Australians their money's worth of excitement in the cycling tournaments. An Australian paper says:

Fine as was Taylor's riding in the match, it was second-class when compared with what followed in Taylor's heat of the mile scratch race. In this event there were Pye, Walne, Chalmers and A. A. Middleton, besides the Yankee. Middleton paced for about three and a half laps, when Chalmers went to the front, with Taylor lying fourth. At the bell Taylor rushed through on the inside for Chalmers' wheel; at the same moment Pye dashed up on the outside and got his front wheel overlapping Chalmers' driving wheel, Taylor thus being hemmed in. The pace was now a cracker, and the thousands present yelled with excitement as they saw Taylor's predicament. Half a lap from home a roar went up as Robby Walne came with one of his old-time rushes on the outside. In an instant he was a couple of lengths ahead of Chalmers and Pye—Taylor still in a "pocket." "Taylor's beat! Taylor's done!" the crowd roared. One hundred and twenty yards from home a change came o'er the scene. Taylor eased up, let Pye go on, and in an instant had "jumped" his machine on the outside of Pye. It now looked a hundred to one against his chances of overhauling the leader, but Taylor in ten yards had his machine moving as Victorians have never seen a bicycle travelling before. The Yankee fairly flew; he passed Chalmers and Pye in a flash, and then sat down to give Walne a two lengths' lead in thirty yards. It looked impossible, but the darkie made it possible by one of the most marvellous sprints yet seen in Australia, for he came like a meteor and beat Walne over the line by fifteen inches. Such a finish fairly staggered everyone present, and it will be many long years before the American's phenomenal ride is forgotten.

The Monk's Knowledge of Women.

An interesting story comes from the French Alps of Dauphiny relating the futile efforts of the Princess of Croy, who desired to enter the monastery of the Grande Chartreuse, a habitation from which women visitors are rigidly excluded.

The story runs that the Princess dressed herself in boy's clothes and accompanied her husband to the institution. The gates were opened to them, and the Prince sent his card to the father superior, with a line to the effect that he was accompanied by a friend.

Just as they were about to make the round of the building the word was received that the father would like to see the Prince and "his friend." Going upstairs they were received by the smiling monk, who cordially invited them to join him in an appetizing luncheon. The Princess endeavored to make the best of the situation, but she was not put any the more at her ease by the fact that the monk kept gazing sharply at her.

At last he exclaimed suddenly: "Catch it, young man!" at the same time throwing at her a large pear. The Princess was startled, and, thrown completely off her guard, made a motion to grab up her skirt, the absence of which she overlooked in her confusion.

Then the father stopped smiling and said with great gravity:

"I beg your pardon, madam, but ladies are not allowed in the monastery. I must ask you to wait outside until the Prince has finished his inspection."

And outside she had to go, the reverend father bowing her from the room with most elaborate politeness.

Pleasantly Entertained

A very pleasant and enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mr. N. DeMill, Grier street, Friday, May 8, by a large company of invited guests. A sumptuous repast was provided by the hostess, and all did ample justice to the good things so bountifully provided, Miss Moran, their daughter, and Miss Stella Burges, of Albert College, doing their part well in serving, after which all returned to the parlor to engage in social conversation, with music and speeches. It was a very pleasant time to all. Mr. and Mrs. DeMill are good entertainers.

Canada Will Not Yield Her Rights.

London, May 9.—At the Canada Club dinner Thursday night Hon. Clifford Sifton complained of the tendency of British papers to boom South Africa and to disregard other colonies. Results That Astonished Relatives and Friends

Miss Barbara M. Stanfold, a Victim of Anaemia, Imperfect Circulation and Debility is Cured by

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND.

In the month of May it is an absolute necessity that the body should be furnished with a richer and purer supply of blood for the establishment of health that can successfully cope with the enervating effects of hot summer weather. Poor blood in May produces listless, ambitionless, sleepless and sallow-faced men and women, who quickly becomes victims of some organic disease that ends life.

Intelligent people recognize the necessity of cleansing and fortifying the system in May by using Paine's Celery Compound, which speedily removes all poisons from the system, gives to the thin, watery blood a larger proportion of red corpuscles, and arouses all the organs of the body to healthy action. Paine's Celery Compound does a work for victims of impure, watery and stagnant blood that commands the attention of the most eminent medical men in the world. Miss Barbara M. Stanfold, Hamilton, Ont., says.

"For over a year my health was in bad condition, and I became very weak and much depressed in spirits. My trouble arose from poor and watery blood and imperfect circulation. My appetite was almost gone, and I was afflicted with insomnia. After several doctors had done all they could for me, I was weaker than when they first began to treat me, and my family became anxious about my condition. A neighbor advised my mother to have me use Paine's Celery Compound. Before I finished the second bottle, my appetite was better, I felt stronger, and could sleep soundly five or six hours each night. I had so much faith in the wonderful compound that I continued with it until I was perfectly cured. To-day, after using six bottles, I am as well and strong as ever before. I thank you with all my heart for such a medicine; it saved my life when other medicines failed. All my friends are astonished at my happy cure."

Why Impure Blood In the Spring?

THE NECESSITY OF LOOKING TO THE HEALTH OF THE LIVER AND KIDNEYS—THE NATURAL FILTERS OF THE BLOOD.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

If the liver and kidneys were always kept in perfect health and activity, ready at all times to thoroughly filter the impurities from the blood, there would be no necessity of making special effort to purify the blood.

During the summer season, when the diet is composed largely of natural foods, such as fresh fruit and vegetables, there is little trouble from impure blood, because the filtering organs are kept healthy and active. It is the artificial life of winter that brings on constipation of the bowels, clogging of the kidneys and a congested condition of the liver.

For this reason spring finds the blood loaded with impurities, and it becomes absolutely necessary to use some means of making the filtering organ active in order that the blood may be purified and the poisons driven from the system.

Nature has only provided one way of purifying the blood, and that is through the liver and kidneys. Because Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills act promptly, directly and thoroughly on these filtering organs, making them healthy and vigorous in action, they are unsurpassed as a medicine for purifying the blood.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have come to be considered a necessity in thousands of Canadian homes. As a cure for kidney disease, liver complaint, constipation, biliousness and impurities of the blood there is no treatment so eminently satisfactory as this great prescription of Dr. A. W. Chase. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

DEATHS

FINNEGAN—In Belleville, Thursday, May 7, 1903, John Finnegan, aged 96 years.

The funeral will take place on Sunday, May 10, at 3 p.m., from his late residence, Mill street, to St. Michael's Church, thence to the cemetery.

Month after Month a cold sticks, and seems to tear holes in your throat. Are you aware that even a stubborn and long-neglected cold is cured with Allen's Lung Balsam? Cough and worry no longer.

The Lament of the Adult.

In one of Dickens's novels—those novels which we are tearfully assured nowadays are not in the least funny—an ungrateful brickmaker rejects the little volume which has been brought him, because "it's a book fit for a babby, and I'm not a babby. If you was to leave me a doll, I shouldn't nuss it."

Something of this unchastened spirit stirs within our middle-aged hearts when we read a modern story, or see a modern play. It is probably the nicest kind of a story, and the nicest kind of a play, and if we were only fourteen instead of forty, or fifteen instead of fifty, we should thoroughly enjoy them both. Nothing is better calculated to make us regret our lost youth than fiction and the drama as they exist today. With what glorious emotions we should have dilated in childhood over Mr. Crockett's desperate brigands, or Miss Johnston's dauntless heroes. How we should have steeped ourselves—figuratively speaking—in gore, and revelled in romance. Sicilian outlaws, noble Indians, cruel half-breeds, courtly villains and heroines of wild, unearthly beauty—time was when these things made our pulses jump. But now seventeen murders excite us less than one, and duels are no longer the thrilling episodes they were in the happy past. It is hard to grow old, and it is made harder by the fact that nobody, save one's family doctor, has anything to offer to age. We should still like, even at forty or fifty, to be amused, but nobody caters to our amusement. When a veteran actor like Mr. Drew—who ought to sympathize with adults—entertains us with a drama that calls to mind the school plays of happy infancy, and the last act of which must certainly have been written by Miss Edgeworth, we feel that we are indeed friendless in the evening of our lives.

It is cold comfort to be told that the drama is intended for the debutante, and the novel for her younger brothers and sisters. It is even less agreeable to hear it hinted that if we do not like these pure and wholesome performances, it is because we want something evil. Does nothing, then, interest the adult save sin? Are bankers and brewers, anxious mothers and hard-working spinsters indifferent to all but vice? Must we either frolic like lambs—being lambs no longer—or devote ourselves seriously to the meretricious? Life has issues, not wholly unimportant, yet disconnected with love-making of any kind. Men—middle-aged men—desire many things besides their neighbors' wives. Women—middle-aged women—are sometimes strangely indifferent to their neighbors' husbands. We may be pure of heart, yet unable to take pleasure in "The Old Homestead" or "Ben Hur." We may be virtuous and intelligent adults. Will no one write novels and plays for us?—Agnes Repplier in "Life."

Turning Smoke Into Gold.

Queen Elizabeth of England was not a thoroughgoing spinster, for she had so little prejudice against the practice of smoking that she permitted Sir Walter Raleigh his pipe in the royal presence. She was sufficiently a woman, however, to twit him openly on his devotion to the weed, and it was on one of these occasions—or so the author of "The Soverane Herbe" shrewdly surmises—that the knight replied:

"I can assure Your Majesty that I have so well experienced the nature of it that I can tell even the weight of the smoke in any quantity I consume."

"I doubt it much, Sir Walter," replied Elizabeth, holding it was impossible to weigh smoke, and mayhap scenting a joke, "and I will wager you twenty gold angels that you do not solve my doubt."

Gallantly accepting the wager, Raleigh filled his pipe with a weighed quantity of tobacco, smoked it out, and then, weighing the resultant ashes, announced the weight he had smoked away.

"Your Majesty cannot deny that the difference has disappeared in smoke."

"Truly, I cannot," answered the Queen. Ordering the wager to be paid, she turned to the courtiers around her and said: "Many alchemists have I heard of who turned gold into smoke, but Raleigh is the first who has turned smoke into gold."

Musical M.D.'s of the Future.

A patient having been cured of smallpox by the witching strains of a violin, a contemporary thinks it not at all unlikely that it may ere long be discovered that music has a therapeutic value heretofore undreamed of. Music may in time become a most important branch of medical science, and the doctor of the future may, after diagnosing his case, take a violin or a cornet from his bag, as the case may demand, and render the wedding march from "Lohengrin," or Schubert's "Serenade," according to the progress the malady has made. Different tunes rendered on different instruments, in various tempos, may become necessary at critical moments, and this will naturally develop a new science—that of writing musical prescriptions. Musical boxes and orchestrions may yet be used in hospital-wards, and the shops in which sheet music and musical instruments are now dispensed are likely to be the drug stores of the future. Patent music is a possible successor of patent medicine, and we may yet take a five-minute dose of "Lanigan's Ball" adagio, or a seven-minute-and-a-half dose of Mendelssohn's "Songs Without Words" andante, for our neuritis or necrosis. Medical music and medical science will be one, and the scalpel will be supplanted by the mandolin, and the clinical thermometer by the piccolo.

Little Mothers in Japan.

Although the Empire of Japan is said to be a "paradise of children," where they are allowed to do very much as they please, and where they seldom, if ever, cry, their life is not all play. The little boys and girls have their work to do, but in many skilful ways they turn work into play. Take, for instance, the little girls who have baby sisters or brothers to care for. They tuck the youngsters into their queer garments and go on with their games of ball. If the baby grows tired and begins to fret the "little mother" jounces it up and down over her shoulder with a peculiar humping motion of her back, without stopping the game. All the time she sings some pretty song.

Observations of John Henry.

"DOWN the Line With John Henry" is the title of an amusing little booklet of sketches in up-to-date slang by the pseudonymous writer, Hugh McHugh, who is disputing with George Ade the right to the particular niche left vacant by the death of the entertaining "Billy Baxter." John Henry is a sporty man-about-town, the very antithesis of Richard Harding Davis's refined Van Bibber. From his account of his experiences at the races with his best girl, we quote a few characteristic extracts:

When we got to the track they were bunching the bones for the first race, so I told Clara Jane I thought I'd crawl down to the ring and plaster two or three thousand around among the needy.

Two or three thousand, and me with nothing but a five-spot in my jeans, and the return ticket money in that!

"Sure!" I said; "I've got a pipe!"

"Well, I hope you won't smoke it near me. I hate pipes!" she said.

"All right; I'll take my pipe down to the betting ring and smoke it there!" I said, and we parted good friends.

(In front of the band stand he met a number of friends ready to give him tips on the winners:

Every Breezy Boy I met had a different hunch, and they called me into the wharf and unloaded.

I figured it out that if I had bet five dollars on each good thing they gave me I would have lost four hundred thousand dollars.

Then I ducked under, sopped up a stein of root beer, and climbed up again to the hurricane deck.

"Did you bet?" enquired Clara Jane.

"Only seven hundred and thirty dollars," I said; "a mere bag o' shells."

I leave a call for 7.30 every morning, and I suppose that's the reason I was so swift with the figures.

"My! what a lot of money!" said the Fair One; "do point out the horse you bet on! I shall be awfully interested in this race!"

(John Henry picked out a horse at random, declaring that the only way it could lose "was for some sore-head to get out and turn the track around.")

Sure enough, the favorite galloped into port and dropped anchor six hours ahead of the other clams.

I win over two thousand two hundred dollars—conversation money—and Bonnie Brighteyes was in a frenzy of delight. . . .

I had a nervous chill for fear she'd declare herself in on the rake-off.

But she didn't, so I excused myself and backed down the ladder to cash in.

(Still the wary John Henry listened to the tips and refrained from betting.)

When I got back to the stand I had a preoccupied air. The five-spot in my jeans was crawling around and begging for a change of scene.

When Clara Jane asked me how much I had bet on the race just about to start, I could only think of nine hundred dollars.

When she wanted to know which horse I pointed my finger at every toad on the track, and said: "That one, over there!"

It won.

At the end of the third race I was $19,218 to the good.

Clara Jane had it down in black and white on the back of an envelope, in figures that couldn't lie.

(John Henry remarked that when Clara begged him to be content with his winnings and not bet any more, he promised, "but she didn't notice that I had my fingers crossed.")

I simply had to have a roll to flash on the way home, so I took my lonely V and went out into the Promised Land after the nuggets Maddy had put me wise to. . . .

(Pretty Boy was his choice, despite the fact that the bookmakers told him he had made a mistake.)

When the horses got away with Pretty Boy in front I started in to stand on my head, but changed my mind and swallowed half the programme.

Pretty Boy at the quarter! Me for Rector's till they put the shutters up!

Pretty Boy at the half! Me down to Tiffany's in the morning dragging tiaras away in a dray!

Pretty Boy at the three-quarter pole! Me doing the free-library gag all over the place!

But just as they came in the stretch Pretty Boy forgot something and went back after it.

The roach quit me cold at the very door of the safety deposit vaults.

(Of course Clara Jane never guessed his plight, for he "rushed down among the ramblers and made a swift touch for the price of a couple of rides home," and on the way back promised Clara Jane that he would be awfully careful of his $19,218—conversation money.)

School Humor.

AN English paper gives some further examples of children's unconscious humor in answering examination questions:

Alexander the Great was born in absence of his parents.

The chief clause in Magna Charta was that no free man should be put to death or imprisoned without his own consent.

Where were the kings of England crowned? On their heads.

What were the three most important Feudal dues? Friendship, courtship, marriage.

What do you know of Dryden and Buckingham? Dryden and Buckingham were at first friends, but soon became contemporaries.

What is Milton's chief work? Milton wrote a sensible poem called the "Canterbury Tails."

Give the names of five Shakespearian plays? Macbeth, Mikado, Quo Vadis, San Toy, Sign of the Crors.

An optimist is a man who looks after your eyes, and a pessimist is a man who looks after your feet.

A man who looks on the bright side of things is called an optionist, and the one who looks on the dull side is called a pianist.

Good News!

Stage Manager—Mr. Heavy, you will take the part of Alonzo. Mr. Heavy—I have never seen this play. Do you think I can please the audience in that part? "Immensely. You die in the first act."—"Tit-Bits."

SUITS FOR MEN

The Entirely Different Sorts.

Not satisfied with equaling in style, fit and excellence of workmanship the made-to-measure garments the best tailors produce, our makers are now fashioning their suits from the same fabrics which have heretofore been exclusive with the Custom Tailors.

Our showing of these suits is very extensive.

They are suits that the average man wants—they give him the style and exclusiveness he seeks without the extra cost of the tailors.

Even the most expert criticism will fail to discover that these suits were not custom made.

The broad showing we make including as it does every size for men of different propostions practically assurs a perfect fit for every man.

But in some cases an exact fit cannot be secured immediately and then we do as the tailors would do at a try on—make the necessary alterations that would secure perfection of fit.

Fancy mixed cashmeres—neat effects in Cheviots—three and four button sack styles including the new straight front.

$6.50 to $15.00

And by the way you can better judge the unassailable quality of these suits if you'll do a little comparing.

Feeding and Watering the Horse

(Nor'-West Farmer.)

Success in keeping and breeding horses is only insured by a thorough knowledge of the animal, its needs and habits and judicious feeding. Regularity and common sense must be used in the amount and kind of food given. Always water before feeding; then feed the hay and bulky food, leaving the grain and concentrated food until last. It is best to water half an hour before or not until one hour after feeding. The horse secrets about four quarts of saliva while eating his feed of oats, and if you add water at once to this amount it will often cause indigestion. If watered half an hour before or one hour after feeding the water will not interfere with digestion. Too much water at the time of feeding will force down some of the grain out of the stomach and into the bowels before it is ready to pass from the stomach. Give pure, fresh water from a well or river, never ice water.

The natural food of the horse is grass, but on account of the confinement and work, the horse requires a more nutritious and strength-giving food. The secret in feeding properly is to give a mixed diet that combines nutriment with bulk enough to make it digestable. Feed to supply heat and muscle, not fat. The more work done by the horse, the greater the amount of food to be given. The general foods are hay, grass, oats, barley, bran, carrots and turnips. Oats are the best grain food. It is a muscle-building and blood-making food, puts nerve and endurance in the animal and nothing can take its place.

Bran should always be kept, since a horse off his feed or slightly ailing from any cause not indicative of violent disease, will on bran mashes, with good nursing, come out all right in nine cases out of ten. In winter, when horses are confined to hard food a bran mash once a week should be given. A few carrots, turnips or mangles daily are excellent at the noonday or evening meal. Have a piece of rock salt always within reach.

CRAMPS ARE LIKE BURGLARS.

They come unexpected and when least welcome. Be armed with a one-minute cure in a bottle of Nerviline, which relieves cramps and stomach pains in five minutes. In colic, summer complaint, diarrhoea, indigestion and nausea, Nerviline is a remedy of remarkable potency, and acts promptly and satisfactory at all times. The composition of Polson's Nerviline expresses the highest medical progress of the age, which accounts for its superior merit. Price 25 cents.

Hamilton's Pills are Good Pills.

An Instrument of Utility.

The race horse and the racing bicycle each have their uses, and each in turn bears the same relation to the rest of its kind. We hear less of bicycle racing to-day than when the wheel first became popular. To-day the bicycle is more strictly an instrument of utility. Its usefulness in economizing time, in getting quickly from place to place or as a vehicle of pleasure are all so deeply impressed upon the public and have become so commonplace that we scarcely think of them as extraordinary. Yet there are more and more wheels used every year, and new riders are constantly learning the value of the bicycle as a means of easy and speedy locomotion.

SCHOOL BOARD IN REGULAR SESSION

Many Members Did Not Take Kindly to Collegiate Institute Proposition

Proposed Cadet Corps Brings Out A Peculiar Protest From Mr. Walker

Committee Appointed to Look Into Feasibility of the Corps Establishment

The members of the Board of Education were kept out rather late last evening, owing to lengthy discussions which ensued at the Board meeting, concerning the formation of a Cadet Corps and the building of a Collegiate Institute. So far as the latter is concerned the Board sat rather heavily on the proposition, but two members voting for it.

When the Board was called to order the following members were present: Messrs. J. A. Anderson, G. A. Bennett, W. A. Carson, I. Diamond, W. P. Hudson, P. C. Jones, A. McGinnis, Col. Ponton, Wm. Tennant, H. Walker, J. F. Wills, Rev. A. L. Geen, Wm. Johnson, W. S. Morden and Hy. Taylor.

In the absence of the Chairman, Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, Mr. J. F. Wills was unanimously voted Chairman for the meeting, and thanked the members for the honor conferred upon him.

Communications, Etc.

From Mrs. M. Ruttan, asking to be appointed caretaker of No. 1 School, as the present caretaker was about to resign that position.—Referred to School Management Committee.

From Mr. Wm. McKeown, supernumerary teacher, detailing the number of days he had taught during the past month.

A communication was presented from the boys of the High School, concurring in Col. Ponton's notice of motion regarding the establishment of a Cadet Corps at the High School.—Laid on the table.

Reports.

The Sites, Buildings and Repairs Committee presented a lengthy report in reference to their recent visit to the schools, and detailed recommendations as to repairs to be made in the various rooms of the schools were presented.

The Finance Committee recommended that $24 be granted to the widow of the late Mr. Tuffin, who was caretaker of Grier St. School for some years.

The Finance Committee recommended the payment of the following accounts:

Downey Co.	$15.45
Walker Foundry	24.40
Intelligencer Co.	22.75
Rathbun Co.	3.50
W. J. Thompson Co.	54
J. W. London	15.80
D. Stapley	8.35
J. W. Walker	12.72
S. Lasier, fuel	3.75
Downey Co.	45.39
C. C. Leavens	35.50
C. B. Scantlebury	8.10

Mr. John Johnston, Inspector, presented his monthly report of attendance, etc., at the schools for the month.

On motion the Board went into Committee of the Whole on reports, Col. Ponton in the chair.

The Finance Committee's report was adopted without discussion.

The Sites, Buildings and Repairs Committee's report, re repairs to the schools during the vacation, caused some discussion.

Mr. Wills thought that an estimate of the cost to be incurred should be presented to the Board. He moved that the report be referred back to the Committee for an estimate.

Mr. Bennett said that it was his intention to do this and ask for tenders for the work.

The motion made by Mr. Wills was seconded by Mr. Hudson and carried.

Motions.

Col. Ponton moved, seconded by Mr. Johnson, that a Cadet Corps be established in connection with the High and Public Schools of Belleville, under the provisions of the Education and Militia Acts, and pursuant to the regulations of the Educational Department, so that the substantial advantages and grants offered thereby and the advantages naturally accruing from the establishment of these organizations, in which true manliness and discipline are developed, may be secured to the boys of Belleville.

The mover spoke earnestly in support of the motion. He stated that Lord Minto, in his address, Lord Dundonald, Sir F. Borden, Minister of Militia, and the Minister of Education in Ontario have spoken in support of and endeavored to encourage the establishment of Cadet Corps. The Government at Ottawa would furnish an instructor if one were needed; also rifles, ammunition, etc. We have in Mr. Barragar an excellent instructor, who is in every way capable of drilling the boys. We have the material for necessary instruction and we have the boys who will form the Corps. He advocated it for the sake of the Belleville boys who can keep abreast of the times. These Cadet Corps were established in various places and they were doing good. The colonel read a letter from Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., who endorsed the proposition to form a Cadet Corps, which would, no doubt, prove beneficial; also one from Mr. James L. Hughes, of Toronto. We should do all we can to educate our boys in this direction. The Board had the authority by law to expend what money was necessary for the establishment of a Cadet Corps. The expenses would not be great.

Mr. Johnson was pleased to second the motion. Every boy in Canada ought to be taught to drill. We do not know the hour when we might be called upon to assist in defending the Empire, and the boys of the Cadet Corps would prove a valuable acquisition to our militia. He believed in boys being trained as early as possible in the rudiments of drill.

Mr. Walker said there was a financial side to this question. He thought that the probable cost of starting and keeping up the cadet corps should have been presented to the Board. As far as he (the speaker) was concerned he was as loyal as any man, but did not look with much favor upon the scheme proposed. It might possibly lead the boys into temptation. He had seen some in this city who had the red coats on come out of hotels and had even seen an officer not walking as straight as he might. He did not think the Board should take up this matter without considering it very carefully. He did not believe that the establishment of a cadet corps would be an improvement to the boys of the High School.

Mr. W. S. Morden said that so far as his association with the Fifteenth Regiment had shown, it was a regiment that would compare favorably with any regiment. He would favor the establishment of a cadet corps.

Rev. A. L. Geen said the more we can train our boys the better. He thought that the matter should be referred to a special committee, to report to the Board, in detail, the expenses, and moved in amendment that a special committee be appointed in the matter.

Mr. Hudson seconded the motion.

In answer to a question Principal Milburn said there were some 80 boys in attendance at the High School.

Col. Ponton said that at least 25 boys had to volunteer to become members of the corps. He hoped that if a special committee was appointed it would report at the next meeting of the Board, so that the corps can be soon established if such is decided. The expenses to the Board would not be great. A good soldier would make a good citizen. He repudiated the aspersion which had been cast upon the local regiment by Mr. Walker.

The amendment proposed by Rev. A. L. Geen prevailed, and the committee appointed was as follows: Messrs. W. P. Hudson, Wm. Johnson, W. S. Morden, A. McGinnis, H. Walker, Col. Ponton and Rev. A. L. Geen.

Proposed Collegiate Institute.

Col. Ponton moved, seconded by Mr. Johnson, That the City Council and Board of Trade of Belleville be invited to appoint a committee or committees to consult with chairmen of the committees of this Board, to consider the advisability of erecting a High School or Collegiate Institute, completely equipped and on grounds entirely separate and detached from any of the Public Schools, so that the advantages to Belleville as a city and to this whole district may be realized by the public, and so that the disadvantages of the present condition of affairs may be publicly pointed out.

The mover said the Board of Trade had appointed a committee to consider this matter and all his motion asked was that a committee be appointed from this Board and another from the City Council, and these committees could consider the matter in detail.

Mr. Hudson thought that before a committee was appointed the Board should endorse the scheme. Are the taxpayers of the city willing to expend $30,000 in building and equipping a collegiate institute, which he believed it would cost. The city was not increasing in population to such an extent as to warrant such an undertaking. In some of our schools to-day there are vacant rooms because there are not enough scholars to fill them. He would at the present time oppose such a proposition. Let the matter drop for the present and at some future time it might be revived. He would like to see a collegiate institute, but the city is not in a position to warrant the erection of such a building. Let the city prosper first and then this scheme might be brought on.

Mr. Diamond said the taxes at present were not very light in the city and he thought that this matter should be deferred. It would be folly to entertain the proposition of building a collegiate institute. Our present High School was commodious and comfortable. He would not favor the appointment of a committee to consider the matter. There were no schools in Ontario that could surpass the Belleville schools.

Mr. Johnson said that many municipalities which he had visited had collegiate institutes, and he had been informed that these institutes were paying investments.

Col. Ponton stated that his motion asked for a committee composed of the chairmen of the various committees of the Board. Is it because we are a progressive city and a progressive body that we are to remain inactive in this matter? The rooms are vacant in our schools because we have not enough teachers. He did not wish to ignore the Board of Education by having committees from the Council and Board of Trade appointed.

Mr. McGinnis asked if it was necessary to have specialists as teachers for a collegiate institute?

Mr. Wills—"Yes. There would have to be four specialists as teachers."

Mr. McGinnis thought it would be an imposition to have a collegiate institute. What he desired to see in the high school was the teaching of the fifth form.

Rev. A. L. Geen endorsed the remarks of Mr. McGinnis in regard to the teaching of the fifth form in the High School. We want for our children an education that will fit them for future life. He would have to oppose Col. Ponton's motion, because we have not the money to build such a building.

The resolution was defeated, but two voting for it, namely, Col. Ponton and Mr. Johnson.

Caretaker Appointed.

Mr. Taylor moved, seconded by Mr McGinnis, That Mrs. Ruttan be appointed caretaker of No. 1 school.—Carried.

Enquiries.

Mr. Johnson asked if the medal had been procured and sent to the young man Hubbard, who resides in Toronto.

Mr. Walker stated that the matter had been referred to a committee.

On motion the rules were suspended and a motion, proposed by Mr. McGinnis, seconded by Mr. Anderson, prevailed, that a medal be procured and sent to Mr. Hubbard.

Notices of Motion.

Mr. Johnson gave notice that at the next meeting of the Board it will be moved that in future the printing required for this Board be obtained from either of the newspaper offices of the city.

Mr. Hudson gave notice of a motion that he would introduce at the next meeting in reference to having the Fifth form taught in the High school.

This concluded the business and the Board adjourned.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

Commencing May 2nd and during June, July and August The Intelligencer Office will close on Saturdays at 5 p.m. sharp. Customers and subscribers will please note this.

Mrs. or Miss?

JUST as a sort of New Year's card, the Woman's Suffrage Society of Paris have issued a manifesto contending that, as woman in her maiden name accomplishes all the duties of a citizen, she does prejudice to her interests by sinking her identity and losing her individuality in adopting the name of her husband when she marries. Consequently, it seems on the tapis that in future, when Miss Smith marries Mr. Brown, she will still retain her maiden patronymic of Smith. Being married, she must of necessity be Mrs.; therefore, if she retains her maiden name of Smith, we shall have the weird anomaly of Mr. Brown and Mrs. Smith as man and wife. Now, supposing Mrs. Smith, otherwise Mrs. Brown, should, by any unforeseen event, meet with a Mr. Smith in the absence of her husband, and it should go forth to the world—in a hotel visitors' book, for instance—that they were actually Mr. and Mrs. Smith, where the dickens, in the event of trouble, would Mr. Brown come in? Mr. Brown might swear by all that was holy that Mrs. Smith was Mrs. Brown, but if Mr. Smith swore that she was Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Smith did not stoop to deny it, what jury outside a lunatic asylum could convict Mrs. Smith of playing fast and loose with Mr. Brown? It is a complex problem, to say the least of it; but if the Woman's Suffrage Society of gay Paree are not content to let well alone, I suppose they must put up with the consequences.

A Girl's Daring Feat.

IT seems hardly possible that a girl of sixteen should save nearly fifty people from a terrible death. Yet that is what Grace Bassell did, who may well be called the Grace Darling of Australia. It happened one day in December that a vessel was wrecked off the coast of Australia, a few miles from the Bassell home. The lifeboat on board the steamer was lowered, but it capsized and the eight people in it were drowned. So the rest of the crew clung to the sinking steamer. The surf ran so wildly that no one could dare swim through it, and there was not a house or person in sight. The girl, who was a splendid horsewoman, was riding along with a native servant. She caught sight of the vessel in distress; turning her horse's head toward the coast, she started him on a quick gallop. When she reached the sea she urged her horse into the angry surf. She rode boldly on till she reached the vessel. With great difficulty she took some of the children in her arms and put them before her on the saddle; then, with bigger children and women clinging to her dress, she started for the shore, gave those she had rescued to the care of her servant, and returned again to the wreck. So she went backward and forward for four hours, till all were safe on land, the servant having ridden to bring out the last man.—"Leslie's Weekly."

Imperial Weather.

SOMEBODY is about to publish a vindication of the character of English weather. It appears that it has been most unfairly misrepresented. What we stupidly call its fickleness is really nothing in the world but a perfectly laudable effort to reproduce in our midst the imperial nature of our climate, remarks "Outlook." When it presents us with primroses in November, that is to remind us of the pleasant picnic weather they are having on the veldt; the same laudable intention accounts for June snowstorms. Nor do we have to wait for complete reversals of the seasons. A week of imperial weather—sometimes, like a cheap trip, it is all crammed into one day—runs somewhat as follows: Monday, fog (home produce); Tuesday, cricketing weather (Australia); Wednesday, skating (Canada); Thursday, waterspouts (various ocean territories); Friday, steaming (West Coast); Saturday, general imperial representation; Sunday—but the British Sunday has a climate of its own.

A Smart Salesman.

Jeweler (to new boy)—Did you sell anything while I was out, Johnny?

"Yes, sir. I sold six plain gold rings."

"Good, my boy," said the jeweler, highly pleased. "We'll make a first-class salesman of you one of these days. You got the regular price, of course?"

"Oh, yes, sir. The price was marked on the inside, 18c., and the gentleman took all that was left, sir."

KIDNEY "SIGNALS"

Nature posts her signals all along the line. If the kidneys are faulty she gives the sufferer the sign—and it's an unmistakable one always.

The world owes loyalty to the science which points at life's gravest dangers—and tells her to avert them. South American Kidney Cure is a certain preventative and an unfailing cure for any and all forms of Kidney disease from the most incipient to the most stubborn and deep-seated cases—a liquid specific that never fails. The Cockade.

THE adoption of the cockade by President Roosevelt for his coachman and footmen has resuscitated the old question: Whose servants are entitled to wear a cockade? As a matter of fact, there is no right nor title to the cockade, but usage has, in England, where the cockade is more common than in any other country, confined it to the servants of the royal household, of the diplomatic corps, of officers of the Army and Navy—including the militia and volunteers—and to servants of justices and deputy lieutenants of cities. According to this unwritten law of custom, neither peers nor other persons of title, except they be royal, can confer the cockade on their servants unless they themselves hold one of the commissions already named. And here comes a strange anomaly: if they occupy a Government position, they can wear a cockade, although their servants cannot.

"Cockade," or, rather, the French equivalent of it, made its first appearance in the phrase "bonnet a la coquarde" of Rabelais. About sixty years after Rabelais's death, Randle Cotgrave, author of the first Anglo-French dictionary, defined "coquarde," now "cocarde," as "a Spanish cappe or fashion of bonnet, used by the most substantial men of yore—also any bonnet or cappe worn proudly or peartly on the side." But the most plausible origin given of the cockade of to-day is that it was derived from the tuft of cock's plumes worn by the Croatian soldiers, who in the seventeenth century served under France, and introduced the cravat to the world of fashion. At any rate, in 1638, men ambitious to become soldiers of France received cockades of paper; hence the expression, "prendre la cocarde," meaning "to enlist." Cockades appear to have fallen into innocuous desuetude, so far as France was concerned, until the Revolution, when the "cocarde tricolor" must have become obligatory, for, just before the fall of Robespierre, arrests were made for not wearing it.

The black cockade, now worn in England, was originally the distinctive badge of the House of Hanover, as the white cockade was that of the House of Stuart. It is said white was adopted by the adherents of the Stuarts because it was the emblem of the kings of France, who supported the Stuarts against the Hanoverians. The cockade worn by servants of the British royal household is a large half-disk which projects above the hat. Servants of naval officers wear a disk not projecting above the hat; those of army officers and other persons considering themselves entitled to carry cockades are fan-shaped, with a button, and they reach above the hat. The cockades of the servants of diplomats are in the colors of the country their masters represent, and many noble houses on the continent of Europe make their servants wear cockades matching their livery in color. When, many years ago, the war as to whose servants were entitled to a cockade was raging in England, the facts discovered were that no orders regulating their use were known to exist, but it was recorded that servants of officers of the London City Light Horse, a volunteer regiment, did not wear them. The conclusion arrived at was that the cockade was originally purely a military distinction; that the reason it was worn by servants of field officers was that, in former days, these servants had served in the army, that it was later adopted by servants who had never been in the army, and afterward by servants of naval officers.

There being no set rule in any country from which we have been in the habit of adopting social customs, it remains for us to follow the law that usage and good form has laid down. They have prescribed that the servants of ambassadors and foreign ministers of the United States abroad shall wear cockades, like the servants of foreign diplomats accredited to this country, the cockades of the coachman and footman giving the carriages a certain right of way. Ambassadors and ministers are entitled to the cockade after they have retired from the diplomatic service. But consuls are not members of the diplomatic service; they are merely commercial agents. Neither our consuls abroad nor consular representatives to this country have the right to the cockade, as consuls. Its adoption by an American citizen who represented a foreign country as consular agent in this city was authorized neither by usage nor good taste. That his family should continue to use it after his death is ridiculous vulgarity. Servants of officers of the United States army and navy, both regular and volunteer, are also entitled to wear the cockade.—Town Topics.

Eggs for The British Museum.

A notice of the collections recently bequeathed by the late Mr. Philip Crowley to the natural history branch of the British Museum appeared a few days ago in the "Times." A very important portion of the bequest is the collection of eggs, from which 15,200 specimens have been added to the series previously possessed by the museum. Among the gems in the Crowley cabinet are an egg of the great auk and one of the extinct pied Labrador duck. Both these specimens were acquired by Mr. Crowley from Canon Tristram. The great auk's egg is one of the last "batch" despatched in 1844 from Iceland to Denmark. The two specimens in the museum previous to this addition were both cracked and in otherwise poor condition. An interesting item in the collection is the number of clutches of eggs of various species of birds with a cuckoo's egg among them. The Crowley collection has added about 15 per cent. to the species of birds represented by their eggs in the museum, the increase being especially marked in Australian forms, in which the national collection was previously weak.

The Conscience Fund.

"I found eighteen umbrellas in the church yesterday," said the sexton to the minister the day after a rainy Sunday. "Oh, well," said the dominie, "take them to my study; they are probably intended as contributions to the conscience fund."

THE AWFUL AGONY OF AN ACHING BACK.

There is nothing more excruciating than backache — can't turn, stoop, or move without suffering terrible pain.

DR. PITCHER'S BACKACHE-KIDNEY TABLETS

Are the most prompt, complete and permanent cure known for sore, stiff, aching, painful backs. Read the proof:

THE PAIN SEVERE.

Mrs. George Inman, Carleton Place, Ont., said: "My husband suffered from an acute lameness in his back. To stoop or assume an upright position was excruciating. He tried various remedies, but said he never had anything come up to Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets."

TOOK HOLD IMMEDIATELY.

Mr. John Kinnee, Durham, Ont., gave the following account of his case: "For three or four years I suffered from good hard backache whenever I over-exerted myself. I got a bottle of Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets and they took hold immediately, and by the time the bottle was finished I was cured."

NO REST AT NIGHT.

Mrs. Richard Meyers, Preston, Ont.' says: "I had a severe pain in my back that gave me no release in the day time, and disturbed me at nights. Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets cured me of the pain, and I no longer have that depressing weakness in the mornings as formerly."

If you suffer from backache or any kidney, bladder or urinary troubles and are anxious to be cured quickly and permanently, see that you get Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets.

THE ONTARIO HOUSE.

A Quiet Day Devoted by the Members to Advancing Bills—A Good Roads Bill Knocked Out.

Toronto, May 9.—In the Legislature yesterday these bills were read a first time:

Mr. Gibson—To amend the Ontario Insurance Act.

Mr. Lackner—To incorporate the College of St. Jerome, Berlin.

Mr. Duff—An Act entitled the Hospital Compensation Act.

Mr. Auld—To amend the Street Railway Act.

Questions Answered.

In reply to Mr. Smyth, Premier Ross said there was no correspondence between members of the Government and John T. Linklater between June 1, 1899, and Jan. 1, 1903.

Second Readings.

Mr. Sutherland's bill, to amend the public highways act by giving the supervision of the work to the county councils instead of the Commissioner of Public Works, was defeated on a division, he having declined to withdraw it at the request of the Premier, who said he would bring down a bill next week to improve the act.

Dr. Barr moved the second reading of his bill to amend the assessment bill, which provides that township councils may pass bylaws to have the assessment made every two years. In many townships there was practically no change from year to year and a yearly assessment was unnecessary.

Mr. Gibson had no objection to the bill going to the committee, but he thought the inconvenience of having the assessment taken once a year would be offset by the convenience of having the assessment oftener.

Mr. Lachner's bill to amend the municipal act provides for the appointment of commissioners to look after the sewage system. His bill to amend the municipal waterworks act provides that the commissioners hold office for two years. The same principle applies to his bill to amend the municipal light and heat act. The bills were read a second time.

Dr. Barr moved the second reading of his bill to amend the high school act to provide for the election of trustees by ballot. The Minister of Education did not notice any great demand for the change, but the bill went on to the Legislation Committee.

Private Bills.

These private bills passed their second reading: Respecting the Lindsay Public Library (Fox); respecting the city of London (Beck); respecting St. Paul's Church, Dunnville (Harcourt); respecting the village of Hanover (Truax); respecting the Art Museum of Toronto (Foy); to change the boundaries of the town of Berlin (Lackner); respecting the Elgin Loan and Savings Co. (Pattullo); to confirm bylaw 597 of the town of Niagara Falls (Gross); respecting the Lake Superior Power Co. and certain other companies (Conmee); respecting the village of Fenelon Falls (Carnegie); respecting the municipality of Shuniah (Conmee); respecting the International Transit Co. (Conmee); respecting the St. Thomas Street Railway (Macdairmid).

Papers Ordered by the House.

The House passed an order for a return of copies of awards made by the arbitrators between the Dominion and the provinces since the date of the last return, and a statement of the account between Ontario and the Dominion from Dec. 31, 1892, to Dec. 31, 1902, as settled by the counsel for the province and the Dominion; also, that papers, reports and correspondence with respect to limit in the township of Rutherford and unsurveyed lands adjacent, sold to Shannon in 1902, from the year 1883, and subsequent thereto, be laid before the Public Accounts Committee, with power to enquire into the same as fully as in the case of accounts for 1902.

WOULD EXONERATE C.P.R.

Witness Before B.C. Bribery Committee Protects the Railway People.

Victoria, B. C., May 9.—The following is the Hon. Mr. Wells' statement before the committee yesterday: "In connection with my evidence as to the conversation I had with W. J. Taylor in Montreal in November, 1901, wherein he informed me of a projected syndicate or company to take over the Columbia and Western lands in Kootenay, and offered me a one-twentieth share therein, equivalent to 30,000 acres, I desire to convey the impression that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, or Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, were not in any way parties to Mr. Taylor's proposal to me or that I believed then, or believe now that Sir Thomas Shaughnessy or the Canadian Pacific Railway Company were privy to any schemes to acquire or use these lands for corrupt or improper purposes."

The Labor Commission.

Several of the leading officials of Miners Union gave evidence that they had been obliged to live at Ladysmith in order to continue work at extension, going 13 miles daily to and from the mine.

Dr. Bridgland's Funeral.

Bracebridge, May 9.—The funeral of the late member for Muskoka, Doctor Samuel Bridgland, took place here yesterday. The Legislature was represented by Messrs. Davis and Latchford from the Government side, and Messrs. St. John and Willoughby from the Opposition. Messrs. Tudhope and Carr, members for East Simcoe and Parry Sound, were also present. The House of Commons was represented by Mr. Bennett, M. P. for East Simcoe, and G. D. Grant, M.P. for North Ontario. Delegations from Toronto, Huntsville, Parry Sound, Gravenhurst, Newmarket, Orillia, North Bay and Pembroke, as well as all parts of Muskoka district, came to pay their last respects. The funeral was the largest ever held in the district.

1,000 FAMILIES HOMELESS

Ottawa Again Suffers From Ravages of a Big Blaze.

FIRE LASTED SIX HOURS.

Confusion and Panic Reigned For Some Time—10,000,000 Feet of Lumber Went Up in Smoke—The Area Burned Was Three Quarters of a Mile Long by a Quarter of a Mile Wide—Some Remarkable Escapes.

Estimated Loss	$500,000
Buildings Destroyed	300
Feet of Lumber Burned....	10,000,000
Acres Swept	100
Duration of Fire, Hours.	6
Troops Engaged	400
Families Rendered Homeless	1,000

Ottawa, May 11.—As a result of a fierce blaze in Ottawa yesterday afternoon one thousand families have been rendered homeless. The flames swept an area in the city estimated at from seventy-five to one hundred acres. The loss is estimated to be something over half a million dollars, almost wholly insured. The property destroyed consists of residences and ten million feet of lumber. Nearly three hundred buildings were consumed. The flames had control of the city for six hours, owing to the water main bursting. Montreal was appealed to. The militia forces were out. The fire began at 3.30 and was extinguished at 9.30.

Rival of Great Fire of 1900.

This city yesterday had an experience rivalling that of the great fire of April, 1900. The whole of the west end of the city known as Mount Sherwood and Rochesterville, was swept by the flames. The blaze started at 3.30 and was extinguished at 9.30. Hundreds of wagons carrying the household goods of the inhabitants streamed eastward all afternoon and late into the night.

The Forty-third Rifles and Governor-General's Foot Guards were called out to aid in keeping order.

There are rumors of incendiarism, and John White is in the police cells in connection with the fire. He was sent to the penitentiary by Chancellor Boyd in January, 1895, for incendarism, and released on ticket of leave in October, 1901. He is said to have a craze on the subject of fires, and is suspected of habit of ringing false alarms.

First Sign of Danger.

The first premonition of danger was a fire in a hay-pressing factory near Union Station about noon. This caused a good deal of alarm in a district which has been twice swept by fire, but was placed under control after burning a factory and several thousand dollars' worth of lumber. A second alarm was sounded about 3.30, and the flames burst out in the heart of the lumber district. The fire began in J. R. Booth's lumber piles near Oliver's furniture factory and spread with lightning rapidity. Immediately after the fire broke out the pumping main burst and left the firemen helpless for two hours. The district lies in a hollow below a rocky bluff, which affords a the height. But a high wind was partial protection to the houses on blowing from the west, and even the dwellers on the high land were afraid that the fire would mount up and sweep the whole city to the eastward.

House of Death Menaced.

The church and monastery of St. Jean Baptiste stand on the bluff, and the Dominican Fathers were seen removing their books and other property. Even the house on Concession street where the body of Judge Mills lies was supposed to be in danger. Pictures and other articles were removed from it. The possibility of having to remove the body was considered. But the danger in this region was averted by the wind veering round to the south and thenceforth the fire was confined to the lower level. Here it had its own way, and by the time the water was obtained again, houses were being consumed in blocks and streets.

The firemen fought hard to keep the flames from crossing Division street, which lies at the foot of the cliff, and were successful. The fire, however, swept along from south to north, following the opposite direction from the fire of several years ago.

Confusion and Panic.

The wildest confusion and panic prevailed. Furniture was flung out of houses. Everything on wheels was called into requisition, and the stream of traffic filled all the streets going eastward for hours. Men and women carried bundles in their arms. Household furniture was piled upon vacant lots in places that were supposed to be out of danger, and sometimes the family would be seen seated on the chairs and sofas. One man finding that a trench had been dug near his house, threw his furniture into it and covered it with earth. Another was driving a load of furniture when shouts from spectators warned him that the stuff was on fire. Four men who managed to get a wagon, but no horses, took hold of the shafts and moved their property out of danger.

Boundaries of the Fire.

The boundaries of the fire may be described generally as the Canada Atlantic tracks on the south, Richmond road on the north, First avenue on the west and the west side of Division street on the east.

It is about three-quarters of a mile long and a quarter of a mile broad.

Substantial Buildings.

It contains about 300 houses, mostly substantial brick houses, rebuilt after the last fire. They were inhabited chiefly by a good class of mechanics, especially railway men, and the average value of the dwelling houses would be placed at $1,500.

The houses were largely occupied by people who had bought them on the instalment plan. These would be insured up to the amount of the mortgage, but in many cases the purchaser would lose all his savings.

There is an ordinance forbidding the erection of wooden houses in this district, yet it is constantly endangered by piles of lumber. There is a great deal of angry discussion on the fact that people are compelled to go to the expense of building substantial houses while their protection is wholly destroyed by liability to fires from lumber.

Some Remarkable Escapes.

Some remarkable escapes are recorded. One was Warnock's wheat mill, on Wellington street. Three houses right in the midst of the fire-swept region escaped without a particle of damage, except one broken window. They were the houses of George Ross, 66 Rochester street; William Ranstead, Elm street, both employed in the buildings, and Mrs. McKechnie, corner Somerset and Preston streets.

Ranstead heard some one remark in passing his house: "Gosh, he must have a great pull with Laurier."

Union Station Threathened.

The Union Station was for a long time considered to be in danger, but escaped, although many piles of lumber in the vicinity were burned.

There are supposed to be about one thousand families homeless. Some are finding refuge in other houses. Others are camping on the public parks and commons.

At 6 o'clock a telegram was sent to Montreal asking for aid, and at 8.25 a special had left Montreal carrying three engines and twenty-five men. By the time they arrived the advance of the fire had been checked, but the whole district was covered with flames for hours afterwards. The willingness of all parties to help was very noticeable. The militia rendered excellent service, and the firemen were freely aided by citizens.

Work of Dominican Fathers.

The Dominican Fathers rendered a great deal of assistance in the work of removing furniture from danger. The loss is estimated at half a million. $350,000 for houses and contents, and $150,000 for lumber. J. R. Booth & Co. and the Export Lumber Co. are the chief losers on the lumber.

The Assessment Commissioners estimates area of burned district at sixty acres. This is considered rather low. His estimates of his houses burned and families homeless are also lower than those given above.

One Dies of Fright.

Not until 9.30 o'clock was there any assurance that the Chaudiere flats would be saved. Across Wellington street the northern terminus of the fire were piles of lumber surrounding the C.P.R. depot, and leading down to Booth's mills. There were no casualties, but several persons seriously ill had to be hurriedly removed, and one, an Italian, died shortly after.

Chief Powell says that the police suspect White of starting the first fire in the hay sheds, but that he did not start the big fire, as he was under surveillance by a detective all afternoon.

Record of Last Fire.

On April, 26, 1900, "The Great Fire at Ottawa" occurred. As the reports of that day said: "The fire fiend and the wind which consorted together, and began their frolic at 11 o'clock in the morning." Before midnight of April 26, 1900, half of Ottawa was in ashes, $18,000,000 had gone up in smoke, 16,000 persons were rendered homeless, and 8,000 workers were without a job.

Toronto Man Suffers.

Toronto, May 11.—D. Cumming of 124 Peter street last night received a telegram from his family in Ottawa, telling him that the household was totally destroyed. This is the second time Mr. Cumming has lost his property, he having been in the fire of 1900. His house in Ottawa was at the corner of Spruce and Preston streets, and in the centre of the fire-swept districts.

Will Not Change Plan.

This telegram was sent last night:

Toronto, May 10, 1903.

To His Worship the Mayor of Ottawa:

The Governor-General and Lady Minto are greatly distressed to hear of the serious fire which is raging in Ottawa.

Will you kindly express their sincere sympathy with the sufferers and telegraph full particulars here.

Major Maude,
Governor-General's secretary.

MONTREAL STRIKE ENDED

Basis of Settlement Show Concessions on Both Sides.

Men Expected to Return to Work on the Docks at Once—Old Employes to Receive First Consideration—Increased Scale of Wages to Begin With 1903—Employers Retain Right to Employes According to Merit.

Montreal, May 11.—The big longshoremen's strike was practically settled late last night at a conference of the strike leaders and the shipping men. The basis of settlement was drawn up to be submitted to the strikers at 9 a.m. to-day. It is fully expected they will accept, and in this event shippers will agree. Following is the basis of settlement:

Basis of Settlement.

Union or non-union men not to be discriminated against by foremen.

The right of the men to wear union buttons.

Workmen molesting others to be discharged, whether union or non-union.

Employers retain right to employ men according to merit.

Union leaders not to be permitted to visit men while working.

Old employes to receive first consideration.

Representatives of the men to have the right to submit their grievances before the teamsters' committee.

Increased scale of wages agreed upon previously agreement to begin year of 1903.

Abolition of independent labor bureau.

The Ionian and the Lake Erie entered port this afternoon.

The Bavarian left port Saturday, and the Canada yesterday, both having full cargoes.

How Settlement Came About.

The basis of settlement was obtained through the efforts of Robert Bickerdike, M.P., who is receiving congratulations on all sides for the success of effecting a settlement, which will incidentally result in the termination of the teamsters' sympathetic strike, thus relieving congestion that has all but tied up freight transportation at Montreal and affected the trade of the whole country.

Trouble in New York Settled.

New York, May 11.—The announcement was made yesterday that a settlement of the war between the Amalgamated Association of Carpenters and the Brotherhood, which caused 6,000 carpenters to stop work, is near. The Brotherhood has decided to make application for membership in the United Board of Building Trades, of which the Amalgamated Association is a member, and thus allow the united organizations to bring about peace.

Strikers Return to Work.

Shamokin, Pa., May 11.—The 300 striking men and boys employed at the Royal Oak Colliery of the Llewellyn Coal Company, at a mass meeting Saturday, decided to return to work on Monday and submit their demands to the Conciliation Committee. The mine has been idle since Tuesday.

Engines Derailed.

Melbourne, Victoria, May 11.—Railroad strike reports show that the railroad lines have been tampered with, causing the derailing of engines.

A strong force of police is held in readiness for eventualities. The street car service has been greatly augmented.

LAND GRANT SOLD.

Canadian Northern Disposes of 3,000,000 Acres For $12,000,000.

Winnipeg, May 11.—A despatch from St. Paul confirms the purchase by Col. A. D. Davidson of Duluth, Minn., and associates, of the entire land grant of the Canadian Northern Railway, exceeding three million acres, the consideration being twelve million dollars. Mr. Mann when seen last night said the report was substantially correct.

$1,000 a Month to Go on Stage.

London, May 11.—It is said that Marion Hutchinson, daughter of Medical Health Officer Hutchinson, whose experiences in connection with the Burdick case in Buffalo gave her much unsought notoriety and won for her much sympathy, has been offered $1,000 a month by E. F. Proctor, a theatrical manager of New York city. As Miss Hutchinson at present has a suit for $100,000 damages pending against the Buffalo authorities for false arrest, she has declined the tempting proposition, for the present, at any rate.

Energetic Burglar Caught.

Winnipeg, Man., May 11.—The mystery of the Winnipeg burglaries that has well nigh driven the local detective department to distraction and kept citizens in a state of terror for the past two months has been solved. Saturday night about 8 o'clock the police arrested Robert Hamilton, and, on searching his trunk, a lot of the stolen goods were found.

Teetzel Getting Ready.

Hamilton, May 11.—The appointment of J. V. Teetzel, K. C., as judge is looked upon as a certainty now, and Saturday he notified his partners that he was preparing to withdraw from the firm. Last night his appointment has been gradually rendered a certainty.

COUGHED FOR YEARS.

"For four years I had a severe cough. I was so weak and exhausted from coughing that I was unable to attend to my business. Two bottles of Angier's Petroleum Emulsion cured my cough and benefited me in every way."—A. Milligan, Toronto, Canada.

TURKS KILLED FIVE REBELS

Bulgarian Revolutionist Ringleader Was One of Them.

Campaign Against Bulgarians Being Carried on With Unbated Fury—Powers Are Not Yet Pressing Claims For Damages For the Salonica Outrages—Austria and Italy Withdraw Their Warships From Salonica.

Washington, May 11.—The Turkish Minister to the United States has received the following:

On the 6th of May, the Bulgarian revolutionists attempted to commit, at Monastir, anarchistic outrages analagous to these perpetrated at Salonica. Thanks to efficacious measures, taken by the Imperial authorities, however, they have been unable to put their designs into execution. Stoutsheff, one of the ringleaders of the Bulgarian revolutionary committee, perished, with five of his accomplices, in the Village of Fraishna (Florina.)

Powers Not Pressing.

Constantinople, May 11.—It is denied here that the powers have lodged claims for damages resulting from the Salonica outrages.

The Turkish Government has apologized to the Bulgarian diplomatic agent here for the domiciliary visits made by the police of Constantinople last week, when about 60 Bulgarians were arrested, and when the papers of the Secretary of the Bulgarian Diplomatic Agency were seized, at his residence. The agent threatened to leave Constantinople, unless satisfied this action was given.

The statement that the Porte has required Austria and Italy to withdraw their warships from Salonica has been confirmed.

Mischief Makers Responsible.

St. Petersburg, May 11.—The Foreign Office here strongly deprecates the excitement concerning Manchuria. It believes mischief makers are responsible for the reports and says the arrival of troops at New Chwang was due to the retirement of troops from Moukden Province southward instead of northward. The troops depart by sea. The other alleged warlike preparations of Russia are ridiculed.

Russians Get Out Again.

Pekin, May 11.—The official at New Chwang who sent Saturday's news reports of Russia's alleged action at New Chwang and elsewhere in Manchuria, telegraphed yesterday that the occupation of the forts at the north of the Liao River was temporary, and that the Russians have now withdrawn. Official circles at Pekin are mystified. Their subordinates at New Chwang have not reported the re-occupation of that place.

Chinese Urged To Revolt.

Shanghai, May 11.—As a result of patriotic meetings, called because of the situation in Manchuria, the viceroys and Governors have telegraphed the Grand Council at Pekin, urging the Chinese Government to resist foreign aggression.

Great Alarm at Tetuan.

Gibraltar, May 11.—Advices received here from Morocco say the Benider tribe, which is in open revolt, is again threatening Tetuan. The tribesmen are encamped on the outskirts of the town and Mulai Araft, the Sultan's uncle, had left Tetuan to attack them. Great alarm again prevails at Tetuan, whence urgent requests for help have been sent out.

Fierce Fighting in Mindanao.

Manila, May 11.—Captain Pershing, U.S.A., and his column have returned to Camo Vicars, Mindanao, from the Lake Lanao. Among the Moros killed in the Taraca forts were nine Dattos and one Sultan. The moral effect of this fight will be far-reaching.

FATAL NEW YORK COLLISION.

Passenger Trains Crash Together While Travelling at High Speed.

Syracuse, N.Y., May 11.—A special to The Post-Standard from Malone says: A head-on collision occurred at Nelson Lake on the Mohawk & Malone Railroad at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Two passenger trains traveling at a high rate crashed into each other and five persons are reported killed.

Several of the passengers are reported injured, but so far as ascertained none of them were killed or fatally injured. Mail Clerk Best is in a precarious condition. He will be brought to Malone.

Horse Kicks Royalty.

Madrid, May 11.—The Infanta Isabella, King Alfonso's aunt, fell from her horse Saturday, and was kicked in the mouth. Her lip was badly cut, but she was not dangerously injured.

"Poet of the Sierras" Passes.

Oakland, Cal., May 11.—Joaquin Miller, the "Poet of the Sierras," died here suddenly last night.

THE OVERWORKED MONUMENT.

She followed him unto his grave,
And reared a marble rare,
And chiseled on this sentence sweet;
"My grief I cannot bear."

She mourned a year, and then was wed.
And they chiseled on that stone
A single word, and now, it reads;
"My grief I cannot bear—alone."

But soon she wore the weeds again,
And they turned that stone about,
And on it traced this touching line;
"My life's light has gone out."

Not long she walked in darkness lone
Around this marble patch.
The bells rang out, the sculptor wrote;
"I've struck another match."

She's happy now with number four,
But all the neighbors say
That she will be a busy girl
On resurrection day.

THE CONSERVATIVE LEADER.

Conservatives may well feel proud of their leader, Mr. R. L. Borden. The quiet, unassuming person, who, two years ago, took upon himself the direction of the policy of the Opposition, has justified the fondest hopes of his friends. Two sessions were passed in gaining an experience which is now making itself felt in Parliament. No stronger man than Mr. Borden occupies a seat in the Commons. He has forced the Liberal party to take a stand in their fiscal policy, and compelled them to put themselves on record as opposed to a plan involving the protection of the industries and labor of this country. Mr. Borden has one policy for all Canadians, and this position has won for him a reputation for consistency which is bound to bear fruit. He does not stoop to the smart tricks of the demagogue but relies on real ability to carry him over rough places. In Montreal, where Mr. Borden recently addressed a large and highly representative gathering of the city's leading men, his name is on every tongue. The people of our commercial metropolis are now ready to accept the Conservative leader as one of the great men concerned with Canada's destiny. They feel that in his hands our interests would be closely guarded, and administered in an unimpeachable manner. The great Conservative party has chosen well, and already the "swing of victory" is much in evidence, under its leader's well balanced direction. "The flowing tide is with us."

THE PIGEON AND THE PARSON

LOCAL MINISTER HAD QUEER EXPERIENCE IN AMELIASBURG YESTERDAY.

Rev. J. R. Real, of this city, had a queer experience yesterday. He was in Ameliasburg, conducting services in the Methodist church there. In the morning, it being warm, the windows were open. The congregation had just knelt for the opening prayer when a pigeon flew in at one of the windows and alighted on the big Bible close to where the Rev. gentleman was standing. From the Bible it flew on to his shoulder, where it remained all the time he was praying. When he concluded the pigeon flew away. Rev. Mr. Real says he never had a stranger or more striking experience.

MYSTERY OF INFERNAL MACHINE

NEW YORK POLICE PUZZLED OVER BIG BOX OF DYNAMITE.

New York, May 10.—The police have so far failed to solve the mystery surrounding the leaving of a box of dynamite on the Cunard Line dock yesterday. There is a diversion of opinion among the officials as to whether the matter was intended to be a hoax or not, but all agree that the possibilities of a great explosion and a great loss of life were many.

Supt. George E. Murray of the Bureau of Combustibles said to-day that there was no detonating caps attached to the dynamite sticks, and that without these caps it was not likely that the dynamite would have exploded from a fuse. He says, however, that if the box had been given a sudden jar at the time the fuse burned down to the dynamite an explosion might have resulted. He also said that he had experimented with the clockwork and concluded that it had run about five hours when found, and that it still had about thirty hours to run before operating the firing lever. He does not believe that a hoax was intended.

Police Commissioner Green said today that it had been suggested to him that the whole thing was a hoax, but the suggestion would not divert him from his purpose of having the matter sifted to the bottom.

"This is too grave a matter," he said; "to be considered lightly, even if proven a hoax. I shall try to find the person or persons who placed the dynamite on the pier. The offence is punishable by an imprisonment of twenty years, and to prevent repeated attempts of this kind an example should be made of some of the participants in the affair."

GREATLY ALARMED

By a Persistent Cough, but Permanently Cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. H. P. Burbage, a student at law in Greenville, S. C., had been troubled for four or five years with a continuous cough which he says, "greatly alarmed me, causing me to fear that I was in the first stage of consumption." Mr. Burbage, having seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised concluded to try it. Now read what he says of it: "I soon felt a remarkable change and after using two bottles of the twenty-five cent size, was permanently cured." Sold by all Druggists.

He Kept a Diary.

The advantage of keeping a diary was evidenced at the Clerkenwell Sessions of the County of London recently. An omnibus conductor, William Henry Grimshaw, by producing a diary in which he had made notes of the movements of Frederick Davis, a pickpocket, was instrumental in procuring Davis' conviction. On the morning of March 16 a Mrs. Osborne was riding in an omnibus along High Holborn. Soon after she entered Davis got in and sat close to her. The conductor kept him under observation, and saw him put his hand into the prosecutrix's pocket and remove the contents, one article at a time. These, consisting of spectacles and some letters, he deposited on the seat. Grimshaw sized him and handed him over to a police constable. The conductor caused great amusement, when, on being called into the box, he said that the prisoner and another man had travelled many times on his 'bus, and complaints always followed their patronage. In February they "come it so thick"—(laughter)—that he determined to keep a record of their visits to his vehicle. As a result he compiled a diary with the following entries:—

February 5—Got on Tottenham Court road, and left at Chancery Lane. Followed an old lady, but she did him by sitting up in the corner, so that her pocket could not be reached.

February 6—Came on Cheapside. Saw there was no chance, as the ladies held their purses in their hands, and dodged out without paying his fare. (Laughter).

February 9—Chancery Lane to Royal Music Hall. As he commenced operations the lady said, "Stop; I want to get out," and he was done. (Laughter).

March 5—Rode from Bank to Cheapside. The lady got out before he could set to work, so he was foiled again.

March 16—Caught red-handed.

Davis (cross-examining the conductor): You say I travelled often in your 'bus?

The Conductor: You did before I "rumbled" you. (Laughter).

Davis: Why didn't you charge me?

The Conductor: It does not lie in my power. The company won't allow me to prosecute unless I take it on my own responsibility. They receive hundreds of letters from lady passengers saying they have left their purses in the 'bus, and the conductors get the blame for taking them. All the time it's these thieves that get the purses.

The Judge commended the conductor, and said that it was for the company to reward him. Davis was sentenced to 21 months' hard labor.

Premiums to Workmen.

A most interesting address on the working of the premium system which has been introduced in the payment of wages in various engineering establishments was recently delivered at the Institution of Mechanical Engineers by Mr. James Rowan, a member of the eminent Glasgow firm of Rowan & Co., marine engineers, says The London Commercial Intelligence. By the premium wages system each man is paid a regular hourly rate of wages. When a job is given out a certain time is allowed for it. If the job is completed in less time than that allowed the workman becomes entitled to a premium, varying in amount with the time saved. If the job takes longer than the time allowed, the workman gets paid his regular hourly rate of wages, so that, no matter how short a time may be allowed for a job, the hourly rate of wages, at least, will be paid while engaged on that job. In outlining the scope and advantages of the system, Mr. Rowan laid stress on the importance of careful investigation and inquiry before the scheme was adopted, as assiduous attention and steady perseverance were, he said, necessary to success. Experience in Messrs. Rowan's works had shown that as the workman gained confidence that his time allowance would not be reduced, no matter how short a time he took to a job, he gradually reduced his time. The premium system was started in the works in February, 1898, and since its introduction the times taken by all the machine men had, on an average, been reduced during the four succeeding years by 20, 23, 31 and 37 per cent. respectively. The earnings of the men had consequently increased by these percentages. The firm had given every assistance in accomplishing this reduction of time by general improvements in many directions. Mr. Rowan said he had conferred at various times with many of the men, and they frankly admitted that they were thoroughly satisfied with the premium system, and would not care to go back to the old time system. As a matter of fact, there were now fewer changes amongst the workmen than before the premium system was started.

Hampered by Lack of Time.

The suburbanite was hurrying to his train, when a rough-looking man who was lounging in front of a saloon thrust out his foot and tripped him, says a New York Exchange. Quickly gathering himself up, the suburbanite grabbed him by the collar and resumed his run, dragging the fellow along.

"I haven't time to stop and polish you off as it ought to be done," he said, administering a stiff punch on the other's nose with his disengaged fist, without losing a step, "but I think (biff) I can make it interesting for you (biff) just the same—here, now, don't try to hang back (biff) you lazy hound! Come along (biff) with you! You're delaying the procession. Some day (biff) when I have a little more time (biff) I'll finish the job, but this (biff) will do for a beginning."

With a final punch on the jaw, given with as much force as could be expected from a man making a running fight and obliged to do all the fighting, he released the half-dazed fellow, and continued on his way, boarding his train just in time, somewhat blown, but otherwise not particularly ruffled.

The Change Too Much.

He was a wealthy city man. He had just got down to his country home when he was seized with strange symptoms, and he at once telegraphed to his city physician. The man of medicines hurriedly obeyed the summons, and, after a half-hour's investigation, said:—

"It is the sudden and awful change. You miss the thumping and the banging of the roads; you hear no factory whistles; you get no smell of factory smoke; no milk waggons pound along at 3 o'clock in the morning; there are no gangs of boys playing football in front of your house; the shouts and shrieks and screams of street peddlers no longer reach your ears.

"You go to bed to sleep, and your sleep is not broken by a piano across the road, a dance next door or a row between loafers at your gate. There are no coal bills or gas bills during the day—no calls from grocers, butchers and bakers. You have lost the sound of tramcars and fire engines, and there are no German bands or hand organs. It is too good a thing, it is too soft and gentle and peaceful.

"I will send you an anvil with four men to pound on it, six tin horns with boys to toot 'em, a barrel of fireworks with three nippers to explode them, and if you provide yourself with a brass drum, a fog horn and a fiddle this lonesome feeling will gradually disappear, and you will find the country air doing you a heap of good."

THE BITTER-SWEET
IN OUR LIVES.

David G. Wylie, D.D., Pastor Scotch Presbyterian Church, New York.

Exodus xv., 22, 24, 27.

The Marah and Elim incident of Scripture is rich in its suggestiveness. After the passage of the Red Sea, the people plunged, with their flocks and herds, into the wilderness, with its new and strange experiences. They pressed forward, but at the end of three days found their supply of water exhausted. Animals and people were driven almost mad. They burned with thirst, their eyes became bloodshot, they panted with fever under the sun and longed for water. Their condition was not simply uncomfortable, but positively dangerous.

While in this sad plight good news came to them. The cry was heard, "Wells of water ahead"—fountains where they might quench their thirst and cool their fever. Faster and faster they pressed forward, only to find disappointment. For "when they came to Marah, they could not drink of the waters of Marah, for they were bitter."

What does all this mean? That their journey is a type of ours; that we have experiences similar to theirs. Is it not a fact that to most of us life is a wilderness, a desert, often a disappointment, Marah, bitterness? All have Marah experiences, though there is more of joy than sorrow in life, more of sunshine than shadow.

Most of life is to most men made up of much disappointment. Men crave happiness, and expect it here and seek it through some earthly, some temporal means—wealth, or power, or fame, or a peaceful domestic life or social success, or literary eminence—and no sooner do they obtain their desire and hold it in their grasp than they find its savor gone, its taste bitter, that they do not care to drink.

Under such circumstances we feel that God is unkind, and we complain against him. Has He no plan in all this for us? Yes, the hard experiences of life are God's discipline, by which He tests us and purges out the dross, that the pure gold may appear We do not know what impatience, rebellion, sin lurk in our heart until we pass through God's fiery tests!

The incident we are considering exhibits to us the fact that in times of trial and disappointment God's people act in different ways

We see how the people murmured "What shall we drink?" They complained against their best friend, Moses. They acted as if they thought him God. Had he not acted unselfishly? Did he not, for their sakes, step down from a place of eminence and power? It was for them, that they might become free men and free women, that he became an outcast and sojourned forty years in the solitudes of the desert, keeping sheep instead of ruling men.

At Marah the people made Moses their scapegoat; they threw all the blame of their misfortunes upon him. In so doing they revealed a base trait in human character, men's willingness to blame others for their misfortunes instead of calmly and patiently assuming the responsibility themselves. The people murmured against Moses instead of counting their experiences as a valuable part of their wilderness discipline.

With Moses it was different. Though under a fearful strain and in danger, he was patient and prayed to God. He did not rebuke the people, but sympathized with them in their distress. He sought God's guidance and found it; for in answer to his fervent prayer God healed the bitter waters. The prayer of Moses brought sweetness out of bitterness, joy out of sorrow and light out of darkness. The Gethsemanes of life always turn out to the Christian's advantage. Agonizing prayer that brings drops of blood is generally answered When all else fails, God accomplishes many things by the prayers of His people. Learn to pray. Walk in the footsteps of the great and good of the ages.

We have an instance of God's gracious kindness to His people. He led them out of their trials. They did not stop and perish at Marah, but went on to Elim, with its palm groves and wells of water.

In life Elim often follows Marah. God opens up for us a broad way out of our difficulties. There are, in the providence of God, many sweet resting places after our times of bitterness. We are wise when we learn in life to take the bitter with the sweet!

God led his people out of bondage and gave them liberty. In their darkest and most discouraging hours God never forsook them. They had the presence of Moses as friend and guide. They went through many hard and trying experiences, but at last they arrived at the end of their destination and entered Canaan.

So it is with us. Now we are on our hard and dangerous journey. There are enemies on every side. Often we are discouraged. We faint under our heavy loads. We murmur against the providence of God.

This is not what God desires us to do. We are to learn patience, to trust God, to go forward under the guidance of the great leader, Jesus Christ, until at last the end of the journey will come and we shall enter our heavenly Canaan and be forever with our God.

Studies in Natural History.

The Boy.

This untamable little creature, which is well called "The Terror of the Neighborhood," is perhaps the most feared and dreaded of all animals, and the one that causes the most aggravation.

Most people have the same instinctive desire to throttle a boy at sight, and on general principles, that they have to kill a snake. Unfortunately, the law prevents this; and as it has been found inexpedient to keep it confined like a lion or a jackal in a steel cage, out of harm's way, human beings have been unable to protect themselves against a creature so bloodthirsty that it finds its chief delight in torturing its victims.

This causes everyone to view the advent of a Boy in a community with alarm, while the presence of two or three depreciates the value of property and makes nervous people flee from the vicinity.

Although naturalists have devoted much time to the study of this subject, they have never been able to definitely classify the Boy, owing to his partaking of the obnoxious traits of all the other animals. Physically, it is all Stomach and Yell, with a rudimentary heart and no soul.

Notwithstanding all this, however, the Boy is greatly esteemed as a household pet, and is quite generally kept in that capacity. Indeed, few families are satisfied and happy without one, although after having received one they never know another minute's peace and quiet as long as they have it about the house

This is the most startling fact in all natural history, as, having observed their friends' boys, one would think that no money could induce a person to undertake to raise a creature that was so much trouble.

In looks the Boy presents a curious anomaly, as it changes at different ages. When it is quite young, and at the time, it may be observed, that most people select it, it is soft and beautiful, with an angelic expression that appeals strongly to female owners and causes them to rave over it.

A little later it gets stringy and long-legged, with pale green freckles and warts, and generally uncouth and unprepossessing appearance. Fortunately, however, by this time its owners have become attached to it; otherwise it would be cast out to perish.

The habits of the Boy afford a most instructive study. It eats steadily from the time it gets up until it goes to bed, and devours the most indigestible substances with perfect impunity. Green apples, liquorice, hunks of bread and meat, doughnuts and whole pots of jam disappear down its throat without raising the slightest commotion in its stomach. When it is not opening its mouth to poke food down, it is opening it to emit a series of hideous sounds, so practically a Boy's mouth is never shut. These sounds are unintelligible to human beings, but are apparently understood by its mates.

Naturalists also call attention to the fact that a Boy is the only animal that spends its time in play, and it has been further observed that it soon wearies of any sport that does not hurt someone else. Another curious thing is that although a Boy can play all day, he becomes ill and weary the minute work is suggested to him or he starts to school. This is probably constitutional.

Occasionally a boy has been broken in to do a few household tasks, but it requires so much energy and trouble to make it do any useful work that few people have the physical strength to attempt it.

Boys are also femiphobes, and frequently bite and kick when a pretty girl desires to kiss them and stroke their hair. In time, however, they can be broken of this bad habit, and taught to endure female caresses with much equanimity.

The chief characteristic of a Boy is his aversion to soap and water. In this it is like the cat, and it is with difficulty driven near the bath tub. It also balks at being dressed up and shown off before company. Now and then, it is true, you find one who will consent to be adorned in Fauntleroy collars, and who will get out on the floor and do its little tricks without the whip, but these are never pure-blooded Boys. They are mongrels with a strong strain of Sissy in them.

A curious thing in this connection is that everyone who owns a Boy believes that he is a wonder and will be a future winner in the show. He also bitterly resents the insinuation that his Boy possesses the same characteristics of other boys, or would be guilty of such a thing as breaking windows or ringing old maids' door bells.

Most people, as has been said, like to keep a Boy themselves, but all, without exception, object to their neighbor's, and those who have none get even by prophesying evil things of the Boy across the street. Sometimes, however, the creature turns out well, and then we all brag that we knew it when it was a Boy.

His Complaint.

I am a baby, eleven months old, and nearly worn out already. Please let me alone!

I am not a prodigy, except to the extent that, not having anything to say, I don't talk. Two big persons claim to be my parents—why can't they let it go at that? I have never denied the charge. I haven't much data to go by, but I don't think I am either a magician, a learned pig, or a virtuoso. I don't hanker for applause; so, it will be an appreciated favor if you won't put me through any parlor tricks.

If I have my wealthy old Uncle Ezra's nose, congratulate Uncle Ezra, but don't blame me. I may be a kleptomaniac, for all I know, but I can't help it.

Don't rattle rattles at me—they rattle me. Don't goo-goo and ootsie-kootsie at me. I can't understand it any better than the English language.

The pain I have is not in my stomach, but in my neck. I don't want to be entertained or mystified or medicated or applauded. And, if you don't want me to grow up to be a hypochondriac, a stamp-collector, an awful example, a ping-pong enthusiast, a misanthrope, you just lemme me!—"Smart Set."

Dedude.—That man called me a liar, a cad, a scoundrel, and a puppy. Would you advise me to fight for that? Old Gent.—By all means. There's nothing nobler in this world, young man, than fighting for the truth.

Two old women, "Mother" Baker Eddy and Mark Twain, slang-whanging each other in the papers, do not present an edifying spectacle.—"Town Topics."

YACHTING.

Challenger Shows Great Form.

Gourock, Scotland, May 9.—The two Shamrocks were sent off this morning over a racing course of 40 miles, starting from Gourock marks at Powder Buoy, Hunter's Quay and Skelmorlie. The wind blew about eight knots and was strengthening. The start, which was informal, took place at 10.30. Both yachts carried club topsails. Shamrock I. led wide to windward of the top challenger. Before a mile was covered, however, the challenger had worked to windward and had drawn level with the older boat. Captain Wringe then eased Shamrock III. with the object of giving the boats an even start on the long run to leeward from Powder Buoy, which was turned as follows:

Shamrock III.	10.42;45
Shamrock I.	10.42;53

Spinnakers were then set and the Shamrocks started down channel to Skelmorlie, the challenger opening away steadily.

Once fairly set going, Shamrock III. ran away from her opponent in great shape, and they passed Gourock as follows:

Shamrock III.	10.59;30
Shamrock I.	11.00;50

The old boat brought up a better wind, and was closer off Bullwood. Then the wind drew southerly, spinnakers were taken in and the boats fetched down on the port tack.

The yachts ultimately were sent off on a real racing trial. The challenger was trimmed to her work. Every sail was drawn well and she outpointed, outran and outreached the older boat. They ran first with spinnakers to Cloch, five miles, and Shamrock III. caught and passed her opponent and led her by a quarter of a mile at that point. The boats were then broad-reached to Skelmorlie buoy, the challenger opening away fast and constantly. The wind was a trifle unsteady, and the challenger was rather better served. She beat Shamrock I. hollow, turning the Skelmorlie end of her nine miles' sail nearly 11 minutes ahead. Reaching back up channel to Cloch, the challenger further improved her lead until she was two miles ahead. The finishing stretch was by the wind and the challenger continued to open away and scored a decisive victory, finishing 14 minutes and 16 seconds in front of the older boat.

Throughout the trials Shamrock III. showed such in-and-out form as to suggest that either the boat has extreme moods or Captain Wringe is purposely holding much up his sleeve. This never was more apparent than to-day.

Foot Elm Cools Hot Feet

Sometimes people are troubled with a hot, burning condition of the feet that even bathing will not relieve.

The trouble in most instances is due to blood congestion, and the only remedy that will give relief is Foot Elm.

It cools and soothes the feet by equalizing the circulation and relieving the local congestion. Mr. W. Brown, Consecon, Ont., speaks of the benefits he derived as follows: "I can recommend Foot Elm for sweaty, hot, tired feet."

"Foot Elm" is 25 cents a box at druggists or by mail. B. I. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation.—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

WHY WE LEAD

Our word stands guard over every transaction in our house, insuring your satisfaction, not merely for the worth of your money, but to the full limit of values. Our word is behind every advertised statement, insuring you of its absolute truth. The throngs of people who visit our store speak for our methods better than we can. It you have nothing else to do—even if you do not care to buy—come and look. It is interesting to watch others, sometimes and you will see with your own eyes and hear with your own ears the whys and wherefores of our leadership.

Ready At All Times

Because it is summer on Saturday and winter on Monday, that need not puzzle you. We are always prepared for warm weather or cold, wet weather or dry. But spring is a coy young thing, only playing with you, happy if she can catch you unprepared on the bright to-morrow.

Many estimable people were late for church yesterday because the Bridge St. church bell failed to ring. They think they should be told when the bell is not going to be tolled.

It must amuse the Postmaster, these days, to hear a few Grits shouting that the Post Office is all right, while he himself acknowledged that it was not all right by any means, and that "it was time the eyes of the Government were opened to the situation." The question now is, who ought to know most about the Post Office, the Postmaster or the people whose chief recommendation is that they support the Government through thick and thin, no matter what its sins are? We have confidence in the opinion of the Postmaster.

"A Veteran" writes: "I coincide most heartily in the opinion of The Intelligencer with respect to the remarks made by a certain member of the Board of Education last Friday night. In the course of a long life I have had experience with the militia in both the Old Country and Canada, and have found that, far from leading weak men into temptation, the tendency of drill and discipline has been to brace up the weak ones and help them to resist an unfortunate appetite. There may be exceptions, of course, but to my mind, and in my experience, they only proved the rule."

Luck, says Max O'Rell, means rising at six in the morning, living on $1 a day if you earn $2, minding your own business and not meddling with other people's. 'Luck' means appointments you have never failed to keep, the trains you have never failed to catch. 'Luck' means trusting in God and your own resources.

Now we do hope that nobody will smell politics in it and feel called on to berate the Council of the Board of Trade for sending that resolution, re the Montreal strike, to the Minister of Labor. That would be a national calamity. Between ourselves, you know, we think the resolution, which appears in another column, has the right ring and should be welcomed by the Government, but some of our Grit fellow-citizens appear to have such an exaggerated opinion of Sir William Mulock's dignity that we wait with fear and trembling to see how the great man will take the respectful recommendation from the Belleville Board of Trade. Perhaps the correct way to present a resolution of that kind would be for the Board to go personally, introduced by the Fishery Inspector, kow-towing at every step and armed with smoked glasses to gaze upon the great Sir I, William.

Two Hundred Blown Up.

Vienna, May 11.—A mosque at Kinpriul, in which 200 Moslems had assembled, was, according to a despatch to Die Zeitung from Sofia, Bulgaria, blown up with dynamite on May 2. The worshipers were buried in the ruins. The perpetrator of the outrage, a man named Poppow, committed suicide by shooting.

Two Burned to Death.

Buffalo, May 11.—Herman M. Bleasdell of North Collins, 63 years old, a former Assemblyman, after whom the town of Bleasdell, N. Y., is named, and his wife were so badly burned in a fire, which destroyed their home, early yesterday, that both of them are dead. An adopted son was the only other occupant of the house at the time the explosion occurred, and was slightly burned. The explosion was caused by escaping gas becoming ignited.

Governor-General's Tour.

Toronto, May 11.—His Excellency the Governor-General and Lady Minto, accompanied by Lady Eileen Elliott, Major and Mrs. Maude and Capt. Graham, A.D.C., will leave Toronto this morning for Guelph, commencing their week's tour of the western section of the province. Great preparations have been made in the several places to be visited by the vice-regal party. At Windsor the visit will become international, as the party will cross to Detroit, where a guard of honor composed of the United States soldiers will assist in doing honor.

Late Hon. David Mills' Funeral.

Ottawa, May 11.—The arrangements for the interment of the remains of the late Justice Hon. From there to Palmyra Cemetery they will be conveyed by road.

Sagacity of a bulldog.

Representatives Payne and Dalzell on their recent visit to the South argued one day upon the intelligence of dogs, says the New York "Tribune." Mr. Dalzell held that the collie was the wisest of the dog family, while Mr. Payne claimed this honor for the bulldog, backing up his contention with a strange dog story.

"A reputable and honest farmer," he said, "told me once that he owned a sagacious bulldog to which he had given the name of Oscar. He also owned a bulldog of a fiery and malignant character. On a summer evening, when the sun's heat had inflamed the latter's temper highly, Oscar sauntered past him and was instantly attacked.

"Oscar ran with all his speed, but he was no match for his pursuer. Every second the distance between the two became smaller. The farmer, a long way off, was hurrying to the rescue, but it looked to him as though all thought of help was futile. Oscar seemed foredoomed.

"And then a strange thing happened. Oscar, as he ran, picked up a stone and carried it in his mouth. Nearer and nearer came the enemy. But now Oscar dropped the stone, and his pursuer, thinking it was something very valuable—something, maybe, to eat—stopped and examined it. His pause was brief, but nevertheless it was long enough for Oscar. On account of it the wise dog reached the farmhouse and was safe.

"The farmer claimed that the dropping of the stone had been a premeditated, well conceived act, and I agree with him. That is why I claim that the bulldog is the most intelligent of all his tribe."

DAISY GORDON'S FOLLY

—OR—

THE WORLD LOST FOR LOVE'S SAKE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY,

Author of "The Crime of Hallow-E'en," "The Flirtations of a Beauty," "Willful Gaynell," "Little Leafy," "Only a Mechanic's Daughter," etc.

would be all over for her if he lost his life.

What to her was the throng about her?

"Oh, God! save Aleck!" that was the cry that rose from her lips to the blue heavens.

A life-boat had been sent out, and more dead than alive Aleck was brought to shore, still clutching the lad in his arms.

Loud and mighty was the shout that greeted him, but Aleck was deaf to their cries of joy and praise; even the agonized voice of Daisy fell upon deadened senses as she knelt beside him, praying him to open his eyes and speak to her.

But he soon rallied, thanks to his youth and stalwart constitution.

Daisy was the first to welcome him as he came down to the hotel parlor.

Why should she avoid him? she told herself with bitter recklessness. Why deny herself the few days of the only comfort she would ever know in her poor young life— surely the angels in heaven would forgive her for being unable to withstand so small a temptation.

Aleck did not know the horrible past— why should she not be happy the few golden hours in his company that she might.

Braving the anger of both Olive and Hetty, she no longer avoided Aleck, and hope began to dawn in his breast. Bright dreams came to him of the future, with Daisy always by his side.

There seemed no obstacle in his path; he had nothing to do but win her love; and that he determined to do, after waiting patiently for three long weeks for a letter from Daisy's father sanctioning it.

In those lovely eyes of hers, he believed he read some faint signs that he would not woo in vain.

His gentle, chivalrous wooing was like a beautiful poem to Daisy —as yet she was not startled into a sense of reality.

"I am going to forget the dark past and be happy for just a few short weeks," that was her constant cry to heaven by night and by day.

For a few pleasant weeks the sun shone over her, the flowers bloomed fair for her; happy birds sang in her ears; the whole world had but one voice for her, and it was full of love.

She did not heed the end of the road, she was blind to the precipice before her, and she would not see that the end was black, bitter ruin and death.

She knew that Aleck loved her — read it in his eyes, she heard it in his words, she knew it by his every action and gesture. They loved each other, and the knowledge had come to her—too late.

She could never tell in after times how this love of theirs was made known to each other, though she carefully reviewed many scenes.

There came a beautiful moonlit night when they stood on the beach together, for the first time quite alone. Olive and Hetty were at a hop, and Mrs. Burnett was seated on the veranda, near enough to see, but too far off to hear the impassioned words that fell from Aleck's lips.

He had taken her white hand in his and was trying to tell her how he loved her.

Oh, how eloquent his words were, they seemed to have burned their way from his heart to his lips.

"You stand beside me white as death, darling," he cried, "as though you were frightened. Tell me my words have not startled you, Daisy. Tell me you love me and will be my little bride."

CHAPTER VIII.

A Terrible Struggle.

Daisy did not answer; the words seemed to die away on her lips.

If he had shot her— stabbed that beautiful white throat of hers, she could not have been more horribly startled; the color died from her face; her whole figure swayed and trembled; she would have fallen to the ground had he not reached out his arm and caught her.

His wife! Oh, heaven! That terrible word— she was the wife of the man who at that moment was in a prison cell, and she only a child!

A low cry of irrepressible anger came from her lips, her head drooped, she buried her face in her hands.

It seemed to her she was back again in the little dimly-lighted stone church, enacting that horrible scene at the alter; then through the dim chaos of her thoughts she heard Aleck's voice.

"Daisy, my little darling, I must have frightened you!" he cried; "but you know— you must have known— how much I wished to ask you this."

As he spoke he drew nearer to her and threw his arm about the little slender figure.

"I am laying my life and my heart at your feet, Daisy," he pleaded. "Raise your eyes to mine, dear, and tell me my great worshipful love is not in vain."

Even in that moment it struck him that her face was pale with anguish; he could not understand the sorrow he saw expressed there.

"Answer me one question, Daisy," he said, earnestly— "answer it honestly and truly: Do you love me — 'Yes' or 'No?' Can you deny that you love me?"

He caught her little, trembling hands in his, holding them close prisoners, and looked down eagerly into the averted face.

No human being could have realized the struggle that was going on in the girl's heart.

Almost involuntarily her lips formed the answer.

"Yes, Heaven help me, I— love you, Aleck!"

He laughed aloud at the timid, piteous, faltering way in which the words were uttered. He attributed it all to her girlish confusion and bashfulness. Ah! it was so sweet to woo and win such a timed, shrinking little bride.

"Listen to me, my beloved," he cried. "You own that you love me, and all true love ends in marriage. I pledge my life to you as I pledge my love."

She drew back with a piteous quivering of the white lips that he could not fail to see.

"I have startled you, dear," he declared. "We will be lovers for a little while— betrothed, you know — and after you are used to the idea, then you will think by degrees how soon you will take me for your husband."

She drew back from him in horror.

"Oh, Aleck, never mention the word 'husband' to me— it is hateful! Oh, if we could but be lovers always!"

"You would like that?" he asked, in wonder.

"Yes," she answered, with a sob.

He could not understand her; other girls, he had always believed, were most anxious to hear their lovers say something of marriage; but, then, Daisy was so very young.

"There is Mrs. Burnett coming, Daisy," he whispered suddenly. "Answer my question before she comes up; are we to be lovers, darling?"

Then followed the most terrible struggles between the good angels and the bad that ever fought for a human heart.

Why not take a few weeks of joy out of her life? Oh, to be loved for a few short, fleeting weeks; they were not much, they would pass all too quickly, then she must send him away.

She would not care to live then — but she would forget that dark future, and live only in the present.

"Are we not to be lovers, darling?" he urged again.

And this time Daisy answered:

"Yes."

Bitter was the jealousy of both Olive and Hetty Gordon when they heard of it.

"I knew that would be the way!" declared Hetty, angrily. "I knew how it was going to turn out on the first evening that Aleck came here. Daisy is wonderfully attractive; why, there is that handsome young fellow, Harry Joscelyn, who sits at the opposite table, desperately in love with her. Even though he has heard of her betrothal to Aleck, he does not seem to despair of winning her. He follows her about like a shadow; Aleck is blind not to notice it."

"There is one thing that you are blind if you have not noticed," said Olive; "and that is, how unhappy Daisy looks; I cannot find out why. Only last night, as I passed through her room, I heard her moaning in her sleep, and her pillow was wet with tears. I cannot understand it."

Poor Daisy had given herself up to the few weeks of happiness she would have before she told Aleck all, and lost him forever.

Oh, it was sweet to be loved so dearly and so truly.

Ah, but for that one act of folly, what a life of peace and happiness and love might have lain before her with him whom she loved.

Oh, if she could but live her life over again, if she could but undo that dark, horrible past.

What had induced her, so young, fair and beautiful, to commit such an act of folly, such a mad act as to wed that handsome stranger, only to rue it while her life lasted.

(To be continued.)

Coughs, Colds and Asthma

AS WELL AS CROUP, BRONCHITIS AND WHOOPING COUGH ARE QUICKLY CURED BY

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

The virtue of this great prescription of Dr. Chase is so well known in Canadian homes that it seems needless to do more than remind you that it has a larger sale and is curing more people than ever before.

Mrs. J. W. Lloyd, Albion Street, Belleville, Ont., states:

"In the beginning of last winter I took a very severe cold, accompanied with a bad cough, and was almost laid up for a time. I tried several remedies, but with indifferent results. On the advice of a friend I got a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found that it relieved the cough at once. By the time I had taken the one bottle my cold was gone, and I can truthfully recommend it as a splendid remedy for coughs and colds."

Mrs. A. A. Vanbuskirk, Robinson Street, Moncton, N.B., and whose husband is carpenter on the I.C.R., states: "For years I have used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for my children whenever they take cold. I used it first with one of my children suffering with a severe form of asthma. It seemed as though the least exposure to cold or dampness would bring on an attack of this disease. I began using this medicine, and must say that I found it most excellent We have never tried anything in the way of a cough medicine that worked so satisfactorily. It seemed to go right to the diseased parts and brought speedy relief."

Do not be satisfied with imitations or substitutes. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase is on every bottle of the genuine. 25 cents a bottle, family size (three times as much) 60 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

A System that Will not keep You waiting

Whether you want Painting, Paper Hanging, Decorating, Graining, or anything in our line, we will not keep you waiting. WE WILL NAME THE DAY, and that very day you will find us at your work, with an excellent staff of workmen—the very best mechanics that can be secured—workmen that we can rely on and that please our customers every time.

OUR WALL PAPER TRADE this year is so far the largest in the history of this house, and there are reasons behind the increased trade, and here they are—

FIRSTLY—Times are good, people have money and know where to spend it to advantage.

SECONDLY—By comparison with other lines our customers find our prices much lower and our styles of Wall Paper much higher than the ordinary.

THIRDLY—We give free two yards of bordering with each double roll of the Wall Paper it matches.

We hang our paper at very reasonable prices and always please our customers whether in papering, painting or anything else.

WARNING TO ORANGE EATERS

DR. RAUX, OF SWITZERLAND, SEES DANGER IN SMALL SEEDS OF FRUIT.

Paris, May 10.—Dr. Raux, of Lausanne, Switzerland, says every orange has a number of very small seeds which are consciously or unconsciously swallowed with the gulp, and the habitual orange eater is therefore in danger of appendicitis. Many doctors disagree with the Swiss physician, though all agree that great care should be taken in eating the fruit of Hesperides.

INVADING COREA.

REPORT THAT HUNDREDS OF RUSSIAN SOLDIERS HAVE CROSSED FRONTIER.

London, May 10.—A despatch to The Times from Tokio, referring to the persistent reports that many Russian soldiers, disguised as surveyors, are entering Wiju, says that the number of surveyors who have entered that place probably does not exceed twenty or thirty. The despatch adds that it is rumored from several sources that Russian troops are massing at Fenghwan-cheng and that many hundreds are crossing the Corean frontier at Tumen and points on the Lower Yalu river. It is believed that these stories are intentionally circulated by Russian agents for the purpose of creating a diversion.

Notes of the News

Rev. J. H. Moorehouse, rector of Christ Church, London, is dead.

It is again reported that the Russian troops have withdrawn from Newchwang.

Ex-President Cleveland, U. S. A., writes that he is not desirous of being a Presidential candidate.

The Dominion Iron & Steel Company may set up a shipbuilding plant at Sydney.

Two small children wandered into a drug store at Sandwich and asked a doctor if they had smallpox. They had.

Reports from Tetuan, Morocco, say that the tribesmen have suffered defeat at the hands of Government troops.

It is reported that General Von Gossler, the German Minister of War, retired because he did not approve of increasing the army.

Two dock laborers from Liverpool, Horace and Jeremiah Egan, fell down the hold of the steamer Monterey at Montreal, and Jeremiah was killed.

Mr. J. V. Teetzel, K.C., of Hamilton, has been appointed to the High Court of Ontario, Common Pleas Division, in place of the late Mr. Justice Lount.

The politics of the paper will be Conservative.

CURES ECZEMA!

Dr. Agnew's Ointment can count its cured patients by the thousands.

But in no one skin disease has it so many almost marvellous cures as in cases of Eczema—this tenacious skin disorder which has baffled many a physician in seeking after a cure. One application puts out the fire, takes away the itching, stinging sensation, and after a few applications the eruptions begin to dry up, diminish, and eventually disappear entirely. The beauty of the treatment is, it leaves no scar or trace of the trouble—but a skin as soft as baby's. Cures piles in four to six nights. 35 cts. 71

Another Fishing Fact.

It was a guest night at the club, and from the gleam in Stretcher's eyes, we who knew him recognized that he was in that humor when a man can tell a fishing story and actually believe it himself.

It came sooner than we anticipated, however, owing to a remark dropped by Fadders during the second course.

"Awfully woolly, this fish, don't you think?"

"It isn't as good as it might be," replied Stretcher. And then, jumping at the opportunity, he continued: "That reminds me of when I was sheep farming in Australia, some years ago—we had some fish once which were woolly with a vengeance."

"Worse than this?" asked Fadders.

"I'll tell you all about it, and then you can judge for yourself," answered Stretcher. "I was farming a few thousand acres of the low lands which were watered by the Burrumudgee River, and was doing remarkably well. In fact, I should have made a fortune there if the infernal river had not taken it into its head to flood just about the lambing season.

"Nearly all my grass-land was covered with water, and for weeks we didn't see anything of our largest flock of sheep, and naturally enough came to the conclusion that they were all destroyed.

"One day the head-shepherd and I went out in a little punt that we'd knocked together, just to have a look round, and see if we could catch some fish—for the hands at the station began to want a change of diet.

"We caught a lot of blue fish and some bass, and then I got a bite that nearly jerked me out of the boat; but John, the shepherd, lent me a hand, and between us we pulled the beggar in—and he was the strangest looking fish that ever I'd seen.

"However, there was a lot of him, and so we made our way back to the station, pleased at having done so well.

"I needn't tell you that out in the back settlements, down below there, we didn't use to go in much for cooking. Our chef at that time was a native called Wagga, to whom we handed over our catch, with instructions to clean, and bake them in the ashes.

"Later on the meal was served up, and, of course, everyone wanted to have a bit of the big fellow, so I served him out accordingly. But before I'd helped half a dozen, I noticed that something was wrong.

"'What's the matter, boys?' I enquired.

"'Well, boss,' answered old Steb, 'I've heard of woolly fish afore, but I'm blamed if I ever come across anything like this. Looke here!' And he held out on his fork a large piece of wool!

"There was no mistaking it; so I set to work to inspect the remainder of our big fish, and I found that just inside the outer layer of scales it had a layer of wool for all the world like a sheep.

"Of course I began to suspect the truth then—and, to cut a long story short, we found that the lambs that had just been born when the river flooded had adjusted themselves to circumstances.

"They'd grown fins instead of legs, gills in place of lungs, and had acquired an outside skin of scales.

"There hadn't been time for the wool to disappear altogether, but no doubt that would have happened in a few generations—only, when the floods went down, of course their environment altered again, and they had to change back once more.

"No, I can't say that they were a success, for, as fish, they were very tallowy; and afterwards, when they resumed their proper shape, there was always a herringy flavor about the mutton."

Some Letters of Recommendation.

The bearer of this has been my husband now for several years, and is only leaving me because we both feel the need of a change. He is willing and obliging, a first-rate man about the house, runs errands and carries bundles cheerfully, never kicks about expenses, and is used to one night out a week. I can cordially recommend him to anyone looking for a good, durable article. Mrs. A. Tonguer.

The young lady who bears this I have loved passionately for some time, and she is leaving me now only because I cannot afford to have her any longer. She is easily loved and responds readily to caresses. She is very fond of flowers and candy, and expects regular supplies. She likes to go to the theater and eat anything on the bill of fare. Anyone who wishes to be passionately loved and broke at the same time will find her up to all the requirements.

Theodore Stuffer.

The bearer of this has been in our employ for more than a year, as conductor, and has given complete satisfaction. During that time he was never known to stop a car at the right corner, or to speak a civil word to a passenger. We are sorry to lose him.

Street Railway Company.

The bearer of this has been my typewriter for two years past, and only leaves me at my wife's urgent request. She has a kind, gentle and loving disposition, and is a most desirable companion. She enjoys the theater very much, and is fond of long drives. I shall miss her.

Sledger Skate.

Always the South Wind.

Of a hotel-keeper in the Scotch Highlands a tourist asked: "Is this a good place, landlord, do you think, for a person affected with a weak chest?"

"Nane better, sir; nane better," was the encouraging reply.

"I have been recommended, you know, by the doctor to settle in a place where the south wind blows. Does it blow much here?"

"Toots, ay!" was the reply; "it's aye the south wind that blaws here."

"Then how do you account for it blowing from the north at the present time?" said the tourist.

"Oh, that's easily accounted for, sir," was the reply. "It's the south wind, a' the same, sir, jist on its road back again."

Her Forte.

Grace—Do you not admit that a woman is the best judge of another woman's character? Gwendolyn—Yes, a good judge; but a better executioner.—"Smart Set."

SUITS FOR MEN

The Entirely Different Sorts.

Not satisfied with equaling in style, fit and excellence of workmanship the made-to-measure garments the best tailors produce, our makers are now fashioning their suits from the same fabrics which have heretofore been exclusive with the Custom Tailors.

Our showing of these suits is very extensive.

They are suits that the average man wants—they give him the style and exclusiveness he seeks without the extra cost of the tailors.

Even the most expert criticism will fail to discover that these suits were not custom made.

The broad showing we make including as it does every size for men of different propostions practically assurs a perfect fit for every man.

But in some cases an exact fit cannot be secured immediately and then we do as the tailors would do at a try on—make the necessary alterations that would secure perfection of fit.

Fancy mixed cashmeres—neat effects in Cheviots—three and four button sack styles including the new straight front.

$6.50 to $15.00

And by the way you can better judge the unassailable quality of these suits if you'll do a little comparing.

COUNCIL OF BELLEVILLE BOARD OF TRADE

SUBMITS A RESOLUTION TO THE GOVERNMENT RE MONTREAL STRIKE.

A meeting of the Council of the Board of Trade was held in the Council Chamber on Saturday night. The object of the meeting was to discuss the present 'longshoremen's strike in Montreal, and the way it is injuriously affecting the interests of Belleville and the surrounding district. At the conclusion of a discussion on the subject, the following resolution was unanimously carried:

Moved by Colonel Ponton, seconded by A. E. Lewis, Esq., and resolved, That the Council of the Board of Trade of Belleville earnestly submit that the issues involved in the present strike at Montreal are so wide and important that they demand immediate and united executive action. The cheese, lumber, and other industries of this district are seriously prejudiced, the trade of Canada is jeopardized, and some settlement should be effected independently of local Montreal interests, whether of unions, or shipowners; and that Parliamentary remedial legislation if necessary, or any other Government action deemed advisable (in the event of failure of every effort of conciliation), would receive the endorsement of the people of Canada in connection with this national crisis. And that this resolution be forwarded by telegram to the Honorable Sir William Mulock, Minister of Labor.

Toronto, May 9.—Prominent speakers and interesting discussions are promised for the opening on Tuesday and Wednesday next, of the Synod of Toronto and Kingston, to be held in Knox Church.

Beginning at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening with a sermon by the retiring Moderator, the Rev. John M. Aull, of Palmerston, the business of the Synod will follow with the election of a new Moderator. Candidates will be proposed at the meeting. Reports on all the church's undertakings will be presented by the convenors of the various committees. An important feature of the Synod will be a conference on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. On the afternoon of the former day from 2.30 to 4.30, Rev. Principal Caven will speak on "The Bible in our Educational System," and a discussion led by Prof. McCurdy and Rev. M. McGregor will follow. From 4.30 to 6 o'clock a paper on: "What is the Best Form of Evening Service?" by Rev. A. H. Drumm, of Belleville, and a discussion on the subject, led by Dr. Milligan of this city, will take place. On Thursday afternoon "The Influence of Recent Biblical Study on Preaching and Life," a paper by Rev. J. McNair, B.D., of Oakville, will be discussed, under the guidance of Dr. Gordon, of Queen's University, and the Rev. J. H. McVicar, B.A., of Fergus.

Mr. Finnegan's Funeral

A large number of citizens were in attendance at the funeral of the late Mr. John Finnegan, which took place yesterday afternoon. Services were held at St. Michael's church, conducted by Rev. Mgr. Farrelly. The bearers were: Messrs. J. S. McGurn, J. Cummins, J. Doyle, F. Dolan, D. Collins and Jas. St. Charles. The interment took place in the R. C. cemetery.

POOR GIRL, PITY HER.

Growing! Yes, into weakness, but not strength. Studies—plenty of them. Tired, of course she is, and weak too. Does not eat enough and digests far less than enough. This condition is so frequent, but how seldom noticed even by fond parents. Give her Ferrozone, then watch her appetite improve, her cheeks and lips grow ruddy, her step elastic, her spirits bouyant. All this simply the result of eating and digesting enough, making blood, and thereby strengthening the nerve and brain power. Ferrozone gives a woman's strength to weak girls. Your daughter or wife needs Ferrozone. Get it to-day.

You will drink dirty water if you roil your neighbor's spring.

PUBLIC BATHS A SANITARY NECESSITY

SOMETHING ABOUT SOME FAMOUS ENGLISH AND AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS.

Montreal Witness: Pliny tells us that for six hundred years Rome needed no medicines but the public baths. Allowing for a certain exaggeration in the statement, modern experience has shown that there is enough truth in it to warrant considerable thought and endeavor. Among the sanitary betterments of our day, not even vaccination itself has done more for public health than the re-discovery of the value of public and personal cleanliness, which is gaining ground on this side of the Atlantic, but is much more to the fore in the United Kingdom and in many cities of continental Europe. One of the most remarkable evidences of the working of this spirit is the rapid multiplication of public baths. The movement had its first official recognition when in 1846 the British Parliament passed an Act to encourage the establishment of baths and wash houses. The Parish of St. James, Westchester, shortly afterwards installed a splendid bath at the cost of a hundred thousand dollars, which since its erection has been used by more than eight million bathers and washers. The Hornsey Road Baths in Islington, London, are the largest and best equipped in Europe, comprising three swimming baths, seventy-four private baths for men, thirty-four for women, besides a complete laundry establishment. The private baths are divided into first and second class, the fee for the former being twelve cents, hot, and six cents, cold, with use of soap and two towels. The number of bathers who patronized the first class private department of the establishment during the year ending March 31, 1901, was 34,479. The charge for the second class baths are four cents, hot, and two cents, cold, and the patronage is proportionally greater, no less than 97,434 persons having taken advantage of the privilege in 1901. The swimming baths are also a popular institution, as may be gathered from the fact that the first class tanks were used by 55,540 men, 7,747 women, 118,540 boys and 39,941 girls in 1901. Each bathing establishment has competent men and women instructors in swimming, and special encouragement is given to schools by furnishing the children with tickets at reduced prices. These parishes furnish types of what is being done in every quarter of London, the British metropolis having no less than thirty-eight baths in active operation, besides several others in course of construction. In them upwards of five million baths were taken during the past year, and additional accommodation is in increasing demand. The country has already spent $6,375,000 upon this municipal enterprise and every one considers the benefit of public health an ample return on the investment. Liverpool is even better equipped than London, having baths in almost endless variety—tub, shower, needle, swimming, vapor, sea water, hot and cold, for both sexes—and these are patronized by about half a million people during the year. Manchester has nine sets of baths, at six of which there are women's swimming baths and two Turkish baths. Birmingham has five splendidly appointed baths, and Glasgow seven, patronized by about 200,000 persons per day, and giving accommodation free to school children at certain hours.

It has been noticed with regret by many Americans that the cities on this side of the Atlantic are as yet far behind their sisters in other lands. London, with a population of 4,536,063 in 1901, has thirty-eight baths, the first built in 1847. New York, with 3,437,202 inhabitants, has only one, built in 1898, and three others under way. The great need of better bathing facilities in the latter city is shown by the Tenement House Commission of 1894, which reported that ninety-six per cent. of the houses which they visited had no bath room and that out of a total east side population of 255,033 only 306 had access to a bath. 'The People's Baths,' in New York, is, however, a thoroughly efficient institution, well managed, scrupulously clean and perfectly lighted and ventilated. The charge for a bath is five cents, entitling the bather to towels, soap and the use of the compartment for twenty minutes, and its popularity is shown by the fact that for the year ending May 30, 1902, it had 1,051,858 patrons, men predominating, but a large proportion being women and children. In 1895 the town of Brookline, Mass., voted an expenditure for baths. For the five years ending Feb. 1, 1902, they were attended by 242,865 bathers. Last year in this town nearly 2,500 swimming lessons were given as part of the regular school instruction, and well conducted swimming races and exhibitions are rapidly increasing its popularity. Boston, situated upon the sea coast, has twenty-one floating and beach baths, but as these are only available three months out of the year several 'all the year round' baths have lately been constructed. The handsome bath on Dover street provided 399,099 baths in 1900 at a cost of $12,607.

Buried This Afternoon

The remains of the late Mrs. E. Bremont, who died at Montreal on Saturday, arrived here this afternoon and were interred in the cemetery. Deceased was an only sister of the late ex-Mayor Tickell, of Belleville. She was an estimable lady and well known in this city.

A FARMER CURED OF RHEUMATISM.

"A man living on a farm near here came in a short time ago completely doubled up with rheumatism. I handed him a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and told him to use it freely and if not satisfied after using it he need not pay a cent for it," says C. P. Rayder, of Pattens Mills, N. Y. "A few days later he walked into the store as straight as a string and handed me a dollar saying, 'give me another bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I want it in the house all the time, for it cured me.'" For sale by all druggists.

Drunk and Disorderly.

For this offence Samuel Peoples, a resident of Thurlow township, was fined $5.

Resisting the Officers.

The two young men, George and Joseph W. Rosebush, who pleaded guilty to being drunk and resisting the police officers in the discharge of their duties, were brought up this morning for sentence. In the case of the younger brother, Joseph, it was shown that he was not the aggressor and, it being his first offence he was allowed to go. George was fined $10, or in default 30 days in jail.

Deseronto Doings

Business on the Bay of Quinte Railway has increased since the new branch line was opened. The new locomotive, which was intended for "spare," has not had many idle moments since it started.

Ex-Mayor Rathbun is reported to be sick.

A meeting will be held on Tuesday evening next in Naylor's theatre for the ratepayers to decide about the advisability of issuing debentures for new cement sidewalks. New walks are a necessity, and cement sidewalks are the cheapest when built on a thirty-year payment plan.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY

NOTES OF SERVICES IN DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

John Street.

The Pastor, Rev. A. H. Drumm, preached at both services yesterday. In the evening the Rev. gentleman's text was from St. Matthew, 5th chapter and 20th verse:

"For I say unto you, that except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the Kingdom of Heaven."

The Tabernacle.

At the Tabernacle yesterday Rev. U. A. Locke, pastor, occupied the pulpit at both services, and gave two instructive addresses. In the morning the choir rendered as an anthem "Thy Will be Done." and in the evening "Sun of My Soul." The solos were taken by Mr. M. C. Gordon.

St. Andrew's Church.

There were good congregations at both services yesterday which were conducted by the Pastor, Rev. M. W. Maclean. In the morning the subject discussed was "Christ in these Last Days Coming to us From the Father." The text was from Hebrews, 1st chapter, 1st and 2nd verses.

Bridge Street.

"Importance of the Sunday School" was the theme discussed by the Pastor, Rev. Dr. Crothers, at yesterday morning's service. The necessity of keeping alive and vigorous this right arm of the church was strongly emphasized, the excellent work done for the church by Bridge street's Sunday school being cited as an illustration. The attendance was large at both services.

Emmanuel R. E. Church.

The Rector, Rev. Mr. Gilliland, preached yesterday morning on "Proportionate Giving." While not depreciating many of the methods used to raise money for church work, the preacher simply and plainly pointed out the fact that if all Christians obeyed the Pauline command, and gave of their substance as God had prospered them, the methods mentioned would not be necessary. The duty of every Christian was first to look after the welfare of his church; that assured, other work should come next.

WILL RIVAL ANTHRACITE

PEAT FUEL LIKELY TO BE USED EXTENSIVELY IN ONTARIO.

E. H. Carter, secretary of the Bureau of Mines, has issued an interesting report upon peat fuel. It costs about $1 per ton to produce peat briquettes in Ontario, the report says, and after allowing a reasonable margin for profit, interest on investment, etc., it can be sold at the place of production for $3 a ton. Putting the value of the peat at two-thirds that of coal, at $3 a ton, its cost would be equivalent to anthracite coal at $4.50, and at $4 per ton to anthracite at $6 per ton.

"Such figures at once bring peat fuel into the economic arena," the report adds, "as it may be doubted whether with the effective control now exercised by the trusts over the production and sale of anthracite, we are likely to see it again drop to a lower retail level than $6 per ton."

Battles to be Honored

Montreal Star;—The question of what actions in South Africa were of sufficient importance to be commemorated on the colours of British regiments has been under consideration for some time, and has proven no easy problem for the British military authorities. A list has been at last drawn up, submitted and approved, and now a circular has been issued to commanding officers in the name of the commander-in-chief, intimating that the honours proposed to be granted are Belmont, Modder River, Paardeberg, Driefontein, Wepper, Johannesberg, Diamond Hill, Belfast, Wittebergen, Defence of Kimberly, Relief of Kimberly, Defence of Mafeking, Relief of Mafeking, Rhodesia, Talana, Elandslaagte, Defence of Ladysmith, Tugela Heights, Relief of Ladysmith and Lang's Nek. Commanding officers have been directed to state which of these honours can be claimed by their units in the event of its being decided to award them.

PAIN IN THE JOINTS

may be muscular or rheumatic. The joints are hard to get at, and it requires a powerful, penetrating remedy to reach the affected parts. Polson's Nerviline exactly meets the requirements, for it is both powerful and penetrating. The pain is expelled as if by magic, for one drop of Nerviline equals in strength five drops of other remedies. You won't often call the doctor if Nerviline is in the house. Price 25 cents.

SIR OLIVER MOWAT'S WILL.

All Manuscripts to Be Destroyed—Details of Property.

Toronto, May 11.—The will of the late Lieutenant-Governor, Sir Oliver Mowat, was filed for probate Saturday. The value of the estate is $105,340.79, $64,476.13 being in personalty and $40,864.66 in realty.

Details of Will.

The details are as follows: Book debts and promissory notes, $9,178.91; mortgages, $6,734; life insurance, $32,575.64; stocks, $7,480; money with broker, $1,181.25; other securities, $3,286.25; money in the hands of agents, $700.34; cash on hand, 879; cash in bank, $257.74; real estate in Ontario, $34,800; in other provinces, $5,950; rent account, but not payable, $114.66.

The real estate consists of Nos. 67 and 69 Front street, Toronto, $27,000; No. 241 West Wellington street, $2,500; Nos. 415 and 417 Manning avenue, $5,000; town lots, Stayner, $300; lots in Portage la Ptairie, $190; and property in Manitoba, $5,760.

The estate is divided among the five children of the deceased. The son Arthur gets three-twelfths, also the daughter Edith. The two married daughters and the son Frederick receive each two-twelfths of the estate.

Executors Named.

The executors and executrix are Frederick Mowat, Arthur and Miss Mowat. Several bequests of a special nature are made, one directing that a family Bible go to the oldest son. A number of paintings, including the portrait presented by the Liberal members of the sixth Parliament of Ontario in 1890, to his eldest son, Frederick. The letter books containing letters received and sent, and all manuscripts are to be destroyed, with the exception of those marked for preservation.

The will is dated Sept. 10, 1902, and witnessed by James Maclennan and Thomas Lynch.

BUBONIC PLAGUE IN PERU.

Callao and Pisco Officially Declared to Be Infected.

Guayaquil, Ecuador, May 11.—Callao and Pisco, Peru, have been officially declared infected with the bubonic plague. The banks and business houses of Guayaquil are subscribing funds for the purpose of cleaning the city. The Cosmos Line steamers Herodot and Sesestris, from southern ports, will be refused admittance here. Ecuadorean troops have been stationed on the Peruvian frontier to stop communication. The Board of Health at Payta, Peru, has closed that port to vessels from Callao.

The Municipal Council and the Board of Health at Quayaquil are in session to discuss steps against the introduction of the plague. The Cosmos Line steamer Tolmes, now in this port, will not be allowed to discharge her cargo, as she brings flour from Pisco.

Peruvian Markets Closed.

Lima, Peru, May 11.—Owing to the discovery of bubonic plague at Callao, the chief port of Peru, six miles from here, the principal markets of Lima have been closed and the shops have been transferred to neighboring squares.

A DASTARDLY PLOT.

Infernal Machine Discovered on Cunard Pier in New York.

New York, May 11.—In a plain pine box about the size of a small trunk an ingenious infernal machine containing one hundred pounds of dynamite was found on the pier of the Cunard Line Saturday afternoon, less than hour before the steamer Umbria sailed for Liverpool. According to Superintendent George E. Murray of the department of combustibles the prompt discovery and the immediate immersion of the box in the water at the end of the pier by the detectives who found it was all that prevented the explosion of the dynamite and the destruction of the pier, with the many persons who had gathered to sail or bid friends and relatives good-bye. The black powder fuse leading to the detonating medium was found to be scorched, showing that it had been ignited. A second's delay in the extinction of the fuse would have meant the explosion of the whole charge.

The find was made as the result of an alleged Mafia letter to Commissioner Greene of the Police Department.

Turret Cape Aground.

Kingston, May 11.—During the last week four vessels have run ashore while making the port of Kingston, and this number was added to Friday night, when Turret Cape, from Fort William to this city, and loaded with 101,000 bushels of grain, had gone ashore near Four Mile Point in the vicinity of the Ducks.

William Beck Was Lost.

Toronto, May 11.—A report reached Toronto Saturday of the death of William Beck, near Port Burwell. Beck was engineer of the tug Snow Storm, which left here last week for Parry Sound. It is supposed the missing man fell overboard on Friday morning about 5 o'clock.

Crushed to Death.

Toronto, May 11.—Fatally crushed between two freight cars, George Mullilieu, car repairer of the G.T.R., was yesterday taken from the repair siding at the foot of John street to the General Hospital, where he died almost immediately on his entrance. Mullilieu, who was a young Englishman, was 25 years of age.

Found Under the Sea.

At the beginning of last year some sponge-fishers, says Mr. Edward Vicars in The Pall Mall Magazine, natives of the Turkish Island of Symi, in the course of their operations near the Island of Anticythera, to the south of Cape Malea, descried at the bottom of the sea, at a depth of some twenty fathoms, a number of objects, which on closer inspection proved to be a mass of bronze and marble statues, which had evidently formed the cargo of some shipwrecked vessel. Stimulated probably more by the prospect of enriching themselves than by the art-collector's enthusiasm, the fishermen hastened with this strange intelligence to Athens. Realizing the significance of the news, the Greek Government at once despatched to the spot two ships of war, with whose assistance and under whose superintendence the divers made a systematic search for the treasure. In a short time they succeeded in bringing to the surface a quantity of objects, which were forthwith transported to Athens. The gem of the collection was the figure of a youth, rather more than life-size, of singular beauty and the finest Greek workmanship. This exquisite bronze may, without hesitaion, be assigned to the age of Praxiteles, to whose lovely Hermes found at Olympia in 1877, and now in the museum there, the head bears a certain resemblance. Indeed, it is not too much to say that at last the Hermes of Olympia has a formidable rival to his claim to be the most beautiful statue in the world.

Mr. Vicars describes the process of restoration. The head had escaped injury, but the rest of the statue was in fragments. The work was done by M. Andre of Paris, for 20,000 francs (£800). He first constructed a sort of skeleton, on which he built up the statue, piece by piece, beginning with the lower extremities. Whenever two fragments required to be fastened together the edges were joined by very powerful cement, and the pieces riveted on to a framework of copper bands, which supported and braced them from inside. When each of the fragments had been thus securely pieced together, each in its proper place, the missing parts had to be restored. When the figure had been completely rebuilt M. Andre proceeded to cover the rivet-heads with a kind of putty, and then treated the whole surface with a bronze-colored preparation, so as to make it of uniform hue and consistency. The strong acids in which the fragments had been immersed for many weeks, for the purpose of removing the incrustations which so thickly coated them, had taken away all appearance of bronze from the metal, and left it of a dull black. It was accordingly found necessary to restore the original color by artificial means; and, though it may not be altogether pleasant, when gazing at this exquisite figure, to reflect that the fine bronze hue is the result of a thick layer of paste, which, moreover, conceals rivets and seams and joints, it must be remembered that without these aids it would not have been possible to restore the statue at all. The statue is supposed to represent Paris holding out the Apple of Discord.

THE LUMBER PILES MUST GO

Vigor of Ottawa's Citizens Causes Look Into the Future.

Many Acres of Lumber Piles Held to Be a Perpetual Menace, and They Demand Their Removal Beyond the City Limits—Council and the Question of Relief—Latter to Be Confined to the City Itself.

Ottawa, May 12.—Now that the fire is over, Ottawa is counting the cost, figuring on relief and bent on getting lumber piles outside the city limits. The cost is 200 buildings burned, 850 persons homeless, 14,000,000 feet of lumber burned, $600,000 gone up in smoke, insurance companies hit to the extent of $350,000, to aid, the city will give $50 to every family that lost its household goods or property, and will ask for public subscriptions to a relief fund, and no outside aid will be requested.

Out With the Lumber.

The City Council last night was well attended by Aldermen and citizens. The battle cry was, "Booth must get his lumber piles outside the city limits." One Alderman moved that J. F. Booth be given thirty days in which to get his lumber pile on Ottawa street outside the city limits. Twenty of the ratepayers had waited on him, and demanded immediate action.

A mass meeting will be held on Friday night to discuss the whole question. The people are in earnest, and it is evident that Mr. Booth and other lumbermen, whose lumber covers in all 123 acres of the city, have been given notice to quit. But there will be difficulty in getting them to move out.

The public sentiment expressed on the street is that Ottawa does not desire the story to go out that the fire has been a disastrous one. The citizens are anxious to minimize the loss. If the truth was told, it might be stated that Ottawa was "fire crazy."

Charged With Being Drunk.

In the Police Court yesterday morning, with Ald. Rosenthal presiding as Magistrate, White was charged with being "drunk on the public street," and with a show of resentment he pleaded not guilty. His voice expressed indignation. Chief Powell asked for a remand for a week and got it. The charge of drunkenness is only a blind—a necessary evil of the workings of the police system. Within a week the police hope to have discovered sufficient evidence to prove White guilty of setting the first fire, and of being in a conspiracy that led to the second.

List of Company Losses.

The agents of the various insurance companies gave out the following statement of the losses last night: The Home Insurance Company, $5,000; Law, Union and Crown, $7,000; Connecticut, $8,000; Manchester, $5,000; Anglo-American, $37,000; Union, $10,000; Guardian, $35,000; London Assurance, $27,000; Ottawa, $35,000; London and Lancashire, $10,000; Queen's, $15,000; British American, $12,000; Norwich Union, $9,000; Phoenix, Brooklyn, $6,000; Royal $10,000; Sun, $11,000; National, $600; Atlas, $30,000; Perth Mutual, $6,000; Phoenix, London, $1,000; Northern, $2,200; Etna Insurance Company, $11,000; Hartford, $11,000; Scottish Union, $7,500; Northern, $8,900; Queen City, $1,600; Fire Insurance Exchange, $2,000; total, $312,200.

This list will be augmented, but not to any great extent. A conservative estimate is that the insurance companies lost $350,000 by the fire.

Measures For Relief.

The city council got together early to-day to discuss measures of immediate relief. They resolved: "That $50 be granted to each family, spinster, widow, whose property was destroyed in yesterday's conflagration, and that the amount be final so far as this Council is concerned." It was decided that it was not necessary to appeal for aid to outside cities. Application will be made to the Ontario Legislature for power to expend $10,000 in relief.

Newspapers and banks have been asked to open subscription lists for ten days.

Misfortunes of the Bell Co.

Ottawa, May 12.—The Bell Telephone Co. had many of its poles burnt in the fire. It has asked the city to allow it to replace these poles. Last night Alderman Payment fathered a resolution before the Council, that carried, authorizing the Council to give the Bell Telephone Company no power to erect new poles until better terms were entered into between the city and the Bell Company.

TRIBUTE TO DEAD JURIST.

Service at the Ottawa Residence of Late Hon. David Mills.

Ottawa, May 12.—The death of Mr. Justice Mills was recalled three times yesterday. In the morning, Chief Justice Taschereau made an address, which in its fine and discriminating praise and felicitous language reminded the listeners of the best speeches of Laurier. Its chief interest of course lay in its appreciation of Mills as a judge. A more conscientious and upright judge the country never had, he said.

Service at the Residence.

Service was conducted at the house at 8 o'clock last evening, by Rev. A. A. Cameron, after which the body was conveyed to the Union Station, for transportation to Ridgetown. The Government car "Montreal," was placed at the service of Mrs. Mills for the purpose. At Toronto the Grand Trunk Railway took charge of the body, and from London it was transported on the Michigan Central to Ridgetown. From there the final journey to the cemetery will be made by road on Wednesday morning. Rev. Mr. Walker will conduct the burial service at the grave side. A floral wreath from the judges of the Supreme Court stood at the head of the coffin, and at the foot reposed a floral anchor, sent by the Press Gallery.

Program Was Not Executed.

In the House of Commons it was generally expected that Laurier and Borden would make addresses of some length, but at some point the arrangements miscarried. It was apparently intended that routine business should be carried on until about half an hour before 6 o'clock, but when 6 o'clock came, there was only time for the briefest possible reference to the man who had played so large a part in public affairs for a third of a century.

At 8 o'clock last night there was a gathering at the house on Concession street. The choir of the church sang one of Mr. Mills' favorite hymns, "I am Kneeling at the Threshold." Mr. Cameron, in his address, referred to Mr. Mills' conscientious discharge of duty, to his sincere Christianity and his careful study of the Scriptures.

The pall-bearers were: Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Chief Justice Taschereau, Hon. William Paterson, Charles Fitzpatrick, Mr. Justice Sedgwick and Sheriff Sweetland.

Nearly all the Ministers were present, with Speaker Power of the Senate and Speaker Brodeur of the Commons. After the service, the coffin was conveyed to train for the West.

Condolence From Many.

Many messages were received yesterday.

Miss Mills, daughter of the deceased judge, was on her way to Mexico, but was intercepted at Chicago by a telegram announcing her father's death. She arrived here yesterday. The other children are Mr. David Mills, Port Arthur; Mr. Blake Mills, barrister, Ridgetown; Mrs. Fraser of Mapimi, Mexico, and Mrs. Watts of Chihuahua, Mexico.

Fully 500 were present at the funeral, including a large representation of the members of the House of Commons, Senate, Supreme Court judges, and officials, leading members and officials of the First Baptist Church, of which deceased was a member, and many other prominent citizens of Ottawa, and the members of the press gallery.

AUSTRALIA'S RAILWAY STRIKE.

Causing Much Inconvenience—Court Sittings Postponed.

Melbourne, Victoria, May 12.—The train service, owing to the railroad strike, is most limited, and all business is hampered. The sittings of the Country and Circuit Courts have been postponed, and the principal timber yards are closed.

The Montreal Strike Over.

Montreal, May 12.—The big strike is over, and by to-day probably 4,000 men will be at work loading and unloading the 30 steamers now at the wharves. The credit for settling the strike is given to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, Hon. J. Israel Tarte, Mr. Robert Bickerdike, M.P.

London Cigar Makers Strike.

London, Ont., May 12.—Yesterday morning the local Cigar Makers' Union went out on strike, that is, those members of it who are employed in factories where the employers refused to pay the scale of prices included in the fixed scale which has been introduced. Over 100 hands and five factories are affected.

1,000 Bridge Men Strike.

Chicago, May 12.—One thousand men employed at the Lessig Bridge and Iron Works, a branch of the American Bridge Company, struck yesterday for recognition of the union. Two hundred electrical workers in eight concerns also struck for increased wages.

IMPERIOUS CHINA.

No Further Discussion With American Commissioners on Article 12.

Shanghai, May 12.—The Chinese treaty revision commissioners have received from the Chinese Foreign Office instructions to decline further discussion with the American commission on article 12, of the proposed new treaty, which refers to the opening of points in Manchuria to foreign trade.

WHERE LIBERAL AXE FALLS

Redistribution Schedule as Submitted by That Party.

There Is a Total of 86 Members For Ontario, viz.: 26 Counties Returning One Member Each, 20 Counties Returning Two Each, Five Counties Returning Three Each, and Toronto Returning Five Members.

Ottawa, May 12.—At the meeting of the Redistribution Committee yesterday morning the Liberal members presented the following schedule as their proposed redistribution of the Province of Ontario:

The boundaries of the territorial division mentioned in this scheme are those set forth in chapter 3 of the revised statutes of Ontario, 1897.

One member:—Calgary, Prescott, Stormont, Dundas, Carleton (except Ottawa), Grenville, Frontenac, Kingston, Lennox and Addington, Prince Edward, Durham, Victoria, Peel, Halton, Dufferin, Wentworth (except Hamilton), Norfolk, Haldimand, Lincoln, Welland, London, Nipissing, Haliburton and Muskoka, Parry Sound, Thunder Bay.

Two members: Ottawa, Lanark, Leeds, Renfrew, Hastings, Northumberland, Peterboro, Ontario, Wellington, Bruce, Perth, Waterloo, Hamilton, Brant, Oxford, Elgin, Lambton, Kent, Essex, Algoma.

Three members: Simcoe, York, Grey, Huron, Middlesex (except London).

Toronto Gets Five Members.

Toronto is to have five members, but no statement has been made as to whether this is Toronto as constituted for municipal purposes with a population of 208,040, or Toronto as constituted for electorate purposes with a population of 156,098. Two additional members are given to New Ontario, and one to Toronto under the proposed arrangement. This involves a loss of nine seats to the remainder of the province, i.e., six seats lost under census and three additional seats given to New Ontario and Toronto.

The constituencies wiped out are: Lennox, Bothwell, Norfolk, Middlesex, Bruce, Durham, Victoria, Leeds, Cardwell, Brockville, North Wellington, Hastings; 26 counties returning one each, 26; 20 counties returning two each, 40; 5 counties returning three each, 15; Toronto returning five; total 86.

Other Proposals Friday.

No proposal as to the division of the 20 counties and the five counties above referred to have been submitted to the committee, but they will be on Friday.

The Conservative members asked a few questions about the schedule, but beyond that did not act. They are thinking it over. It is noised about the corridors that the Liberals propose to unite Kings and Albert in New Brunswick, Richmond and Victoria in Nova Scotia, besides dropping one member for Picton, and follow county boundaries in P. E. I., giving one member to King's, one to Prince and two to Queen's.

Manitoba and the West will likely be discussed at the next meeting of the committee.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

After a Short Session the House Adjourned Out of Respect to the Late Mr. Justice Mills.

Ottawa, May 12.—The House sat only until 6 o'clock yesterday, adjourning out of respect to the memory of Justice Mills, and to allow members to attend his funeral.

Good progress was made with general business on the order paper: Sir Wilfrid, replying to Mr. Morin, said that, before accepting the Ross rifle, the Government submitted it to experts.

Mr. Grant moved for the papers relating to lowering or regulating of the waters of Lake Simcoe or Lake Couchiching, explaining that lands in Townships of Mara, Rama and Morrison were damaged by floods, occasioned by overflow from these lakes. Col. Hughes did not want any measure for lowering the lakes, which would interfere with the Trent Valley Canal.

Mr. Sutherland thought the matter was under Provincial control, but would enquire into it carefully.

Mr. Brock's bill for the prevention of cruelty to animals was held over while the promoter consults with the Department of Justice.

Indemnity For Fire Victims.

Mr. Demers moved the second reading of the bill to indemnify those who suffer damage by fire from railways. This bill arises out of the case of Roy v. C.P.R. Roy had his property destroyed by fire kindled by sparks from a C.P.R. engine. He sued for damages, and was successful in all the Quebec courts, but was defeated on appeal to the Privy Council. The civil law of Quebec is supposed to be specially favorable to claimants of this kind, and Mr. Demers wants the law applied to the whole Dominion, so that railways would be liable for damages in all cases.

The Minister of Justice doubted whether the civil law of Quebec was so sweeping, but suggested that the matter be referred to the Railway Committee, which was done.

Laborers Suffer From Prosperity.

Mr. Puttee, in moving the second reading of a bill to extend the principle of conciliation of labor troubles, expressed the opinion that workingmen were in many cases actual sufferers from prosperity of the country, as prices of living increased faster than wages, and workmen were often obliged to strike in order to rise to their former level of purchasing power.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier moved the adjournment of the House out of respect to Mr. Justice Mills, and Mr. Borden seconded the motion. No speeches were made, but both leaders referred briefly to the prominent and honorable position occupied by Mr. Mills.

FOR THE CHILDREN.

When children are weak, sickly, don't eat or sleep well, Angier's Petroleum Emulsion after meals and at bedtime makes them strong, healthy and robust. Made of Petroleum, rendered tasteless and odorless, and combined with glycerine and hypophosphites. Pleasant to take, and agrees with the stomach.

DOWN ON VOTING MACHINES

Opposition Leader Whitney Is Against Vote Recorders—Premier Ross Says Members Are More Democratic Now.

Toronto, May 12.—The Legislature met at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

A number of private bills were read a first time, and Mr. Gross introduced a bill respecting volunteer fire companies and fire insurance companies.

Read a Second Time.

These bills were read a second time: To amend the Assessment Act, Mr. Preston (Brant); to amend the act passed, entitled "an Act to amend the Statute Law (Whitney); to amend the Municipal Act (St. John).

Voting by Machinery.

Mr. Pettypiece moved the second reading of his bill to provide for voting by machinery.

Mr. Whitney took general objecting to the machine style of voting. He said that difficulty would be met with in the event of voting having to be suspended through a breakdown of the machine, but had no objection to the system being given a trial, if the vote was taken in the regular way at the same time.

The bill was read a second time and sent to the committee.

More Democratic Now.

Mr. Taylor (North Middlesex) moved the second reading of his bill to amend the municipal act. Mr. Taylor's bill aims to give township councils the option of returning to the old style of constituting the County Councils with the reeves of the various municipalities, a majority of the township councils being in a position to effect the change. An important clause provides that in expenditures of $5,000 and over the voting power of the reeves shall be gauged by the assessment of the various municipalities. Mr. Taylor strongly urged the bill, and expressed the opinion that the present system was not satisfactory.

A number of members on both sides of the House expressed their views of the measure, and in reply to Mr. Whitney, Premier Ross said it was not a Government bill, and, with a smile, he said that "We are so democratic now that we allow the members to have their own opinions." The Premier also said it would be safe to endorse the bill and let it go to a committee.

Mr. Whitney said the bill, establishing the present system six years ago, had not a single defender outside the House.

The bill was read a second time and sent to a committee.

Questions by Members.

Replying to Dr. Nesbitt, Premier Ross said the departments pay all revenue into the Treasury Department, which deposits funds in the following banks: Commerce, Ontario, Toronto, Standard, Sovereign, Imperial, Traders', Metropolitan, Hamilton, Union, Royal and Ottawa. Three per cent. is allowed on special deposits, but no interest is allowed on current accounts.

Mr. Dryden, replying to Mr. Carnegie, said the duties of the Advisory Board of the Agriculture College were to advise and assist the Minister in the management of the college and farm. The board held two meetings within the last five years, and the remuneration was $4 a day and traveling expenses.

The Power Company.

Mr. Foy secured an order for a return of copies of correspondence relating to an agreement between the Government and the Toronto and Niagara Power Company since Jan. 1, 1902.

The House went into Committee on Mr. Pattullo's bill to incorporate the Embro Railway Company, and Mr. Taylor's bill respecting the London, Parkhill and Grand Bend Electric Railway.

A Switchman's Death.

Windsor, May 12.—Milton Dunn, a Grand Trunk switchman, was run over in the company's yards here at 5 o'clock yesterday morning and terribly mangled. The unfortunate fellow died at 8 o'clock at the Hotel Dieu.

Turkish Troops Murder Christians.

Constantinople, May 12.—Consular despatches received here from Monastir, European Turkey, say the Mussulmans and Turkish troops are murdering Christians in the suburbs of the Christian quarter of the town.

Slater Shoe Advertising

Wearer's Satisfaction

Short talks by the Slater Shoe ad. man, No. 4.

—Because the "Slater Shoe" is widely advertised;

'because a hundred thousand dollars has been spent in making it known,

'the makers could not afford to risk the entire loss of this expensive reputation by turning out shoes which do not in every particular back up the makers' advertised claims.

So that the wearer secures through "Slater Shoe" advertising assurance that the shoe is not skimped in the hidden parts, that wear-worthy materials are used throughout, that the shoe must give entire satisfaction,

'because an advertised shoe which does not satisfy, is subject to ten times as much criticism as a shoe which merely wears but does not make distinctive claims of superiority, such as those made for the "Slater Shoe."

And this large advertising expenditure, besides forcing the makers to maintain the quality of the "Slater Shoe," reduces selling cost, increases factory out-put—permits specializing, with all that means in economy of making.

The Slater Shoe

Made in Canada 40 years. Goodyear welted. $3.50 and $5.00—for men and women.

The lad Duesberry, who is wanted by the police on a charge of stealing a bicycle, the property of Joseph Clement, of Canifton, has left the city, and no trace of him can be found.

A New Election

Mr. Wm. Douglas, the Warden of the County, has issued his warrant for the election of a County Councillor to fill the unexpired term of the late Mr. Richard Porter, who was a representative from No. 4 division. It is expected that the election will be held before the Council meets next month. In all probability there will be a contest.

BOYS' SHIRT WAISTS.

The Oak Hall are usually able to carry out everything advertised, but we have failed in boys' shirt waists. We fully expected that big bargain lot at the latest this (Tuesday) morning, but they did not arrive. The only excuse we have to offer is the big strike in Montreal. Surely they will be here to-morrow. It will pay you to wait, however.

Daily Intelligencer.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The Ottawa Citizen has a most excellent and graphic account of the big Ottawa fire, which, it seems, started in the lumber piles near the C.A.R. tracks. The Ottawaites can now thank the lumber piles for two big fires. There was an agitation, after the great fire of 1900, to have the piling of lumber prohibited within the city limits, but it came to naught. The Capital must, indeed, be wedded to its lumber pile idols if the civic foot is not now put down hard and the lumbermen ordered to move out and stay out.

The letter from ex-Mayor Johnson in another column, re Post Office expenditures, shows convincingly that this city is not being fairly treated. That is the long and the short of the matter. It is not a question of politics at all. Other places mentioned have expended upon their Post offices, in order to secure efficiency, an average of 55 per cent. of their revenue. Belleville receives only 25 per cent. of its revenue. There you are, as plain as a pikestaff. Now why cannot Belleville's citizens, Liberals and Conservatives alike, unite in requesting that the Government grant this city fair play? Surely that is not an extraordinary thing to ask.

According to a New York yellow, the next great strike will be in London, where His Majesty King Edward will demand more salary. Isn't it wonderful, the things those Yankee newspaper men find out?

Two Agonizing Spring Diseases Quickly Cured by

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

THE MARVELLOUS POWER OF THE COMPOUND ASTONISHES ALL WHO USE IT.

In removing such diseases as rheumatism and neuralgia from the system in spring time, Paine's Celery Compound commences its good work by purifying the blood, regulating the nervous system and creating a natural appetite. Rheumatism and neuralgia are common results of sluggish and poisoned blood, and unhealthy action of the kidneys and liver. Pathologists agree that the morbid principle in the blood is uric acid, which acts upon the joints and muscles, causing pain and suffering. Neuralgia is inflammation or other morbid condition of some portion of the nervous system. Neither disease remains long in the system when the sufferer uses Paine's Celery Compound. If the reader of this is suffering the torments of either disease, let him simply try one bottle of Paine's Celery Compound and carefully note the results. Mr. J. Y. Hemming, London, Ont., says:

"I suffered for years with inflammatory rheumatism, which baffled the skill of medical men. I had every form of treatment known to specialists, and visited mineral springs, but obtained only temporary relief. Almost giving up in despair, I was asked to try Paine's Celery Compound, and I thank God such a blessing was brought to my notice. The use of three bottles of the great remedy gave me relief from pain and I slept better. Ten bottles worked for me a complete cure. I have no hesitation in recommending Paine's Celery Compound to all rheumatic sufferers, and it cures surely and permanently."

Mrs. P. N. Mather, Vancouver, B. C., a cured woman says:—

"Neuralgia in the head and face made life a misery for me for five years. The doctors said I would never get rid of it, I had heard so much about Paine's Celery Compound that I determined to give it a trial. After the use of four bottles I am a cured woman and have not been troubled with the disease for five months. I owe my present good health, comfort and happiness to Paine's Celery Compound, and advise all neuralgic victims to use it. It is the best medicine in the world."

POOR GIRL, PITY HER.

Growing! Yes, into weakness, but not strength. Studies—plenty of them. Tired, of course she is, and weak too. Does not eat enough and digests far less than enough. This condition is so frequent, but how seldom noticed even by fond parents. Give her Ferrozone, then watch her appetite improve, her cheeks and lips grow ruddy, her step elastic, her spirits bouyant. All this simply the result of eating and digesting enough, making blood, and thereby strengthening the nerve and brain power. Ferrozone gives a woman's strength to weak girls. Your daughter or wife needs Ferrozone. Get it to-day.

Edison's Prophecy.

Mr. Edison's latest theory is that by and by we shall be able to do without sleep altogether, as by the more perfect processes of electric lighting it will be difficult to tell night from day, and we shall forget when bedtime comes round. The man of the future is evidently going to live pretty rapidly. It was only the other day that we were told that square meals would be a thing of the past in the good time that's coming. Instead of laboriously working your way through seven or eight courses, all you'll have to do will be to go to the nearest chemist and buy a few pills with the nourishment of a city dinner concentrated into each. In the face of these conditions one feels disposed to urge the races unborn to stay where they are for their own sakes.

SAYS THEY'RE HEAVEN-BORN

"And after all, old things are best."

IT is Easter Eve. And she sinks back wearily with a sigh of satisfaction in her low chair in front of a bright little fire, for although the days nearly all through Lent have been glorious and bright with an early promise of spring, the evenings are still chill enough to make a fire very comfortable if somewhat of a luxury.

She has left them all early and retired to her own room, for it has been a busy day, but now the last charity has been attended to, Easter letters sent, and the last plant of sweet spring flowers. She smiles as she thinks of its destination—a crusty old bachelor that affects to hold all such pretty things in the same contempt as he does women—but she knows the grim old face will break into its rare and grim old smile at the pretty Easter greeting on her part, for isn't she a prime favorite of his? He has even been heard to remark, or rather growl, that "she isn't quite such a fool as the rest of the women he knows"—warm praise from him.

So now, in her soft yellow silk kimono, she leans back contentedly among her cushions, and lazily sends up dainty little rings of fragrant smoke from her cigarette. She remembers with a wistful smile how he "hated to see women smoke," and how vexed he was with her once for wanting to try one of his, and how, just to tease him, she had pretended to light it, notwithstanding his fearful threat of "not kissing her for a week" if she did, and of how gently, very gently, he had taken it away from her.

It wasn't of her late husband that she was thinking. Ah! no, how could it be? For he, good soul, had never objected in the least to her cigarettes, or, in fact, to anything else she did; but, au contraire, in his easygoing, middle-aged way, thought everything his pretty young wife did was as perfect as he thought she was herself, and indulged her in every whim and spoiled her to his heart's content (if not altogether to hers), and then three years ago comfortably and quietly died, adoring her to the last and leaving her all he had to leave—a very goodly sum.

She often wishes her life was fuller and held more interest. She looks on the children of her friends with longing, the children that seek her so eagerly in their unfailing child intuition, at once recognizing the mother-heart and the welcome that surely and ever awaits them. She had, within the last three years, seriously thought of adopting a little child for her very own, but her friends had smiled knowingly and advised her to wait a while—that there was lots of time. Amongst themselves they had called it an absurd whim—of course such a sweet woman would be sure to marry again. And in the meantime she was lonely to a heart-sore degree, and missed her kind husband's care sadly.

But it isn't of him she is thinking now. No, no! Her thoughts are back in the past, and she sees another Easter Eve, ten years ago. And she is alone, as here, in her own room with her thoughts, but what a different room, what different thoughts, and what a different woman!—for she was but a slip of a girl then—not twenty! It is her little room in her old childhood's home, and the hour is late. But late as it is, she still has some sewing to do—a few last stitches in the alterations she had been making to freshen up her last year's spring frock that had to serve again this year. (New dresses were rare then.) She was tired but happy, thinking of the joyous day just passed and the glad morrow to come. She had been busy a good part of the day in her home (for she had many humble household duties in those days of happy poverty), but had found time for her walk with him, and this evening has sent him home earlier than usual, and is smiling tenderly as she sews, thinking of his parting words. He had made her promise not to go to too many services before the evening one he was coming to take her to, but to lie down and rest in the afternoon, saying, "You look tired, sweetheart; you must take care of yourself for my sake, dearest," and she had promised. And now, the last stitch put in, she had taken up her devotional book and turned her thoughts to the early service of the morrow, and with a last look at his flowers she had curled herself up in her little white bed and slept as sweetly as an infant until early morning church bells called her to arise.

And oh! what an Easter it had been! In the evening he had come. She sees him now through all these years, her handsome boy lover. She had run to meet him, with his flowers pinned at her breast—and the one for his coat in her hand! And then that delightful walk to church—his church, where his sweet tenor voice swelled the choir. She had felt timid and shy. His mother had sent an invitation for her to sit with them in the big family pew, and she felt like clinging to him when he left her there to go to his place in the choir. But it was soon over, and she hears again his whispered "Was it so very dreadful, darling?" in the church porch as he takes her hand and holds it closely in one of his, and then, then, the walk home again at the close of that happy, happy Easter day!

The widow starts up from her dream of the past as her maid brings in a box of flowers that have just been left. The fire is low. She pushes back the pretty auburn hair from her brow, the pretty hair that goes so well with the clear hazel eyes that turn with such languid interest to the box of flowers her maid is unwrapping. But at sight of what lies within, she jumps up with a flush in her cheeks and holds out her hands for them. There is no card among the violets, and the roses, crimson, yellow, pink and white. The maid smiles and says, "All different colors, madame; generally they are all one kind."

"Yes, oh! yes, but I like them so much better this way. Are you sure, Elise, there is no card?"

And Elise wonders, as madame has been hitherto so indifferent to all such floral offerings.

Elise is gone. She is again alone. It can't be, of course. How absurd! It can't be—yet what strange chance has sent her just such another box as his were that Easter so long ago, that Easter that stands out from all other Easters? She lingers over them hungrily, out at last—for she arises early to-morrow morning — she tries to turn her thoughts to heaven and to sleep.

In the chill of the early morning, with the faintest suspicion of silken rustle, a quietly garbed and graceful little figure steals softly down the wide stairs and lets herself out of the big doors into the cool street that is already astir with early communicants hurrying north, south, east and west to their different churches, called there by joyous bells and silvery chimes that in their very sound speak of the Christ that is risen.

The pretty face under the pretty hat is pale with the devout, Madonna look it wears at times, wrapt in her devotions and sweet penitence. She walks swiftly along, not noticing the tall figure that has been sauntering up and down and watching the house where she lives from across the street.

"At last!" he murmurs as she appears, and then he follows along the same path that she has taken. Well he knows it will lead to the church that they have so often gone to in the long ago, that now, in the light of her presence, seems like yesterday—the intervening years all swept away like mist before the warm rays of the sun.

Outside the church he continues his vigil, walking up and down even more impatiently than before. And now at last she comes forth from the subdued, stained-glass gloom of the church into the brightness of the day. And there she finds him waiting for her, and it seems so natural, so as it should be, that after the first little cry and start she moves on quietly to meet him with outstretched hands, and with Easter greeting on her lips and years of greeting in her eyes.

She asks him if he has been to church. "Yes," he says, "or rather he feels as if he had." And she smiles at the answer—so like him. He tells her presently how he only got back last night from foreign lands, and asks her if she will take him to the other services to-day, and adds that he hopes to be able to persuade her to come with him to one to-morrow. At which she blushes deliciously, and then she softly thanks him for his flowers.

Interesting Items.

After several unsuccessful attempts and three years' labor, the unparalleled feat of cutting a ring out of a single diamond has been accomplished by the patience and skill of Mr. Antoine, one of the best known lapidaries of Antwerp. The ring is about three-quarters of an inch in diameter.

A case of self-sacrifice on the part of a St. Bernard dog occurred recently in St. Paul, Minn. He saved the life of his master's little girl, at the cost of his own. The child had wandered on the street railway tracks, and did not see the electric car which was approaching at a high rate of speed. The dog did, and sprang forward, seized the child's frock between his teeth and dragged her from destruction, but he sacrificed himself. The car struck the great creature, and his neck was broken.

A German inventor has made a hundred mile journey with water shoes on the surface of the River Danube. The shoes are cylindrical in shape, and are made of aluminium to give them extreme lightness. They are several feet long, and are propelled by a treading movement, which causes four oar-shaped wings to revolve. The inventor claims that he can travel on water three times as fast as he can walk on land, and that locomotion is as safe on rough water as on smooth. He hopes to have the shoes made a part of every well-regulated life-saving station.

Farmers and newspaper men are very likely to become joint beneficiaries of a great scheme of co-operation in making the most of the corn crop. Not of the grain merely, but of the whole plant, stalk, leaves, pith, tassels, husks, cobs and kernels. After a long course of experimentation, carried on at Kankakee, Ill., under the encouragement of the national Agricultural Department, it is found that high-grade paper can be profitably manufactured, in different varieties, from various parts of the plant. One kind is made from the hard shell of the stalk, another from the pith and a third from the husk.

The other night Second Warden E. A. McPherson climbed the penitentiary wall at Salem, Ore., to test the vigilance of guards. McPherson's feat was performed at the risk of his life, for had he been discovered, he would probably have been instantly shot. He placed a ladder against the exterior of the wall, climbed up, lowered his ladder into the jail yard and descended. He went through the prison shops, and as a final touch carried away the coat and hat of one of the guards. It was from this jail that the famous Tracy escaped last summer, and it is supposed that the rifle with which he fought his way out was taken into the prison over the yard fence.

THEY DRIVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

HAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickerson, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Signed, JEAN VALCOURT,
Wotton, P.Q. General Merchant

A woman never knows where the match box is.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

Use the safe, pleasant, and effectual worm killer, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator; nothing equals it. Procure a bottle and take it home.

The average watch represents but 12 hours of human labor.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

If thy friend is honey, do not lick him up altogether.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

Attend no auction if thou hast no money.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes; "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

Many a man's self-conceit is due to his ignorance.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Over 250,000 copies of Charles Dickens' novels are sold annually.

Do not despair of curing your sick headache when you can so easily obtain Carter's Little Liver Pills. They will effect a prompt and permanent cure. Their action is mild and natural.

TIMELY TOPICS

Indignation was freely expressed on all sides last night when it became known that the License Commissioners had at last screwed up their courage to the sticking point and handed out the list of licenses granted for the ensuing year, the same showing that one of the best-appointed hotels of the city had been refused a license, while places which can lay little or no claim to hotel accommodation have secured licenses without difficulty. The place which has been cut off, namely, the City Hotel, has excellent yard and stabling and has but recently been refitted at considerable expense. If all the hotels were equal as regards accommodation, etc., there could, of course, be no complaint. Owing to the decreased population shown at the last census one of the licenses had to be cut off, but what is causing people to talk is the fact that a well-kept, well-appointed hotel has been turned down, while other places which, it is alleged, make no pretence at carrying out the requirements of the law, have got their licenses without difficulty, owing, it is also freely alleged, to the fact that the owners of the places in question have a large-sized political pull. The situation, as viewed by the majority of the people in this city, is a disgrace to the community.

HE KNEW THE SYMPTOMS.

(Judge.)

The man comes home about half an hour after the firemen have been summoned to his residence. The fire is out, but the front of the house is decked with broken furniture, rumpled carpets, disarranged bedding, pieces of cracked bric-a-brac, and smashed pictures. Surveying the scene for a moment, he goes into the house, meeting his wife in the hallway. "I thought you weren't going to clean house until next week," he comments.

Sour Stomach —Bad Breath.

The body depends on the bowels to carry off all waste and poisonous matters from the system—it is Nature's drainage. If the bowels don't perform their functions properly and become clogged up, the system gradually absorbs this poison. It is this which causes sick headache, biliousness, sour stomach, bad breath, inactive liver, lack of energy, heartburn, etc.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt will cure you by clearing away the obstruction and thoroughly cleansing the bowels. This brings healthy action to all the organs of the body and rids the system of the cause of illness.

In this way Abbey's Effervescent Salt permanently cures. A teaspoonful in half a glass of tepid water every morning.

DAISY GORDON'S FOLLY

—OR—

THE WORLD LOST FOR LOVE'S SAKE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY,

Author of "The Crime of Hallow-E'en," "The Flirtations of a Beauty," "Willful Gaynell," "Little Leafy," "Only a Mechanic's Daughter," etc.

At length the time came when Aleck was eager to have the wedding day set; for of course this betrothal could not go on forever, and he was impatient to claim her.

On the morrow she must decide her fate. She must give him up; and what after that? Was she to live always in misery, crying out for death to come to her?

A voice that seemed to stun her with its words, seemed to whisper to her heart. Why should you give him up? Marry him and be happy. As for that other one, it will be long years ere you behold his face again. You could go away so far he could never find you. As you make your choice now, you must abide by it through the long future—as long as you shall live. You must think what life would be to you without him.

That thought terrified her.

She fell upon her knees with a bitter cry.

"I cannot give him up!" she moaned. "God help me, I cannot. I am tempted beyond endurance."

She was so young, she never once realized the full enormity of the horror which surrounded the step she would take if she wedded Aleck.

When he called for his answer the next day, the terrible struggle was all over in poor Daisy's heart.

"Are you to marry me, Daisy?" he whispered.

In the most piteous voice that ever was heard, she answered, sobbingly: "Yes, Aleck, for I cannot live without you."

CHAPTER IX.

"The book fell from the minister's hands with a crash."

It was one of the most pitiful moments of Daisy's life, fraught, as it was in after years, with the cruelest trials that ever darkened a young girl's life.

Her handsome, impetuous lover sprung forward with a glad cry:

"Daisy, my love, my little darling!" he exclaimed, "you have made me the happiest of men!"

How little he dreamed it was at the price of her soul—that for love of him she had defied God and the angels, who looked on from on high and heard and saw all!

"How you shiver and recoil from me, dear!" said Aleck, reproachfully. "One would almost fancy you were forced into this betrothal. You love me, don't you, Daisy?" he asked anxiously.

"Only heaven knows how much!" she sobbed, clinging piteously to him.

He laughed a gay, happy laugh.

"Well, then, why these tears, dear?" he said, playfully caressing the curly, golden head. "You would have our pretty love-dream a tragedy instead of the romance it is. You seem to be regretting your promise almost as soon as give. I have a notion, Daisy darling, that I must claim you at once or I may lose you.

"I have business that calls me out to California the last of this month," he added, wistfully. "Do you think you could get ready to go with me so soon—as my little bride?"

"I will try, Aleck," she whispered.

Hetty and Olive took the matter of Alexander Hamilton's betrothal to little Daisy quite philosophically, for the reason that both had secured lovers of their own.

"You must have a grand wedding, Daisy," decided Olive, one day, and although Daisy piteously protested, declaring she had a great horror of weddings, and liked to see them over as soon as possible, Olive would have her way.

"I'm no great hand for big fusses," said Farmer Gordon, when he was appealed to on the subject, "and like enough it would be a bit awkward for me to give the bride away before such a crowd of city folks, but my pet must have a grand weddin'; her marriage must be an occasion of great rejoicing."

He wondered why Daisy threw her arms around his neck and begged him so piteously not to say any more.

It was decided that the wedding should take place at the pretty villa on the outskirts of Cape May, which Farmer Gordon had purchased recently, and it was therefore fitted up hastily, yet with great splendor, for the occasion.

At length the all-important day rolled around.

The pretty bridesmaids came fluttering into Daisy's room just as the maid was fastening the wreath of orange blossoms on the beautiful golden head half hidden by the shimmering bridal veil.

They had expected to see the lovely dimpled face all rosy blushes; instead, it was white as a snowdrop.

They did not know why she turned away from the window with a shudder.

Her heart sunk as she looked out at the sunshine and listened to the birds.

"I am so frightened!" she gasped when they crowded about her—"oh, I am so very, very frightened!"

They did not recognize a young heart sick and faint with its stings of accusing conscience—seized for the first time with unutterable dread—surely, if they had done so, they would have saved her, but they all kissed the lovely white face, declaring it was perfectly natural.

"No one could wonder at her fright," one of them said, "for marriage was a very solemn thing."

"Did you tell her about the accident," asked one of the bridesmaids, pushing through the group to Daisy's side.

"Look how you have frightened her," retorted one of their number. "The accident she tells about was scarcely worth mentioning, it was simply this: The minister who was to perform the ceremony missed the boat, therefore finding it impossible to reach here, and telegraphed that another minister would have to be secured in his place—which has already been done."

"I heard that it was a bad omen to have a change of ministers or of bridemaids at a wedding," faltered Daisy. "I once knew of such a case, and when the hour for the ceremony rolled around the bridegroom was missing."

"That will not be your case," laughed Hetty, "for Aleck is pacing up and down the corridor outside with all the impatience of a schoolboy, begging to see you just the earliest moment you are ready. There's devotion for you."

"You will have one of the handsomest of husbands, Daisy darling, and what is better than all, he is marrying you for love alone," whispered one of the girls; "you ought to be so happy, dear, yet your face expresses—what shall I call it?—something very like terror."

"It is only your fancy," murmured Daisy, faintly. "What should cause me to feel terror?"

"Why nothing, only you look so!"

It was like a terrible dream to Daisy when Aleck led her down the corridor and into the grand parlor where the guests were assembled.

As he led her up to the floral horseshow beneath which the minister stood, by some subtle instinct Daisy raised her blue eyes to the clergyman's face—the wonder of it was that she did not fall down dead at Aleck's feet then and there—the same clergyman who had wedded her to that other one on that fatal night stood before her.

She did not cry out, she did not swoon, she would have turned and fled if she could, but already the doorways and passages were blocked with people—she must advance.

Would the man recognize her? Would he recoil in horror to great for words, crying out:

"I wedded this girl but a short time since, to another."

If he did not recognize her face she was safe, for he would not know the name.

A life-time of suspense was crowded in the moment that followed, for step by step she was advancing nearer and nearer, leaning heavily on Aleck's arm.

It was too late now to draw back from the awful step on the brink of the precipice.

Quietly they took their places, and the ceremony—such a cruel mockery—went on.

Aleck made his responses in a clear, distinct, happy voice.

Then the aged minister turned to the bride-elect, and the words were asked slowly:

"Wilt thou, Daisy Gordon, take this man to be thy lawfully wedded husband until death doth thee part?"

"I will," faltered Daisy, in a piteous voice.

There was a loud crash.

The minister's book had fallen from his nerveless hands to the floor.

He was leaning forward with breathless excitement, peering into Daisy's face, which was turned half toward him, as though by some uncontrolable magnet.

"That voice!" he muttered, in a low, hoarse voice, but not so low but what Daisy's strained ears caught the words, and her soul sunk within her.

The Sufferings of Women

MANY IRREGULARITIES AND WEAKNESSES, MUCH PAIN AND MISERY WHICH CAN BE PERMANENTLY OVERCOME BY USING

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

No woman can expect to have good health unless the monthly uterine action is regular, and any breaking of this law of nature not only causes much pain and suffering, but may make her an invalid for the rest of life.

Nearly all derangements of the feminine organism are due to thin, watery blood, a poor circulation or lack of nerve force. Whether the menses are irregular, insufficient, profuse or painful the cause of trouble rests with the condition of the blood and nerves, and soon disappears when these are restored to health and vigor.

The dull, aching pain in the back and thighs, the cramps in the abdomen, the distressing headaches, the irritability and feelings of utter weariness will disappear when Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is used to put the blood and nerves in proper condition.

It is usually in girlhood that these irregularities have their beginning, and hence, mothers, the necessity of looking to the health of your daughters during the period of change. A few words of advice at this point may save them from a life of ill-health and misery.

From girlhood to the change in life, for the nursing mother, and at every trying time in woman's life Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is of inestimable value, because it forms new, red blood, insures good circulation, and revitalizes the wasted and depleted nerve cells. It gives health, strength, and buoyancy, rounds out the form, increases flesh and weight, and builds up the system.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is composed of nature's most powerful restoratives, and cannot fail to benefit you. 50 cents a box at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

A System that Will not keep You waiting

Whether you want Painting, Paper Hanging, Decorating, Graining, or anything in our line, we will not keep you waiting. WE WILL NAME THE DAY, and that very day you will find us at your work, with an excellent staff of workmen—the very best mechanics that can be secured—workmen that we can rely on and that please our customers every time.

OUR WALL PAPER TRADE this year is so far the largest in the history of this house, and there are reasons behind the increased trade, and here they are—

FIRSTLY—Times are good, people have money and know where to spend it to advantage.

SECONDLY—By comparison with other lines our customers find our prices much lower and our styles of Wall Paper much higher than the ordinary.

THIRDLY—We give free two yards of bordering with each double roll of the Wall Paper it matches.

We hang our paper at very reasonable prices and always please our customers whether in papering, painting or anything else.

A Novel as a Real-Estate Boomer.

Louisville papers are authority for the statement that "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" not only brought to Cabbage Patch residents the gladdest, richest Christmas their pinched lives had ever known, but has started a tide of immigration toward this suburb of Louisville. Before Miss Alice Caldwell Hegan, now Mrs. Cale Young Rice, introduced Mrs. Wiggs to her thousands of friends, the Cabbage Patch was held as undesirable a living spot as Kentucky could show. Now, all Louisville takes its guests to see the Cabbage Patch and to discover, if possible, Mrs. Wiggs, Miss Hazy, Lovey Mary, and all the rest; while every traveler through Kentucky stops off at Louisville on the same errand, and kodak enthusiasts haunt the region at all hours. Nor is this all. The Cabbage Patch has become—fashionable is hardly the word—popular among the lower circles of Louisville's people; and one landowner has let contracts for twenty-two new cottages to meet the demands of would-be Cabbage Patchites. These new cottages will be ready to accommodate the spring rush, which the appearance of "Lovey Mary" in book-form is expected to increase.

This new picture of life among the lowly promises to have as great a success as its predecessor, for those who smiled at the quaint sayings of the widowed Mrs. Wiggs and the amusing antics of her children will be glad to get another glimpse of them. The new story, by the way, is not a sequel, although several other familiar characters again appear in its pages. Here is a characteristic bit of advice taken at random, which shows that the sympathetic Cabbage Patch philosopher has lost none of her original charm:

"If you want to be cheerful, jus set yer mind on it an' do it. Can't none of us help what traits we start out in life with, but we kin help what we end up with. When things first got to goin wrong with me, I says: 'O Lord, whatever comes, keep me from gittin' sour!' It wasn't fer my own sake I ast it—some people 'pear to enjoy bein' low-sperrited —it was fer the childern an' Mr. Wiggs. Since then I've made it a practice to put all my worries down in the bottom of my heart, then set on the lid an' smile. . . . The way to git cheerful is to smile when you feel bad, to think about somebody else's headache when yer own is 'most bustin', to keep on believin' the sun is a-shinin' when the clouds is thick enough to cut. Nothin' helps you to it like thinkin' more about other folks than about yerself."

Not Adapted to Melons.

An army officer sends the "Youth's Companion" an account of an experience he had when he was on duty along the Rio Grande. He put up one night at a small town in Cameron County at a time when a session of the court had filled the town with strangers. Some of the visitors were sitting on the piazza of the boarding-house after supper, and conversation turned upon the fertility of soils. A stranger from Starr County, which is near Cameron, waited his turn and then said:

"Well, I reckon the most fertile piece o' ground in Texas is up on Ed Jones's ranch in old Starr. The first time Ed plants potatoes they grows like young trees. Ed calculates on how there is a sight o' vegetable energy going to waste. So he sends off fer some tomato plants and grafts 'em on to the potato stock and grows the finest lot o' tomatoes above and potatoes below you ever see."

The Starr County man had thrown down the gauntlet, and a Cameron man took it up.

"Well," he said, "that reminds me o' Bill Dury's ranch down on the arroyo. Bill is looking his ground over one day when the idea comes to him that it is just the spot to raise watermelons. So he gets some of the very best seed from the Agricultural Department, and fertilizes all round permiscuous.

"He plants five or six seeds to each mound. When they come up he pulls up all but the healthiest one in each mound. When this one puts out runners he cuts off all but the likeliest. Did any o' you gents ever hear o' watermelons getting a better start than that? The vines kep' growing bigger 'n' bigger. The young stalks was the size o' yer wrist an' kep' growing. But, gentlemen, Bill never got any melons off them vines. The trouble was this: he hadn't figured on the natural fertility of old Cameron County. His fertilizing caused the trouble.

"Them vines got to growing so fast and powerful they kep' a-dragging the young melons over the ground an' wore 'em out, plumb wore 'em to a frazzle. The vines dragged some o' the melons against stumps and cracked 'em, an' one night some o' the likeliest ones was busted by the vines a-climbin' a fence an' dropping the melons, kerplunk, on the other side. Then Bill give up."

The teller of the first story drew his six-shooter from his hip-pocket, walked over to the teller of the second story, handed him the "gun" in token of surrender, and said, "And so do I."

SUITS FOR MEN

The Entirely Different Sorts.

Not satisfied with equaling in style, fit and excellence of workmanship the made-to-measure garments the best tailors produce, our makers are now fashioning their suits from the same fabrics which have heretofore been exclusive with the Custom Tailors.

Our showing of these suits is very extensive.

They are suits that the average man wants—they give him the style and exclusiveness he seeks without the extra cost of the tailors.

Even the most expert criticism will fail to discover that these suits were not custom made.

The broad showing we make including as it does every size for men of different propostions practically assurs a perfect fit for every man.

But in some cases an exact fit cannot be secured immediately and then we do as the tailors would do at a try on—make the necessary alterations that would secure perfection of fit.

Fancy mixed cashmeres—neat effects in Cheviots—three and four button sack styles including the new straight front.

$6.50 to $15.00

And by the way you can better judge the unassailable quality of these suits if you'll do a little comparing.

SOME COMPARISONS IN P. O. EXPENDITURE

EX-MAYOR JOHNSON SUBMITS A STATEMENT SHOWING PLAINLY THAT BELLEVILLE IS NOT JUSTLY TREATED.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—The discussion which took place at the recent meeting of the Board of Trade respecting the Belleville Post Office has led me to investigate its affairs as exhibited in the public accounts of the Dominion, and compare them with those of similar cities in this and other provinces.

I fancy that our citizens who read the following statement of facts, whether Tory or Grit, will share the astonishment that I have experienced, and will, at least, desire to see Belleville's wrong righted.

I shall begin the comparison with Kingston:

The revenue of the Kingston Office is $30,085.47
And box rents (only) 343.33

Total ...., ...$30,428.80
The expenditure on the Kingston Office is $21,280.97

The revenue of the Belleville Office is $15,156.98
And box rents 966.88

Total $16,123.86
The expenditure on the Belleville office is ....$ 4,157.91

Of its Post Office revenue the City of Kingston gets back for the benefit of its trade seventy per cent. : Belleville gets back twenty-five per cent.

It will be noted that the revenue from box rents in Belleville is nearly three times greater than the revenue from that source in Kingston.

The Postmaster at Kingston gets a salary of $2000, the assistant Postmaster $1400, and one of the clerks receives $1150. I understand that the salary of the Belleville Postmaster is only $1000.

The revenue of the Windsor Office is $21,224.34
And box rents 1,188.32

Total $22,412.66
The expenditure at Windsor in $9,208.85.

Windsor gets back forty-one per cent. of its revenue. The Postmaster at Windsor gets a salary of $1400, and one of the clerks $1200.

The revenue in Charlottetown, P.E.I., is $17,632.65
And box rents 1,240.20

Total $18,872.85
The expenditure at Charlottetown is $12,094.04.

Charlottetown gets back 64 per cent. of its revenue. The assistant Postmaster at Charlottetown gets a salary of $1200.

The revenue in Fredericton, N.B., is $13,593.27
And box rents 657.13

Total $14,250.40
The expenditure at Fredericton is $6,947.15. Fredericton gets back 48 per cent. of its revenue. The Fredericton Postmaster gets a salary of $1600.

The Brantford Post Office is in status similar to Belleville, but with this advantage over Belleville, Brantford has a letter delivery by carriers which alone costs $3,637.50, or within $520.41 of the expenditure in Belleville for all purposes.

The average expenditure of revenue in the examples given is over fifty-five per cent. Belleville's case is in a nut-shell, and is truly represented in the following syllogism:

If it requires an expenditure of 55 per cent. of the revenue to secure efficiency in offices similar to Belleville, and only 25 per cent. is expended in Belleville, then the efficiency of the Belleville Office must of necessity be 30 per cent. below par.

Yours faithfully,
J. W. JOHNSON.

CITY HOTEL LICENSE HAS BEEN CUT OFF

PLACES WHICH HAVE BEEN GRANTED LICENSES FOR ENSUING YEAR.

The License Commissioners for West Hastings, at their meeting yesterday afternoon, granted the city licenses for the year. As a result of their action the City Hotel is deprived of a license for the ensuing year. The places which have received licenses are as follows; Docter's Hotel, International, Ontario House, Kyle House, Albion Hotel, O'Brien House, Hastings House, Crystal, Anglo-American, St. George's, Balmoral, Quinte, Windsor, Dominion House, Hub and Victoria.

Mr. Drowley, the lessee of the City Hotel, was granted a three months' license. In answer to an enquiry as to what the Commissioners would do when the three months' license expired, one of the Commissioners told an Intelligencer representative that he could not tell what would be done. A six months' license was granted to the Ferry House, at the wharf.

HOW ONE MILLION IS SPENT.

Not less than one million dollars is annually spent by people seeking an absolute cure for catarrh, bronchitis and Consumption. Numerous are the remedies, but the one standing pre-eminently above all others is Catarrhozone. It cures these diseases because it is sure to reach them. Catarrhozone is inhaled into the lungs, throat and nasal passages, and bathes every part of the diseased membrane with its germ-killing, healing vapor. You simply breathe Catarrhozone and it cures. AN OLD TREE'S HISTORY

MR. NEIL McARTHUR TELLS HOW HE PLANTED THE ELM TREE IN FRONT OF THE HASTINGS HOUSE.

Mr. James Wallace shows us a letter he lately received from Mr. Neil McArthur, a former resident of this city, now of Ovid, Mich., which will be interesting, as it relates to early days in Belleville. After speaking of some private matters the old gentleman says; "In the year 1839, on the 19th of December, I was bound an apprentice to Samuel Stevens, who had just finished the main building now occupied as a hotel—the Hastings House. The property that you and Adam Henry bought and occupy was built a year or two before by Robert Bird. There is a little circumstance I want to mention, because when I was in Belleville a few years ago I was frequently asked about the history of the elm tree that stands in front of the Hastings House, and when I informed them that I planted the said tree some doubted my word. That tree was planted by myself and Mrs. Stevens in the month of April, 1840. I got the sprout—or tree—back on the hill where Mr. Clute's house now stands. It was about 6 or 7 feet high. James Meagher, sr., carpenter, had just finished a nice picket fence enclosing a small yard in front of the dwelling part of the house, in the centre of which Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. Shibley were placing a flower bed with lilac shrubs, etc. They asked me to take the spade and go back on the hill and find an elm tree to put in the flower bed. I did so. This is a true sketch of that tree. I always looked with pride on it, for it seems like a monument to the memory of those who planted it."

In conversation regarding the above matter, Mr. Wallace thought it would be a good thing if Arbor Day were better observed at the present time. How many boys, he wonders, will be able, 63 years from now, to point to elm trees they planted in their youth? Yet there are plenty of trees and plenty of boys. Only the ambition is lacking.

THE GAS COMPANY

PROPOSITION TO BE SUBMITTED TO THE COUNCIL ON MONDAY NEXT.

The result of the conference yesterday between Mr. Noxon, the directors of the Gas Company and the Special Committee of the City Council, was, we are informed, that Mr. Noxon will continue as lessee of the concern for the time being. At the next Council meeting, which will be held on Monday, May 18, Mr. Frank Dolan, who is one of the principal shareholders in the company, will present a proposition on behalf of the directors in reference to future plans for continuing the gas works. What the proposed plans are we are not in a position to state.

THINGS LOOK SERIOUS FOR JOHN TOPPINGS

JUDGMENT IN ALLEGED ABDUCTION CASE RESERVED TILL FRIDAY.

The trial of John Toppings, of Deseronto, on the charge of abduction, occupied the attention of the court all yesterday. The girl Minnie Clarke, who is but 15 years of age, told her story, which was to the effect that the accused, in company with another man named Welch, brought her and her sister to this city, and remained here over night with them. The men represented to the proprietor of the hotel where they put up that they were a wedding party. After the evidence was all in and argument heard. Judge Lazier reserved judgment until Friday next.

BELLEVILLE'S MAYOR TALKS IN MONTREAL

WENT TO THE METROPOLIS TO ATTEND THE FRUIT AUCTION SALES.

Montreal Herald: Mr. Robert J. Graham, Mayor of Belleville, Ont., is a guest at the Queen's Hotel. He is president of the Graham Evaporating Company, with headquarters at Belleville and branches in fifteen other places, four of which are in the United States. His firm handles enormous quantities of apples, vegetables and general produce and dairy produce. Mr. Graham's visit here is to attend the fruit sales of the cargo of the SS. Gremona.

Speaking of the strike he said he considered that it would have a serious effect on the port from a commercial standpoint, and would divert a lot of trade to United States ports. The fruit and cheese trade would be affected in that way. He is strong in his opinion of the alien labor law, and says a rigid one should be enforced. Labor agitators from foreign countries should be kept out, even though it be necessary to pass a law making their actions a criminal offence. As Mr. Graham is a large shipper from this port he is anxious to see a settlement and the port saved from any possible bad effects.

PAIN IN THE JOINTS

may be muscular or rheumatic. The joints are hard to get at, and it requires a powerful, penetrating remedy to reach the affected parts. Polson's Nerviline exactly meets the requirements, for it is both powerful and penetrating. The pain is expelled as if by magic, for one drop of Nerviline equals in strength five drops of other remedies. You won't often call the doctor if Nerviline is in the house. Price 25 cents.

Trenton Man Assaulted

Last evening Mr. Manley Tripp, of Trenton, was sitting in front of Mr. McMahon's livery stable, on Front street, when two men, it is alleged, approached him, and without the slightest provocation, it is alleged, dealt him some severe blows on the face. The result was that Tripp had his cheek cut and an eye very much discolored. His alleged assailants will have to answer before the Magistrate for their conduct.

KING IN BONNIE SCOTLAND

Land of Brown Heath and Shaggy Wood Gives Hearty Welcome.

First Ceremonial Visit of the Reign to the North—King Edward and Queen Alexandra Were Met by Representative Men, Chief of Whom Was Lord Balfour of Burleigh, Secretary For Scotland—Driven to Dalkeith Castle.

London, May 12.—King Edward and Queen Alexandra, accompanied by large suites, left London yesterday morning to pay their first ceremonial visit to Scotland. They arrived at Edinburgh last evening.

Their Majesties were greeted by big crowds while driving in semi-state to the railroad station, escorted by a detachment of the Household Cavalry.

The King and Queen arrived at Edinburgh last evening, and were enthusiastically welcomed. They were met by Lord Balfour of Burleigh, Secretary for Scotland; the Earl of Furol, Lord High Constable of Scotland; Lord Rosebery, Lieut.-Gen. Sir Archibald Hunter, commanding the forces in Scotland, and the Lord Provost, and members of the corporation in their official robes. While a salute was fired from the castle the keys of the city were presented to the King, who returned them, saying they could not be in better hands than those of the corporation.

After the ceremony Their Majesties were driven in a semi-state carriage to Dalkeith Castle.

DEATH OF MR. A. H. DYMOND.

Was For 20 Years Principal of the Institute For the Blind.

Brantford, May 12.—After a brief illness Mr. A. H. Dymond expired yesterday. For 20 years he had been the principal of the Institute for the Blind. Death was the result of pneumonia. The deceased was an Englishman by birth, his parents living at Croydon, Surrey, where he was born August 21, 1827. Early in life he was engaged in mercantile pursuits, which he relinquished to advocate the abolition of the death punishment, with which movement he was long identified, lecturing throughout Great Britain and writing many pamphlets. In 1857 he joined The Morning Star, a London, England, daily, and later became its manager. He was closely identified with the emancipation party in England during the American Civil war.

Mr. Dymond came to Canada in October, 1869, and from that time until 1878 was an editorial writer on The Globe. In consequence of his exceptional power as a public speaker, he contested successfully North York in the Liberal interests at the general elections of 1874. During his term in the House of Commons he took an active part in the debates and assisted materially in the adoption of the temperance measure known as the Scott Act. He leaves the following family: A. M. Dymond, law clerk of the Legislative Assembly; Frank Dymond of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation; Rev. Ernest Dymond, Port Hope; Dr. Bertha Dymond, Toronto; Miss Nellie Dymond, Brantford. The body will be brought to Toronto for burial.

CARNEGIE SLAPS CANADA.

Steel King's Vitriol Poured Into The Ironmongers' Journal.

Montreal, May 12.—(Star cable.)—London, May 11.—Andrew Carnegie pours vitriol upon Canada in an interview with The Ironmongers' Journal in connection with the presidency of the Iron and Steel Institute. When asked whether Canada, grown populous by immigration, spiritually British, but materially American, might not bring about a union of England with America, Carnegie replied: "Certainly not. Canada has no future except as a part of the States. Her native population increases more slowly than that of Scotland. She only added 536,000 to her population in ten years, and of these 440,000 came from abroad. Canada, standing alone, can never become a great industrial nation. The steel industry is a figment and Cape Breton a mirage.— Nothing there need ever trouble the United States. In no conceivable circumstances can your colonies ever have a population approaching that of the States, and your colonial Empire, what is it but politicians' catchword.

A well known Anglo-Canadian after reading the interview exclaimed: "Don't fancy Canadians will accept another cent of this man's money."

KILLS QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY STUDENT.

Flyer Runs Down Young Donald Bothwell at Lancaster.

Lancaster, May 12.—Donald Bothwell was killed by the Chicago flyer at the station yesterday morning. He was riding between the tracks a few yards west of the station. He and a companion, Brown Lea, both students of Queen's University, came here from Kingston Saturday intending to canvas the Township of Lancaster and Charlottenburg with stereopticon views. They separated in the village, each to take the course suited to his canvas. Bothwell's district evidently was to be Charlottenburg, and as the railroad afforded good wheeling for about a mile of his journey he started westward on the track, riding between the rails, when he was overtaken by the limited. A strong wind from the west was blowing at the time, and Bothwell evidently did not realize how near the train was. His friends have been communicated with, his home being in Perth.

Donald C. Bothwell had just completed his first year in Arts at Queen's and was well known here. He was nephew of Rev. D. G. McPhail, formerly of Picton, now of Frank, N.W.T.

THE COMMISSION RESUMES.

Mr. Gamey Expected to Take Stand—Will End This Week.

Toronto, May 12.—To-day sees the beginning of the end in the matter of the Royal Commission into the Gamey charges. It is not unlikely that D. A. Jones of Beeton will be the first witness to go on the stand. He has been called at the request of the Commissioners to explain portions of his letter to Mr. Gamey during last August.

Mr. Gamey arrived in the city from Gore Bay yesterday morning, and he will take the stand perhaps to-morrow again to give rebuttal evidence. A number of Manitoulin men are also in town, and will give evidence refuting the assertions that Mr. Gamey, at his meetings, gave any indication of supporting anyone but the Conservative party. The argument on each side will consume the best part of a day. Following the custom, Mr. Blake will speak first, and then have an opportunity to reply after Mr. Johnston concludes.

At all events this week will see the whole matter finally in the hands of the Commissioners for decision.

Ottawa, May 13.—The total insurance loss of the fire is now put at $475,000.

AFTER THE TRUTH ABOUT IT

Is Public Ownership a Success or Otherwise?

Government Will Name a Select Committee to Gather Information on the Subject—Gave Away Niagara Power—Dr. Nesbitt Again Scores the Government on Treatment of This Great Asset—House in Supply.

Toronto, May 13.—Municipal ownership was discussed in the Legislature yesterday, the question being brought up by Attorney-General Gibson in the form of a resolution to appoint a select committee of five to gather information as to the success or non-success of the principle wherever it has been adopted. He spoke at great length, the result of his individual investigation going to show that there is much to be said on both sides, but that the preponderance of evidence was against municipal ownership. He then moved the following resolution:

Resolution Introduced.

"That a select committee of five members of the House be appointed for the purpose of selecting reports of committees on commissions or other authorities on the subject of municipal trading or municipal ownership, or operation of public utilities as well as other useful deliverances of authoritative weight on these subjects, both favoring and opposing any of these systems and generally such material as the committee may select, and that the selections made by the committee be printed and distributed to the members of the House in pamphlet form, and that the committee, if necessary, have power to sit and act after the close of the present session, and that publication of the material selected be carried out without necessity of previous report to this House."

Mr. Whitney's Views.

Mr. Whitney said he was not quite clear as to what the Attorney-General intended to convey by his speech. While expressing no disapproval of the motion, he (Whitney) thought the members of the committee would be compelled to neglect other duties if it was intended that they should sit during the present session. He said that every time the Attorney-General quoted anything in support of the principle, he at once proceeded to quote the antidote to show that the principle was wrong.

Mr. Crawford wondered if the appointment of the commission was intended to forestall any further move in the direction of the extension of public ownership, and the Premier said: "Certainly not." Mr. Crawford believed that the reasons given by the Attorney-General would convince the people that municipal ownership was the proper thing.

Should Get More Light.

The Premier re-affirmed that the Government had not the slightest intention of side-tracking any of the bills before the House. There was an agitation, he said, for an extensive system of municipal ownership, and he was not opposing it, but before going any further the people should have the benefit of the experience of other countries.

The motion passed, and the Premier announced that the committee would be named to-day.

A number of bills were introduced and read a first time.

Third Readings.

Third readings were given to the following bills: Respecting the Huntsville and Lake of Bays Railway (Tudhope); to amend the act incorporating the North Lanark Railway Company (Caldwell); to legalize and confirm Bylaw 679 of the Town of Petrolea (Hanna); to confirm Bylaw 575 of the Town of Sarnia (Hanna); to confirm Bylaw 31 of the Town of Goderich (Cameron); respecting the Ross Memorial Hospital (Fox); respecting the Town of Bracebridge (Tudhope).

University Bylaw Ratified.

The House adopted a motion of Hon. Richard Harcourt, to ratify the following Order-in-Council: Upon the recommendation of the Minister of Education, the Committee of Council advise that a bylaw of the trustees of the University of Toronto be approved by Your Honor, viz., Bylaw No. 16, respecting a loan of $50,000 to the Faculty of Medicine.

The House went into committee on Mr. Ross' bill, respecting the taxation of lands in New Ontario.

Mr. Davis' bill, respecting land grants to veterans, was read a second time.

Mr. Harcourt's bill, respecting Boards of Education in certain cities, and Mr. Gibson's bill respecting local works and improvements, were read a second time.

Gave Away Niagara Power.

On the motion to go into supply, Dr. Nesbitt continued his criticism of the Government which he said had given away the most valuable asset in Ontario, the power concessions at Niagara Falls, and if it had appointed a Commission some years ago the province would have been placed in possession of information as to the value of the concessions which have been given away. If the Government could not do anything else it had better buy out the rights of the existing companies and generate the power for the benefit of the people.

Mr. Gross said he believed that if no concessions had been granted no municipality or union of municipalities would care to generate electricity, nor would it be in the interest of the people for the Province to generate electricity at the Falls. The only power at Niagara Falls that had been given away was on the American side.

In reply to Mr. Kribs the Premier said that the Government is prevented by the agreements with the company from developing the remaining power within the boundaries of the park. But there are three other sites outside the park, which the Government is not prevented from utilizing.

In Committee on Supply the items for colonization and immigration, totalling $14,325, were then passed.

On reaching the estimates of the Department of Agriculture the item of $166,950 for grants to agricultural societies provoked some opposition, and the Premier agreed to allow the item to stand over for fuller discussion, and the House adjourned at 11 o'clock.

EXTENSIVE QUARANTINE.

Mange Among Western Herds May Be Felt in Canada.

Denver, Colo., May 13.—The most extensive quarantine of cattle in the west for many years will be in effect within a few days, as the result of the prevalence of the mange. Six or eight other states and territories will come under the same rule before the end of the week. Cattle from the Mexican border to Canada will come under these regulations, and practically all of the territory from the Rockies to the Missouri River will be affected.

The mange is a highly contagious parasitic disease of the skin that affects all classes of lower animals. It is most important that it should be properly quarantined. While common, it is said by veterinary authorities to be prevalent in no portion of Canada.

Watching Canadian Cattle.

London, May 13.—The British orders prohibiting Argentine live cattle and sheep has raised prices of beef, though the fact that six more ships from Argentina will be admitted this week prevents the possibility of shortage of the supply. Government inspectors are using great vigilance for the detection of disease in importations from Canada and elsewhere.

MANSLAUGHTER.

Toronto Jury Finds Isaac Romaine Guilty of Killing His Partner.

Toronto, May 13.—"Murder, a true bill," was the answer given by the foreman of the grand jury to Mr. Justice Street in the assizes yesterday morning. The accused, Isaac Walter Romaine, stood charged with shooting his partner, Louis Goldsmith, during a row in their tailor shop on Victoria street. Monday afternoon his Lordship instructed the grand jurors that if they found the prisoner had been provoked beyond endurance, and had committed the deed in uncontrollable passion, they might change the charge to manslaughter. The jury reported the more serious charge. Romaine pleaded not guilty, and the trial went on. Various witnesses testified to the shooting, and Romaine himself took the stand and claimed great provocation and fear of his life. The jury, after an hour's absence, brought in a verdict of manslaughter, with a recommendation to mercy. Sentence will be passed at the conclusion of the Assizes.

SERIOUS LABOR CONFLICT.

State and Federal Courts in the West Clash Ominously.

Omaha, Neb., May 13.—Judge Dickinson, in the District Court last night, on application of John O. Yeiser, an attorney representing the labor unions whose members are on strike, issued an injunction against the business men and proprietors even more sweeping than that issued by the Federal Court against the unions last week. The order restrains the business men from refusing to sell goods to dealers who employ union labor, requires the Businessmen's Association to cease to hold meetings or conspiring against the unions or in any way interfering with the unions in the management of their affairs.

Great Dock Strike.

Santiago, Chili, May 13.—Owing to a great strike of dock laborers at Valparaiso, all business has been suspended there. Riotous strikers have destroyed street cars and have committed other excesses, several persons having been killed, and great excitement prevails.

Joaquin Miller Not Dead.

San Francisco, May 13.—Joaquin Miller is not dead. The report that he was came from Oakland too late for investigation. Yesterday morning it was learned that the report was unfounded.

AN ARMY OF 6,000 FANATICS

Defeated Before Sokoto by a Force of 500 British Troops.

Story of Fierce Battle Before the City of the African Interior Was Captured by Capt. Moreland's Column—How 100,000 Square Miles of Territory Was Added to British Nigeria—A New Emir Appointed.

London, May 13.—Details have been received here of the capture of Sokoto, March 14, by the British column commanded by Col. Morland. The engagement lasted 2½ hours. The British numbered about 500 men, with four quick-firing guns and 4 Maxims. The enemy's horse and foot were estimated to number some 6,000 men, their riflemen being armed with modern rifles, and using smokeless powder.

The British camped during the night of March 13 a mile and a half from Sokoto, after a hard march of 100 miles from Kaura, with but little water, and having passed through a difficult country. At daybreak, March 14, the British moved out in square formation towards the valley in which Sokoto lies. Immediately after the British appeared over a ridge, the Fulanis charged with fanatical bravery, undeterred by a withering fire of Maxims and rifles.

Wild Rush of Fanatics.

They had no proper leadership, but the isolated bands continued to advance over heaps of dead and dying, often only individuals reaching within a yard of the square, where, refusing quarter, they were shot down while shouting "Allah!" with their last breath. The main body of the natives was finally routed, leaving a remnant of about thirty chiefs around the Emir's great white flag.

These chiefs were defiant to the last, and their corpses were found hedging the standard, when the British entered the city, which consisted mostly of thatched houses. Its semi-ruined wall extended seven miles round the place, and were pierced by eight gates. A few days later, the populace returned and the Fulanis tendered their submission to Commissioner Lugard, who arrived March 19, and installed a new Emir. The British then retired towards the coast, leaving a garrison of two companies.

Red Spot Getting Bigger.

London, May 13.—Colonial Secretary Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons yesterday that as a result of the British Military operations in the Sokoto and Kano districts, ending with the capture of the Emir of Kano, 100,000 square miles of territory had been added to Northern Nigeria, and would be administered by the Government of that territory.

SHAUGHNESSY TO TESTIFY.

Proceedings at Victoria in the Alleged Land Grants Scandal.

Montreal, May 13.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy leaves to-day for Victoria, B. C., where he will give evidence before the Commission that is enquiring into the South Kootenay land grants scandal.

Tuesday's Proceedings.

Victoria, B. C., May 13.—George McL. Brown, former executive agent of the C.P.R., gave evidence before the Commission enquiring into the alleged South Kootenay land scandal yesterday, to the effect that he had pressed W. C. Wells, Minister of Lands and Works, for delivery of the grants of the land in South Kootenay, as well as Messrs. Dunsmuir and Eberts, but the grants were withheld. He considered that the C. P. R. was entitled to the land subsidy for the building of the Columbia & Western. Wells is alone responsible for the non-delivery of the grants, he said. E. P. Davis, counsel for the C.P.R., will cross-examine Wells today. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the C.P.R. has wired that he will be present for the examination next Monday. He is coming from Montreal for that purpose.

BACK TO FRANK.

Merchants and Other Residents Have Reoccupied the Village.

Blairmore, N.W.T., May 13.—Premier Haultain has re-opened Frank. Merchants and other residents at once re-occupied the place. The conclusion reached by experts was that slides will continue for some time, but to what extent is a matter of judgment. They might come down frequently or there might be a big slide that would wipe out a part of the town, but it was uncertain. R. McConnell and R. W. Brock of the geological survey, are here for the Dominion Government to establish the cause of the slide.

A Lover's Suicide.

Hamilton, May 13.—After quarreling with his sweetheart yesterday morning, Abraham Myles, 171 Bold street, went home, placed a revolver at his temple, and shot himself through the head. He sent his mother and sister out of the house on fool's errands, and then ended his life. The girl in the case is Miss Ethel Bell, 157 West Hunter street. She is exceedingly pretty and is about 20 years of age.

DURING THE WARM WEATHER.

Even during the warmest weather Angier's Petroleum Emulsion is pleasant to take, and agreeable to the stomach. For this reason it is the ideal remedy for consumption. Made of odorless and tasteless petroleum, glycerine, and hypophosphites, it is better in every way than emulsions made of fish oils or other fats.

It Nourishes Infants.

No other baby food is as nourishing wholesome or so universally used. It is a perfect substitute for mothers' milk.

Death of Rev. Mungo Fraser.

Hamilton, May 13.—Rev. Mungo Fraser died at the family residence, 213 North Park street, about 6 o'clock last evening. Until two years ago he was pastor of Knox Church, which he built up to be the second largest Presbyterian congregation in Ontario. He was forced to retire on account of ill health. He had lived in Hamilton for the past 18 years. His birthplace was Dunkeld, Perthshire, Scotland. He was 67 years of age. A widow, two daughters—Helen and Lilian—and one son—Edward of Colorado—survive him.

PAIN IN THE JOINTS

may be muscular or rheumatic. The joints are hard to get at, and it requires a powerful, penetrating remedy to reach the affected parts. Polson's Nerviline exactly meets the requirements, for it is both powerful and penetrating. The pain is expelled as if by magic, for one drop of Nerviline equals in strength five drops of other remedies. You won't often call the doctor if Nerviline is in the house. Price 25 cents.

Mission Bands Played

The Mission Band in connection with the Tabernacle last evening gave an entertainment in the lecture room of the church. There was a good attendance and the receipts were satisfactory. The programme consisted of selections from the Mission Bands of the Tabernacle, University and Holloway Street churches; vocal solos by Miss Hattie Gowsell, and Mr. S. Burrows; mandolin solo by Miss Eva Lavoie, and piano duet by Misses Florence Davis and Fannie Strong. Mrs. (Rev.) J. H. Locke presided over the gathering.

Daily Intelligencer.

A MINISTERIAL KNOW-NOTHING.

The Montreal Star has been reading the evidence given by Hon. J. R. Stratton on his own behalf before the Royal Commission. The Star is particularly impressed with the number of things Hon. Mr. Stratton did not know, or was prepared to swear he did not know. For instance:

> "He does not know anything about the fund of $18,000 or $19,000 put up for election protests in the interests of the Government of which he is a member, although the Premier had left the matter of the protests in his hands. He does not know who was the treasurer of the Liberal general election fund. He does not seem quite sure that there was a fund, but supposes that elections are not run without funds.
>
> "He does not know who was the president, the secretary, or the treasurer of the Liberal Association.
>
> "He did not know that Frank Sullivan was negotiating with or writing letters to Gamey."

If, as the poet says, Ignorance is bliss, Mr. Stratton must be the happiest man in Ontario politics to-day. But he should certainly get Cap. Sullivan to give him a few pointers, if only for appearance's sake.

DEFENCE OF LORD DUNDONALD.

The St. John, N.B. Sun, writing in defence of Lord Dundonald, G. O. C., has this to say about the recent attack made upon him in the House of Commons by Laurier's friend, the pro-Boer Bourassa, and some others:

> "The General Officer Commanding has said nothing that a man in his position should not say. He is trying his best, as his predecessors did, to make the Canadian militia an effective and practical force. In doing so he naturally points out the deficiencies and the requirements. If Lord Dundonald were merely an ornamental officer, who was willing to draw his pay and leave the whole military administration in the hands of the political ministers, he might be more comfortable and altogether useless. He tries to be useful and that is his offence. Mr. Bourassa supports Sir William Mulock's idea that the spirit of militarism in Canada should be suppressed. That idea may suit some persons but if it is to prevail the first steps are to disband the militia, close up the Royal Military College, abolish the permanent force except so much as may be necessary to keep the peace at home, banish the drums and trumpets, retire Sir Frederick Borden, and clear his whole department from the Government Buildings. If we are to have a defensive force, let it be an effective force, and let us not sneer at a Commander-in-Chief who takes for granted that our militia department is intended for some practical purpose."

Such a thing as consistency never enters into the philosophy of Bourassa and his friends. They do not object to the Militia department squandering all the money it chooses; not a word of protest was heard from them when it was shown that "dog biscuit" emergency food was sent to feed brave Canadian boys in South Africa, but they do object to Canada getting an efficient militia force. That is something at which they draw the line. No doubt such action, on the face of it, looks inconsistent, but it is not. Bourassa and his friends, who hob-nob with Fenians and traitors, know what they are after.

TIMELY TOPICS.

With Mr. Timothy Healy called to the English bar they should be well supplied with hot Irish in future.

Chief Justice Meredith has granted a mandamus compelling the Chief of Police of Toronto to grant permits for "sparring exhibitions"—or prize fights—in that city. The mandamus was granted on the evidence of the medical examiners of the Crescent Athletic Club, who testified that boxing was fair and manly, and not so rough or dangerous as football and lacrosse. Judge Meredith's decision might gladden the heart of Dr. Conan Doyle, but one can hardly see where the manliness comes in, when hired sluggers, who fight for purses, are imported from the United States to pander to the worst passions of Toronto sports. Boxing is splendid exercise, for the individual, but the spectacle of men hammering each other for money is no more ennobling to those who see it than dog fighting or cock fighting would be.

Stand up, Messrs. W. J. McCamon, H. G. Bleecker and Jeremiah Squires, License Commissioners for West Hastings, and let the people have a look at you. Do you know what people are saying about you? They say you have taken away the license from a hotel which has excellent accommodations, all that the law requires, and have granted licenses to places which have not the accommodations required by the law which you are expected to obey. They further say that it was the influence of the men who own the places in question which obtained for them their licenses. Of course, gentlemen, you will be glad of an opportunity to deny such a charge and vindicate yourselves. The Intelligencer will be glad to publish letters from each one of you, giving your reasons for granting the licenses in the way you did, and we are sure your fellow-citizens of West Hastings will be glad to read them. Now, gentlemen, it's up to you.

Somebody writes to the Toronto Telegram criticizing rather harshly the Ontario farmers for the way they treat their hired men. He says:

> "Sir,—Ontario farmers cannot get help because they do not provide comfortable quarters. If they would spend a few dollars upon furniture for the hired man's room they would get over a portion of the difficulty. Then they are mean with victuals. Most of them do not patronize the route butcher wagons. The only meat they serve is when they kill a calf, sheep, lamb or hog. They do this when they have time or when the endurance of the hired man has been taxed to the limit. They are penurious with eggs if the market price is a cent an egg. Baking days are too infrequent in bread making, but "dough boys" are produced with frequency all the year. Coffee and tea are the cheapest available. More brown sugar than white is used."

The Gamey enquiry resumed its work yesterday. It will be remembered that Mr. Stratton solemnly swore in giving his evidence that he "had not talked with Frank Sullivan from September 9th to March the 9th. Mr. Charles Cavers, reporter for The World newspaper, was the first witness called. He testified that he knew Frank Sullivan personally, and Hon. J. R. Stratton by sight. Between January 16th and February 10th, of this year, he was visiting the Parliament Buildings daily. On one occasion he was with Sullivan in the corridor, and Mr. Stratton came along. Sullivan left him and remained in conversation with the Provincial Secretary for upwards of five minutes. So the contradictions go on. Stratton seems to have a convenient memory.

BEAUTY'S CHARM

A CLEAR SKIN, ROSY CHEEKS AND BRIGHT EYES COMPEL ADMIRATION.

No woman needs to be told the charm of a clear complexion. No man can be blind to the beauty of rosy cheeks, or the power of sparkling eyes. And every woman—no matter what her features may be—can have a perfect complexion. Bright eyes and a perfect complexion come from pure blood—and pure blood comes from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. By enriching the blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give vigor, strength, health, happiness and beauty. Here is a bit of proof; "For upwards of three years I suffered from anaemia," says Miss Mary Jackson, of Normandale, Ont., "I had no color in my face, my lips and gums were bloodless and I grew so weak I could scarcely walk about the house. I doctored a good deal, but got no benefit until I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had taken them more than a couple of weeks I could see a change for the better, and continuing the use of the pills for some time longer my strength returned, the color came back to my face, and I gained fourteen pounds in weight. I can recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to every weak, ailing girl or woman."

These pills are good for all troubles due to poor blood or weak nerves. Don't take any other medicine—see that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is found on the wrapper around every box. If in doubt send direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be mailed at 50 cents per box or six boxes for $2.50.

Dr. Pope was physician on the yacht Erin and last year made a few trips on the steamer Dominion."

Allen's Lung Balsam
The best Cough Medicine.
ABSOLUTE SAFETY should be the first thought and must be rigorously insisted upon when buying medicine, for upon its safety depends one's life. ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM contains no opium in any form and is safe, sure, and prompt in cases of Croup, Colds, deep-seated Coughs.
Try it now, and be convinced.

A full-sized cigar contains as much as two grains of nicotine; a pipeful of tobacco not more, as a rule, than two-thirds of a grain.

Doing good is the only certainly happy action of a man's life.

Anecdotal.

In taking out a ten-thousand-dollar policy with a Milwaukee insurance company William J. Bryan had to state if he had ever suffered any from fever, and if so, what kind. He is said to have written: "Yes, had two severe attacks of Presidential fever, followed by severe chills, but I have fully recovered from both."

At a party in Dublin Castle one of the young aide-de-camps tried to play a joke on Archbishop Whately. Approaching the primate, the youth said: "Does Your Grace know what is the difference between an ass and an archbishop?" "No," was the grave answer. "Oh," says the youth, "an ass has a cross on his back, while an archbishop has a cross on his breast." "Very good," said the archbishop; "now will you tell me what is the difference between a young officer like yourself and an ass?" "I don't know," replied the youth. "Neither do I," said the archbishop, and walked away.

Lord Coleridge, Chief Justice of England, was driving toward his court one morning in his brougham, when an accident happened to it at Grosvenor Square. Fearing he would be belated, he called a cab from the street rank, and bade the Jehu drive him as rapidly as possible to the courts of justice. "And where be they?" "What! A London cabby, and don't know where the law courts are at old Temple Bar?" "Oh! the law courts, is it? But you said courts of justice."

"John," said a Scotch minister to one of his congregation, "I hope you hold family worship regularly." "Ay," said John, "in the time o' year o't." "But what do you mean, John?" "Ye ken, sir, we canna see in the winter nichts." "But, John, can't you buy candles?" "Weel, I could," replied John "but in that case I'm fearin' the cost would owergang the profit."

One of David B. Hill's first lawsuits was a non-jury case, in which the opposing counsel was one of the best attorneys in New York State. Hill gave a speech which lasted about three hours. It was such a speech as might be expected from a young lawyer, and it was very trying to the court. After he had finished, his opponent arose and said: "May it please the court, I intend to follow the example of my young friend and submit the case without argument." Hill lost the case.

Former President Scott of the Cincinnati Southern Railroad was greatly annoyed, when he first took hold of the road, by the claims for horses and cattle killed by trains on their way through Kentucky. It seemed as though it were not possible for a train to run north or south through Kentucky without killing either a horse or cow. And every animal killed, however scrawny, scrubby or miserable it may have been before the accident, always figured in the claims subsequently presented as of the best blood in Kentucky. "Well," said Scott one day, after examining a claim, "I don't know anything that improves stock in Kentucky like crossing it with a locomotive."

No Business to be Alive.

THERE is no name more honored among physiologists than that of Virchow, the great German scientist, nor is there any man who has done more than he to prolong human life and alleviate human suffering. Nevertheless, he is not infallible, and the London "Standard" tells an amusing story of at least one mistaken diagnosis which he made.

As private practice interfered with his scientific studies, Virchow practised medicine only a very short time. But one day in later life, while his students were waiting for their lecture at the hospital, a gentleman knocked at the door of the professor's private room and stated that he was not feeling well, and wished to consult the savant. Professor Virchow examined the man carefully, and then said:

"Why, my good friend, you have no business to be alive at all! You are suffering from three complaints, each one of which has long since arrived at a stage which ought to have caused your death. This is a most interesting case; it shows that one must not always believe in theory."

The patient began to feel uncomfortable, but Professor Virchow, in his professional enthusiasm, did not notice either the effect of his words or the comical side of the situation. He added: "Would you mind stepping into the next room? I should like to show you to some gentlemen who are there."

With ill-concealed nervousness the patient followed the professor into the lecture-room, where he was introduced as an interesting case, and was obliged to remain while the professor described the nature of the three diseases and the progress they had made. On hearing again that he was practically a dead man the patient felt a strong desire to get home, and left at once.

Just what part in his recovery was played by increased care and home remedies is not known, but the man is still alive. When Professor Virchow celebrated his eightieth birthday recently, the man who ought to have been dead years ago was among those who sent their congratulations.

Contemptible but Trivial.

Verbena, the colored cook, asked permission to bake a cake for the wedding breakfast of one of her friends. The next day her mistress said to her:

"Well, 'Bena, how did the wedding go off?"

"Law, Mrs. L.," Verbena replied, "it war a mos' pow'ful fine weddin'. De breckfus war mos' appetizin', 'specially de cake you done gib me; an' wid all de guests wearin' der bes' clo's, an' behavin' mos' impressive. An' de bride suttainly did look beautiful in her white satin gownd, wid de long, white veil an' de orange-blossoms."

"And how about the bridegroom, 'Bena?"

"Dar!" exclaimed Verbena, her eyes flashing, "de low-down, no-count niggar nevah come a-nigh!"—"Harper's Magazine."

Flower Names Favored.

Smart society favors flower names. There are Lady Rosemary Cairns, Lady Lily Milles and Lady Violet Beauchamp. Lady Essex's little girl is Lady Iris Capell, Lady Angela Forbes's child is called Marigold, and Lady Algernon Lennox's daughter has the name of Ivy. One of the Miss Finches owns the uncommon name of Jasmine.—"M.

Curious Bits of News.

The first monument ever erected to a cook is about to be inaugurated in Paris. The chef in question is Urbain Dubois, who labored in the German Emperor's kitchen.

A new volume of reminiscences by Dean Hole quotes the following extraordinary prayer as offered by a loyal but certainly injudicious English clergyman on behalf of Queen Adelaide, the wife of William IV.: "Oh Lord, save Thy servant, our sovereign lady, the queen; grant that as she grows an old woman she may become a new man; strengthen her with Thy blessing that she may live a pure virgin, bringing forth sons and daughters to the glory of God, and give her grace that she may go forth before her people like a he goat on the mountains."

Certain creeds seem to monopolize certain industries. Practically all British manufacturers of cocoa, for example, are Quakers. In London a very large percentage of cigar merchants and all the best-known manufacturers of Christmas cards are Jews. Whenever a Welshman goes to London to seek his fortune it is long odds on his making his pile either in the draper's or drug store business. Irishmen, probably owing to the fact that they lack the money-making instinct, flock to journalism.

Gasolene is, it appears, the fuel most suitable for submarines; but human sensations give no sure warning when its collected fumes are becoming dangerous. White mice, however, are said to be extremely sensitive to this poison, and perish incontinently before human beings begin to suffer the slightest ill-effects. So in all submarines of the future cages full of white mice are to be kept on the floor, whence the heavy emanations gradually rise, and it will always be someone's duty to go round and see how the mice are getting on.

Much interest attaches to the recent discovery at Combarelles, in the department of Dordogne, France, of a cave the rock walls of which are decorated with engraved figures, some of which are rudely colored, representing such animals as the horse, the cow, the bison, the reindeer, the mammoth and the wild goat. Most of these pictures, which number more than 100, are covered with a stalagmitic deposit, partially or entirely concealing them. It is believed that they were made in paleolithic times, and that they furnish evidence that the reindeer and the mammoth lived in France contemporaneously with the artists of the cavern.

It is a curious fact that the present session of the United States Congress contains no negro member. With the exception of a brief period from 1887 to 1889, this is the first session in thirty-two years when this has been the case. The first colored man to be sent to Congress was J. Willis Menard of New Orleans, who was elected to fill a vacancy in 1868. In 1870 Hiram R. Revells took his seat in the Senate, the first negro to be seated in that body. Blanche K. Bruce was the only other negro to enter the Senate. The Forty-Fourth Congress, which sat from 1875 to 1877, may be called the black Congress, since there were eight members in both branches.

There is an historical reason for the baneful repute of the opal. Two or three centuries ago the stone was popular in Europe, and the jewelers of Italy were especially cunning in its setting. At the height of its popularity came the plague, which made havoc in Venice. It was noticed by some observant person in that city that when a victim was at the point of death, his opal, if he wore one, brightened, while after death it became dull. As this accession of brilliance implied a sort of malignant purpose or intelligence in the stone, it was charged with the death of its owner. It never occurred to the scientists of that time to turn the incident around the other way, and see if the patient had anything to do with the opal. But that was the way of it: the heightened fever just before death caused the stone, which is affected by heat, to become more brilliant, and the chill and damp afterward dulled it.

Childish.

"It's very odd," says baby, "but, as everybody knows,
The longer that my body gets—

—the shorter grow my clothes!"

Rest.

Oh thought of infinite pity—
To sleep an aeon or two,
With never a care or sorrow,
And with never aught to do
But to rest, to rest, forgetting
We ever have sobbed or cried;
Forgetting that those who love us
And those whom we love have died.
—GRACE HIBBARD.

A Practical View.

Struggling pastor—The collections have fallen off terribly. Practical wife—It's that new vestryman who passes the plate; he never watches what people put in.—"New York Weekly."

The Bargain of the Future.

AN honest man entered the store of a clothier one day, and in reply to the query as to what could be done for him on that particular occasion, he assumed a humble pose and replied:

"Sir, I wish to furnish you proof that I am what I am."

"I cannot doubt your honesty," said the clothier, "but still proofs are proofs, and you may submit your documents."

"Do you remember that I was in your store six months ago?"

"Alas! I do not; but you look like a man of truth, and I will not gainsay you."

"I was here, sir, and bought this suit of clothes of you. It had been marked down from fifteen dollars to eight dollars and fifty cents."

"Yes, I recognize the cloth, and I grieve to think that I lost six dollars and fifty cents on that suit. I had to mark them down to make room for the quick-lunch business on the other side."

"You warranted the dye," continued the honest man, "and there has been no fading or crocking. I cannot say that you lied to me."

"And the price was right?"

"It was. I hug the delusion that I found a bargain."

"Then what is the cause of thy complaint?"

"It is no complaint, oh, clothier. It is that after I had got miles away I found a ten-dollar bill in the trousers pocket."

"A ten-dollar bill in the pocket of an eight-dollar-and-fifty-cent suit," mused the clothier. "Here, Ikey, come forward and explain."

"I—I was tempted," said the young man, as he trembled before his employer.

"So? Then it was you who substituted a ten for a twenty, and made this honest man a journey to get his just dues? Go, bring me a new, crisp ten, and later on I will see to your case."

"I would not that he come to poverty," said the honest man.

"He shall not, but I will stop it out of his wages and humble him to the dust. I always give a twenty-dollar bill with every eight-dollar-and-fifty-cent suit, and here is your balance. Take it, sir, with many apologies; and if I have put you to any expense, remember that all my eighteen-dollar overcoats have been marked down to nine dollars and a fifty-dollar bill placed in each pocket to close them out quickly and make room for a chicken-farm in the rear end of the store."—Detroit "Free Press."

A Remarkable Shot.

"HELLO, Ike!" said Perkins, as that individual walked into the store. "How'd you make out gunnin' to-day?"

"Tole'ble, jest tole'ble; that's all. I got four black ducks, six broadbill, and ten winters."

"I must say thet's pretty good shootin' fer one day," said Perkins.

"'Twas putty fair; but I should have got more yet if my shells hadn't gin out."

"Thet so?" said the constable. "'Twas hard luck and 'minds me o' one day 'bout four year ago, when I went down tu the medders gunnin' with thet old muzzle-loader er mine. I fooled 'round all day, till I had only one charge of powder left. Birds had been comin' 'long, one in a flock, and now and then tew lone ones, and all of 'em out er range, and I didn't git a bird. I was kinder discouraged; hadn't had a good shot all day. But jest as I was gittin' out of the stand I heard a goose hollerin', and I crouched down quick, I can tell yer, and purty soon he landed plump down in the sloughhole in front of me, where my decoys was. I was jest tu the south of the deacon's medder—you fellers remember how the marsh there is very narrer and runs right clus up to the beach—and my stand was jest abreast of thet low place on the beach they call the blow-hole. Wa-al, I moved 'round keerful, and got a bead on the old goose, when he must have smelt me, for jest as I was goin' tu let him hev it he begun swimmin' away from me. I didn't want tu lose him, so I begun to whistle him back, and, if you'll believe me, as I was a-sittin' there, what should I see comin' up by the blow-hole but a red fox. Boys, I'd hev given my hull farm for another charge of powder and shot thet minute, I guess. The goose by this time had circled round and begun tu come towards me agin, and the fox was a-standin' still. Gradually the old goose was gittin' in line with thet fox. 'By thunder!' 's I, 'if I can git 'em in a line there's a chance of gittin' 'em both.' In another minute they was right in line, and I let 'em have it. Jest as I fired, a bluefish jumped out of the water from a school on 'em that was chasin' bait inshore. I shot the goose plum through the head, lamed the fox so he couldn't run, and killed thet bluefish so he drifted ashore, and I got the hull three."

"Boys," said Perkins solemnly, "if you'll step intu the back room I'll set up the cider."—"Judge."

What He Came For.

A learned judge who was one of the guests at a dinner was unexpectedly called upon to reply to a toast. Recovering somewhat from his surprise, he said that his situation reminded him of the story of a man who fell into the water while he was fishing.

With no little difficulty he was rescued, and after he had regained his breath and was in a fairly comfortable condition, his rescuer asked him how he came to fall into the water.

"I did not come to fall into the water," replied the unfortunate fisherman. "I came to fish."

Misconceptions.

"A good story comes from Sydney," says the London "Globe," "where letters have been received from two American business firms asking whether communications to Australian merchants should be written in English or 'in the language of the country.' It recalls an astonishing trade circular received a short time ago by a business firm in Glasgow from a German manufacturer, also written in what his versatile clerk had apparently taken for the language of the country. It was in the best 'kailyard' style, and spoke of a 'muckle consignment o' chemicals.'"

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

The best wheel of fortune is honest labor.

HAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickerson, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

Wedding rings in St. Kilda used to be made of worsted.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed 'Perfection.'

Coral is a talisman against thunder and evils by flood and field.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.
Signed, JEAN VALCOURT,

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

If thy friend is honey, do not lick him up altogether.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes: "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

Many a man's self-conceit is due to his ignorance.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Over 250,000 copies of Charles Dickens' novels are sold annually.

Do not despair of curing your sick headache when you can so easily obtain Carter's Little Liver Pills. They will effect a prompt and permanent cure. Their action is mild and natural.

WHY WE LEAD

Our word stands guard over every transaction in our house, insuring your satisfaction, not merely for the worth of your money, but to the full limit of values. Our word is behind every advertised statement, insuring you of its absolute truth. The throngs of people who visit our store speak for our methods better than we can. If you have nothing else to do—even if you do not care to buy—come and look. It is interesting to watch others, sometimes and you will see with your own eyes and hear with your own ears the whys and wherefores of our leadership.

Ready At All Times

Because it is summer on Saturday and winter on Monday, that need not puzzle you. We are always prepared for warm weather or cold, wet weather or dry. But spring is a coy young thing, only playing with you, happy if she can catch you unprepared on the bright to-morrow.

TIMELY TOPICS

It is more than fifty years since the great Patti first appeared in Toronto, and the fact that she is soon to sing there again is of more than passing interest. It is likely, however, that the Diva will appeal more to admirers of the antique just now than to lovers of music.

Rain is badly needed. Things are getting as dry as a Trenton Courier editorial.

The License Commissioners can knock off a hotel license, but what do we care? they can't stop the fountain from playing.

It is said the members of the Court of Revision are putting in lots of rest these days. They need to. They'll get precious little in a day or two.

With the prospects of more tackses this year somebody ought to drive a few spikeses into the planking on the lower bridge. There would be less danger of accidents then.

Isn't it about time somebody turned the first sod in connection with the cornerstone of a new fence round the old d.s.b.g.? Whose move is it?

Come to think of it, hotel-keepers don't need accommodations when we have an accommodating lot of License Commissioners.

The Brockville Recorder says it is informed that Kingston is making efforts to get the Brockville and Belleville G.T.R. shops moved to the Limestone City. There's probably nothing doing. The G.T.R. authorities have no such grudge against any of their employes that they'd want to move them to Kingston.

The park is thronged with callow youth and pretty girls these nights, and airy persiflage fills the air. No doubt of it, the park is a boon to Belleville.

Relieve those Inflamed Eyes!

Pond's Extract

Reduced one-half with pure soft water, applied frequently with dropper or eye cup, the congestion will be removed and the pain and inflammation instantly relieved.

CAUTION!—Avoid dangerous, irritating Witch Hazel preparations represented to be "the same as" Pond's Extract which easily sour and generally contain "wood alcohol," a deadly poison.

UNPLEASANT PERSPIRATION

THE OFFENSIVE ODOR OF PERSPIRATION REMOVED BY FOOT ELM.

If there is any unpleasant perspiration odor from any part of the body, it can be entirely overcome by the use of Foot Elm. Dusted in the armpits or in the shoes, its antiseptic action is most effective, destroying those bacteria or germs which are the cause of disagreeable, sweaty odors. Besides this, it is soothing, cooling and refreshing, and can be used with impunity on the most delicate skin. Price 25 cents a box of 18 powders, at druggists or by mail. B. I. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

A Scotsman who had been employed nearly all his life in the building of railways in the Highlands of Scotland came to America in his later years, and settled in a new section on the plains of the far West. Soon after his arrival a project came up in his new home for the construction of a railway through the district, and the Scotsman was applied to as a man of experience in such matters. "Hoot, mon!" said he to the spokesman of the scheme, "ye canna build a railway across this country." "Why not, Mr. Ferguson?" "Why not?" he repeated, with an air of effectually settling the whole matter. "Why not! Dae ye no see the country's as flat as a floor, and ye dinna hae any place whatever to run your tunnels through?"

The King's Cup of Tea.

The King of England can be cutting as well as courteous. For example, the New York "Press" cites an incident which occurred before the King came to the throne.

At a large bazaar the Prince, being tired, had entered the refreshment-room. He asked a well-known society beauty, who was performing the role of waitress, for a cup of tea. This was soon brought to him, and smiling, he asked her how much he owed her for it.

"The price of the cup of tea, Your Royal Highness, is half a crown ordinarily, but (taking a sip from the teacup) when I drink from it the price is one guinea."

"I see," replied the Prince, quietly, placing a guinea on the table. Then putting a half-crown beside it, he said: "The guinea liquidates my first debt, and now might I trouble you to bring me an ordinary cup of tea, as I am thirsty?"

The society beauty was so overcome with mortification that she could not bring the second cup of tea, but got a friend to fill the order for her.

DAISY GORDON'S FOLLY

—OR—

THE WORLD LOST FOR LOVE'S SAKE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY,

Author of "The Crime of Hallow-E'en," "The Flirtations of a Beauty," "Willful Gaynell," "Little Leafy," "Only a Mechanic's Daughter," etc.

She turned her wild, dilated blue eyes full of mute, beseeching agony upon him to read her doom in his face. Did he recognize her? Would he denounce her?

How Aleck, her love, would turn from her if he knew the truth.

How horrified and dismayed Hetty and Olive would be, to say nothing of the rest of the people; and her father, her poor old father, who idolized her so, and who was standing close by her, joy and happiness on his honest, rugged face. The blow would be sure to kill him.

He would fall on his face and never speak again.

Like a frightened, mesmerized bird, Daisy stood facing the man who held her fate in his hands.

"It was only my fancy, a wild, absurd fancy," she heard him murmur.

Then to her intense relief he picked up his book, and the ceremony went on.

They were soon gathered around her, calling her Mrs. Hamilton.

That was the first thing that brought her out of the dazed dream that seemed to infold her.

"You shall never regret giving yourself to me, my darling," she heard Aleck whisper; and the words smote her like a dagger's thrust.

Farmer Gordon was the last to turn away from the happy bridegroom and the death-white bride.

"Always be kind and tender with my little one, Aleck, my boy," said the farmer, huskily. "You have won the first love of a trusting young heart—a heart pure and guileless as a little child's. See how she clings to you, hiding her face on your breast. Heaven bless her and bless you, Aleck, who have won my treasure."

Ah! how quickly that blessing would be turned to a curse deep and mighty if her father knew what she had done.

But that terrible secret was hidden as deep as the grave for ten long years. Yes, and for ten long years she would put it from her and be happy, let the cost be what it might.

CHAPTER X.

Too Late For Love—When the Heart is Broken.

When Aleck found himself alone in the carriage with his pretty bride, he drew her face to his and kissed it a hundred times.

He might well wonder why she fell on his breast with a great, gasping sigh, with a burst of passionate tears. She was praying from the depths of her heart that heaven would forgive her terrible sin.

He did not think it strange that she should weep— a wedding was a solemn, impressive scene; but he did wonder what were those murmurs passing over the white lips.

He was very patient with her, he let her weep some moments in silence, then he raised her bridal veil and kissed the tears away.

"There must be smiles, not tears, love," he whispered. "Remember from this hour you are all mine, not one cloud shall darken the sunshine of your life; give yourself up to joy and happiness, darling."

His—all his. How the words smote her. From among the wedding roses by the wayside, the dark, Satanic face of Harold St. John seemed to rise suddenly and confront her.

Would she never be able to forget? Would she be haunted ever by the cruel memory of the horrible past.

But for that what a life lay before her! But for that how happy she might be now that she really knew what love meant. Her soul was awakened, she loved Aleck with a passion and intensity that almost frightened herself.

"There is one thing that makes me superabundantly happy," continued Aleck, caressing the lovely white face. "I am your first and only love, Daisy. I have always had an ideal — you realize it. My greatest desire has always been to be the first and only lover of her whom I should choose for my wife; I am your first lover, Daisy. The thought, image— the memory of no other man is in your heart. I thank heaven," he continued, reverently, "that I have my heart's desire."

The words were so full of faith and trust, the wonder is that they did not strike her dead.

Three weeks passed like a dream to Daisy— but for the one terrible drawback of her life, she would have been unutterably happy.

Wedded to the man she loved, beautiful, young, wealthy, the world at her feet, what fate could be more enviable? No wonder that in the first intoxication of her dream, the voice of conscience had almost ceased to make itself heard.

Aleck had been rather anxious over her at first. She had seemed dull, dispirited; he often found her in tears, and he could not imagine why. Perhaps it was because she was so young to be wedded and taken away from home care.

But the gloom and depression soon wore away, and Daisy was radiantly happy.

There came a cruel awakening to her, and in a strange way.

They had long since reached Sacramento —their destination, and were domiciled in an elegant suit of rooms at one of the fashionable up-town hotels.

Aleck had thrown himself down in one of the easy lounging chairs by the window one day to look over the morning paper, and Daisy had drawn up a velvet hassock by his side, and seated herself upon it.

"You seem so very much absorbed in your paper today, Aleck," she said, stealing one pretty white arm round his neck.

"You would prefer that I should be making love as usual to you, my dear, I suppose," he replied, tossing back his dark, handsome head with a happy debonnaire laugh.

"But the fact is, my darling, I am greatly interested in reading an account of a noted criminal—Harold St. John —whom I once knew."

She gave a terrible gasp, and her face grew white.

"Do not be so alarmed, my darling," said he complacently. "I said I knew him, but that was in our college days. I am sorry that he has turned out so badly," he went on, "for he was really a bright fellow —gay, handsome, dashing and winning; a clever friend, and a most desperate foe.

"There was quite a little rivalry between us for the favor of a pretty girl; and St. John never forgave me because she threw him over, as he phrased it, for me," Aleck went on, laughingly. "He vowed vengeance against me, and said he should get even with me if it cost him a lifetime. He was sent up for some crime, but I see by today's paper he is out of prison again."

No cry broke from the white lips of the girl crouching lower and lower on the velvet hassock at his side.

"Shall I read it to you?" he asked.

And a voice, hardly human in its terrible anguish, answered, "Yes," but he was so preoccupied he did not notice it.

"It is too long and tedious to read in detail. I will give you a brief account of it. It seems that he had been making a little too free with his employer's money, and becoming bolder after a time, resorted to forgery.

"As is usually the case, he was detected, convicted, and sentenced to state's prison.

"It seems that he made a bold dash for liberty while they were taking him there, by leaping from the lightning express. All search proved futile.

"A few days later the firm received in cash from him —dollar for dollar —the amount taken. This of course created the most universal surprise. It is hinted by the paper that no special effort will be made to find him.

"His career has been anything but a savory one," continued Aleck; "some time before he shot a young lawyer in a duel, wounding him so severely that the poor fellow died after. As it was claimed to be an affair of honor, nothing could be done with St. John."

"And this man walks the earth free!" asked Daisy in an awful whisper, so full of terror that for the first time Aleck noticed it.

He started and looked at her anxiously; her terrible pallor alarmed him.

"I should not tell you of such cases to alarm you, you are so sensitive, my darling," he cried.

He stretched out his arms quickly toward her, for she had risen suddenly to her feet, and was standing before him swaying to and fro like a leaf in the wind.

But he was too late; with a piteous gasp she threw up her white hands, and fell like one dead at his feet. Janet, her maid, was summoned in all haste.

"I don't think you have any cause for alarm, sir," she said, "or reason to call in a doctor; it is only a swoon; I will have her out of it directly."

But Aleck was greatly perplexed despite Janet's comforting assurance.

Pains in the Back For Twenty Years

COULD NOT TURN OVER IN BED—KIDNEYS AND BLADDER AFFECTED — EXPERIENCED GREAT SUFFERING—CURED BY

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

The old people especially appreciate the effectiveness of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, because the kidneys are usually the first of the bodily organs to give out, and the result is backache, lumbago, pains in the side and limbs, urinary disorders and constipation.

Old people learn to trust in Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, for when all other treatments fail this great medicine seems to go directly to the diseased part, and promptly affords relief and cure.

Mr. David Misener, farmer, an old and respected resident of Port Robinson, Welland county, Ont., writes; "I wish to state to you that I had pain in my back and left side for over twenty years. At times I could not turn over in bed, I was so badly used up. I had cramps in my feet and legs, and my hands were so entirely useless that I could scarcely lift anything.

"Kidney disease was, no doubt, the cause of all my suffering, and sometimes the urinary trouble would be so bad that I would have to get up five or six times during the night. Fortunately, I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and they cured me completely. I am 79 years old and quite well now, but still occasionally use these pills to keep my system in good order. Several persons to whom I have recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have been equally benefitted."

A System that Will not keep You waiting

Whether you want Painting, Paper Hanging, Decorating, Graining, or anything in our line, we will not keep you waiting. WE WILL NAME THE DAY, and that very day you will find us at your work, with an excellent staff of workmen—the very best mechanics that can be secured—workmen that we can rely on and that please our customers every time.

OUR WALL PAPER TRADE this year is so far the largest in the history of this house, and there are reasons behind the increased trade, and here they are—

FIRSTLY—Times are good, people have money and know where to spend it to advantage.

SECONDLY—By comparison with other lines our customers find our prices much lower and our styles of Wall Paper much higher than the ordinary.

THIRDLY—We give free two yards of bordering with each double roll of the Wall Paper it matches.

We hang our paper at very reasonable prices and always please our customers whether in papering, painting or anything else.

At a Portuguese Bull-Fight.

It was to be a very great event—twelve bulls were to make their entry, and some famous Spanish bull-fighters were to prove their prowess, and the King was to be there, and Portugal's handsome Queen.

Out along the white, dusty roads, on past the outskirts of the town where olives and fig-trees peeped over the stone walls, and occasional palms reared their tall stems—all hurry, rush and bustle, until at last the open dusty plain was reached, and before us, like a modern Coliseum, rose the great, massive arena of the Bull Ring.

How like the Coliseum, though, in weak architecture, was the building; and all the mass of sightseers pressing on to their different corridors—the poor to the sunny side, the richer to that in shade.

Inside were the great arcades under the arches, and the wide flights of steps to the various tiers of seats or rows of boxes.

Up we went to where our ticket told me was the fauteuil allotted to us (No. 106, first "fila"), a good position we saw as we entered the tier, and at a "coup d'oeil" the whole vast arena was before us. Beneath was the level ring where Toro would appear; on our left the King's box, a Mauresque canopy in blue and gold, and draped in red and gold velvet. On our right and left, on this shady side of the arena, the boxes are hung with bright draperies of blue, gray, and yellow, setting off the gay dresses of the ladies fanning themselves in the boxes with tiny little Portuguese fans.

At last a roar goes up from some 15,000 throats—the arena will hold 20,000, but it is not packed—and then exactly opposite us enter all the toreadors—that is, all who take part in the fight. Cavallieros (or picadors, as the Spanish call them), bandarilheiros, furcados, and the assistants dressed in rich Georgian costume—in red and blue satin and velvet, with plumed flat hats.

Two cavaliers mounted upon two magnificent steeds, very unlike the wretched animals ridden into the ring to be slaughtered at a Spanish bull-fight; a dozen bandarilheiros and a dozen furcados and the assistants, all in their gay costumes, make a brilliant show on the smooth arena. The crash of music, the roar of the populace, and the brilliant spectacle send the Portuguese blood to fever heat; and quickly, after salutations to the King or President, all the toreadors retire and one horseman enters alone. A signal is given, the doors are thrown open, and in rushes a fine black bull. Like an arrow he makes for the horseman, who leaps aside; but Toro is after him, and chases him round the ring. With a deft movement, just as the bull's horns nearly reach the horse's flanks, the cavalier swerves and plants a dart in the bull's shoulders; the matadors rush in, and distract the bull's attention with their red cloaks. The bull no longer cares for horse or man; the red rag is his enemy, and he goes for it, and tosses and paws it and tramples on it until it is snatched from him, and a bandarilheiro stands before him, watches him; and leaps aside when Toro tries to toss him.

At last, maddened, the bull rushes at his tormentor, who races to the barrier of the arena, but halts there; and at the moment the bull's horns seem to touch him, plants his two decorated darts well in the bull's shoulders and leaps the barrier. But the bull leaps after him—half his black body is over; some of the assistants leap into the arena at the safest side; but Toro fails and falls back inside the arena, to start to his feet again and rush for the matadors, who advance with their cloaks to draw him toward them.

It is these red cloaks that prove how dull is Toro in his rage. The matador holds the red cloak at arm's length, the bull rushes at it—never at the man holding it—and the matadors pass the cloak over his head as he strives to gore it; the bull turns and goes for it again, seemingly oblivious that a man is moving it. Very agile and dexterous are the matadors; but there seems no danger to them, so wholly is the bull occupied with the cloak.

Not so the bandarilheiros. To face a rushing bull even with padded horns until his hot breath is in your face, and his horns lowered for the toss; to plant darts scarcely two feet long in his shoulders, and leap aside ere the toss is given, is a feat of courage, great swiftness and agility; and mighty is the shout from the vast crowd when this is done deftly and neatly, and the barbs stick well in the bull's tough hide. As the bulls get tired out with their tormentors, a group of eight or ten tame bulls, with long tube-like bells, are let into the arena. These encircle the wild bull that at once is tamed; and these trained bulls trot him out of the circle to his den, and a fresh bull is then introduced.—James Baker in "Ainslee's Magazine."

A Strange Pension Case.

Starting $11.37 in debt thirty years ago, and depending for a livelihood wholly on a pension of $50 a month from the government, the estate of Henry Wensler of Spiker, Wabash County, Ind., now amounts to more than $25,000, and is growing at a rapid rate. What is still more curious, the government having paid Wensler this pension for a generation, will, at his death, receive back the $50 a month, and $8,000 in addition. Such a state of affairs has never before come within the ken of the bureau officials, as reported by Special Agent Stephens. The story of Wensler and his accumulated wealth is an interesting one, and is thus related by the Wabash correspondent of the Indianapolis "News:"

"During the war, he enlisted from Wabash County, in the Eighty-Ninth Indiana Infantry. While on the march in the South he suffered from prostration by the heat, which caused mental derangement, and though he has not at any time been violent, he has been, to an extent, incapable of managing his affairs. For twelve years after his affliction Wensler was confined in the hospital for the insane at Indianapolis and was discharged as being harmless and requiring no attention. Application was made for a pension on account of his mental condition, and the case was pending some time. In 1867 his wife was divorced, and he was left comparatively friendless.

"At that time his condition was such that Jonathan Talmage, a local banker, was appointed guardian, and Mr. Talmage's report to the circuit court in September, 1870, showed that Wensler had overdrawn his account with his guardian $11.37. In the next report Mr. Talmage showed that the pension of $50 a month, with a considerable amount as arrearages, had been paid, and as Wensler had been supported by the State while at the hospital, the arrearages amounted to a tidy sum.

"In this way the foundation of the present fortune was laid. Four years ago Mr. Talmage died, and Thomas F. Payne, a wealthy land-owner of Wabash, was appointed guardian. The Pension Bureau required, about that time, that all reports of guardians of wards receiving pensions should be made to Washington. In his report of May 1, 1900, Mr. Payne set forth that the amount of funds belonging to Wensler in his hands was $23,430, and that the total cost of administering the guardianship was $1,214. With a few exceptions, the funds were loaned on gilt-edged security, at ten per cent. interest, and later at eight per cent. Some of the later loans have been made at six per cent. This interest was compounded, and the total mounted higher and higher. Wensler was active, and contributed to his own sustenance. For years he plied his vocation as a huckster, and drove about the county with his little wagon, on which were printed in sprawling letters the words: 'H. Wensler, Hugster.'

"Recently he went into business in a small way at Spiker's Station, four miles from Wabash. He lives alone, and his expenses for food and clothing are almost nothing. His guardian pays $3.50 a week for his food, and Wensler takes $25 a month for other expenses. The rest of the $50 pension, and the handsome increment from the $25,000 at interest, is re-invested as it comes in.

"The reports of the guardian to the Pension Bureau, making this remarkable exhibit, induced Commissioner Evans to send Special Agent Stephens to Wabash to look into the case, and he uncovered the facts as stated. The special agent says that as Wensler has no friends, the money at his death will revert to the government. Wensler is perhaps sixty-five years old, and never speaks unless addressed. He is expert in handling horses, and on several occasions has been injured in runaways, but he does not seem to know what fear is. Probably no estate in the country has been so capably managed.

"It is said of Wensler that a few years ago he was seized with a desire to manage his property, and went to the office of a well-known Wabash lawyer to state his case. 'See here, Mr. ——,' said Wensler, 'I am not insane, and I want my funds turned over to me.' The lawyer gazed at him intently for a moment, and then replied: 'You're drawing a good pension, aren't you?' Wensler admitted he was. 'Well, then,' drawled the lawyer, 'if you are not insane your pension will stop, for that's why you are getting it.' Wensler looked wild, and as he shot out of the door, he cried: 'The devil; I'm crazier than hell.' And after that he was content to waive all right to the management and control of his estate."

Fashions in Dawson City.

"To be fashionable in Dawson City," says a correspondent of the Indianapolis "Journal," "one must have his dog team. It is no uncommon sight to see a Dawson belle or a wealthy matron enveloped in her costly furs, skimming along behind a team of dashing dogs. These dogs are urged to greater speed by the call of 'mush on,' which means in English 'get up' or 'go ahead.' The men in Dawson City are by no means deprived of club-life. The fashionable organization of this kind in Dawson is known as the Zero Club. In summer the men play tennis, lacrosse, cricket and baseball. The women play tennis and serve tea. In winter they have the curling club and the skating rinks. It costs money to live in the Klondike, but one can buy anything from an automobile down if one has the price. A gown that a woman in Indianapolis would pay $25 for, she could not expect to get in Dawson for less than $100. However, if one has the money one can get the most fashionable gown there. A very good meal, accompanied by music, is now served in the best hotels in Dawson for $1. Wood is worth $20 a cord. Good apples were 50 cents apiece last winter, and beefsteak brings from 75 cents to $1.50 a pound during the winter. Christmas turkeys were $1 a pound last winter."

A good pun is rather uncommon, but a joke that may be so described was made recently by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, to whom some advocates of an Anglo-American alliance had appealed for an emblematic flower. Mr. Carnegie promptly suggested the dandelion, urging that the American "dandy," in the shrewd, Yankee, business sense of the term, joined with the British "lion," would result in a blossom which must rule the world.

SUITS FOR MEN

The Entirely Different Sorts.

Not satisfied with equaling in style, fit and excellence of workmanship the made-to-measure garments the best tailors produce, our makers are now fashioning their suits from the same fabrics which have heretofore been exclusive with the Custom Tailors.

Our showing of these suits is very extensive.

They are suits that the average man wants—they give him the style and exclusiveness he seeks without the extra cost of the tailors.

Even the most expert criticism will fail to discover that these suits were not custom made.

The broad showing we make including as it does every size for men of different propostions practically assurs a perfect fit for every man.

But in some cases an exact fit cannot be secured immediately and then we do as the tailors would do at a try on—make the necessary alterations that would secure perfection of fit.

Fancy mixed cashmeres—neat effects in Cheviots—three and four button sack styles including the new straight front.

$6.50 to $15.00

And by the way you can better judge the unassailable quality of these suits if you'll do a little comparing.

PROMINENT RESIDENT OF NAPANEE DEAD

LATE MRS. JOHN TAYLOR, OF THIS CITY, WAS HIS DAUGHTER.

Napanee, May 11.—Although not unexpected, the news of William Miller's death was a shock to his numerous friends on Sunday evening. For the past three or four days he has been lying at the point of death, and, although everything that medical aid could devise was done, life could not be prolonged. He died at 7 o'clock last evening. For more than half a century he has been identified with Napanee, and was a respected and much loved citizen. Deceased was born near Bath seventy-two years ago, a son of the late Samuel Miller, well known in Ernesttown and Bath. The Millers were one of the first settlers in that township. The late William Miller came to Napanee over fifty years ago starting in life as a clerk in a store. Later he conducted a business of his own. He was very successful in his business career, amassing quite a competency, and retiring from active life about thirty years ago. He is supposed to be one of the wealthiest men in Napanee. A family of three children survive. They are F. Miller, C.E., Napanee; Mrs. (Rev.) Dibb, Bath, and Miss Edith, at home. The surviving brothers are Davis Miller, Napanee, and Charles Miller, in the Western States. Mrs. Johnston, Bath, is a sister. Two sisters predeceased him some years ago, Mrs. Zina Ham, Napanee, and Mrs. J. Taylor, Belleville. His wife died about three years ago. He was a quiet, unassuming man, who had no enemies. He was a warm friend of the late Judge Wilkinson and felt the latter's death keenly, as he himself was not in the best of health at the time, and the Judge was called home without a moment's warning. Ever since the time he was lost in the backwoods, while on a hunting trip a few years ago, he has never been in his former state of health. Kidney trouble developed after that time and was the immediate cause of his death. Deceased was a member of St. Mary Magdalene's church. The funeral will take place Wednesday.

POOR GIRL, PITY HER.

Growing! Yes, into weakness, but not strength. Studies—plenty of them. Tired, of course she is, and weak too. Does not eat enough and digests far less than enough. This condition is so frequent, but how seldom noticed even by fond parents. Give her Ferrozone, then watch her appetite improve, her cheeks and lips grow ruddy, her step elastic, her spirits bouyant. All this simply the result of eating and digesting enough, making blood, and thereby strengthening the nerve and brain power. Ferrozone gives a woman's strength to weak girls. Your daughter or wife needs Ferrozone. Get it to-day.

Young courage and old caution make a strong pair.

ELECTION WITHIN A YEAR

MR. RUFUS POPE, M.P., PROPHESIES SPEEDY DISSOLUTION OF PARLIAMENT.

Montreal Gazette; "I have every reason to believe that there will be a general election for the House of Commons before another year, and the probability is that an appeal will be made to the country in January next," was one of the important utterances made last evening by Mr. Rufus Pope, M.P. for Compton.

The smoking concerts inaugurated a few weeks ago by the Junior Conservative Club have become very popular, the gathering last evening, under the presidency of Mr. Saumarez Carmichael, being a most interesting function, and, no doubt, of good profit to Montreal Conservatism.

Amongst those present were Messrs. W. B. Northrup, M.P.; Rufus Pope, M.P.; J. M. Hendrie, M.P.; B. Connaughton, P. G. Mignault, K.C., and a large number of others.

Mr. W. B. Northrup, M.P. for East Hastings, received an ovation, and delivered a splendidly practical speech. He compared the Liberals of Great Britain with the Conservatives of that country and held that all the great reforms had come from the Conservative party. He compared also the Canadian parties to the great disadvantage of the Reformers. The latter, he declared, had invariably talked reform, but the Conservatives brought about the truly reform measure.

Mr. Northrup, before concluding his admirable address, paid a splendid tribute to his leader, Mr. R. L. Borden, claiming that Canada and the Conservative party had a leader of whom all could be proud.

Mr. Rufus Pope, M.P., also made a rattling speech, calling the young men of the party to arms and predicting a general election and a victory for the Conservative party.

THE STRIKE QUESTION

MR. J. J. B. FLINT THINKS PARLIAMENT SHOULD DEAL WITH IT AT ONCE.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

My Dear Sir,—It would be a bold man who would publicly take one side or the other on the strike question. I heard it enunciated from the pulpit on Sunday last, that there would be no strikes if the principles taught in the "Sermon on the Mount" were observed. The great working, practical, commercial, political, and diplomatic world does not follow the ethical teachings of Christ, but pursues the opposite course. I wonder if the citizens of the United States and Canada are aware of the terrible crisis which is so imminent. The sky is serene and clear, prosperity and peace crown the countries with manifold blessings, bounteous harvests, overflowing granaries—apparently happy, and contented peoples, and yet, there approaches the grim spectre of a commercial, and financial war, which must come, which is upon us, and which must be fought to the bitter end. Centuries ago, the masses were driven like sheep, and slaughtered at the will of the lords of the manor. In the time of the Saxons the men who tilled the fields, who fought for their lords, wore collars with the names of their masters engraven on them, as badges of their servitude. Serfs they were. The years rolled on; how the masses of poor, struggling, ignorant manhood strove against their oppressors. They rent the heavens with their cries for relief from their intolerable burthens, but the heavens were as brass, no response came; then in France, suddenly down from the hills up from the valleys, rushed masses of men, wild, desperate, reckless, mad from their sufferings, they deluged France with rivers of blood, they hung every rich man, every aristocrat on the nearest lamp post, or guillotined him without the mock pretense of a trial. For the first time, they learned their power. This is the same power, but manifested in a different manner, which lies at the very heart of strikes. Strikers say, we are oppressed—we will fight our oppressors—organize; and the work goes on, until there is not a trade in United States or Canada, which is not organized. Unions, Brotherhoods—everywhere controlling all trades, controlling millions of men, holding in their hands the absolute sovereignty over every branch of industry, so affiliated, so connected, so bound together, so numerous, so vast, that their will MUST BE LAW. The primal object of the Union is to better the condition of its members, reform abuses, get more wages, shorter hours of labor. If the contractors and employers do not concede what is asked, STRIKE, utterly regardless of what wreck and ruin may be caused; still, STRIKE. The "boss" will, in such a case, present his arguments. The other side their replies. They do not agree. They cannot agree. What follows? Terrible losses on both sides, ruin to many, often untold sufferings to women and children. Many times the men are standing for what is right; sometimes the employers are right. Who is to say? Conciliation will go only a certain way; after that, it fails. At this moment, employers have determined in New York, that they will band together and resist any further concessions at whatever cost. 100,000 men are now without work; in another city 50,000. What does it mean? Stagnation in almost every trade, most terrible animosities engendered—a vast mass of discontented, idle, dangerous men, soon to become maddened, so that they will stop at nothing. In my humble opinion, if the country is to be saved from ruin, and almost anarchy, immediate steps should be taken to meet the emergency. If BOTH political parties will practically agree to appoint a Council, composed equally of both, with power to adjudicate absolutely upon all questions between labor and capital, with a Statute, which shall declare that this finding of the Council shall be ABSOLUTE and unappealable, with clauses making any interference BY ANY ONE with men who are going to work in accordance with the decree of the Council, a crime, then the power will be in the hands of the Council, which will have the entire force of the country behind it, to compel performance. This is the only scheme which suggests itself to me. No Government would dare to do this of itself. It would be torn to shreds at the next election; but if both sides were to join, actively, then the creation of a Council by the Government of the day could not be made a successful election cry.

Yours truly,
J. J. B. FLINT.

An Insulting Tramp

HOW ONE MILLION IS SPENT.

Not less than one million dollars is annually spent by people seeking an absolute cure for catarrh, bronchitis and Consumption. Numerous are the remedies, but the one standing preeminently above all others is Catarrhozone. It cures these diseases because it is sure to reach them. Catarrhozone is inhaled into the lungs, throat and nasal passages, and bathes every part of the diseased membrane with its germ-killing, healing vapor. You simply breathe Catarrhozone and it cures. Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING COMMENT.

From present appearances, there will be a good morning's sport in this city on May 25. The bicycle road race, which is to take place at 9.30 o'clock, is attracting a proper amount of attention, and already a large number have signified their intention of entering. It is now certain that there will be at least ten and perhaps a dozen prizes, providing the list of entries is large enough to justify so many. The intention of the promoters is (providing permission can be obtained from the City Council) to have the race start and finish at a point opposite the band stand on Queen Victoria Park. The race will be a handicap of ten miles—five miles up Dundas street and return. Entries must be in by Friday night, May 22, in order that the handicappers may have time to arrange the handicaps on Saturday. The race is open to all amateurs, and the handicaps will be open. Already many fast youngsters are in training, and the race should be productive of good sport.

It is the intention, at the conclusion of the bicycle road race, to have a punt race, starting and ending from a point near Queen Victoria Park. Mr. W. B. Deacon is pushing this event, which is a guarantee that it will be properly looked after. Between the two races mentioned above, Belleville sport lovers should be able to put in a pleasant morning on the 25th of May.

LACROSSE.

May be Match on 25th Inst.

A large number of lacrosse players were out for practice last evening, and the team is getting into good shape for the season's work. An effort will be made to have a match here with some outside team on Monday, the 25th inst.

On Friday evening a meeting of the lacrosse clubs forming this district will be held at Port Hope, when a schedule of games will be arranged. Mr. Winchester will probably represent the local club at the meeting.

YACHTING.

Challenger Will Soon Cross the Ocean.

Gourock, May 12.—Sir Thomas Lipton and Designer Fife have decided that it is not necessary to devote further time to trials between the Shamrocks on this side of the Atlantic. Consequently Saturday's race will be the last. The two yachts will be sent to the Greenock yard Monday in order to be fitted with their ocean rigs. Racing, however, has been arranged for every day this week.

The boats started at 10.30 this morning over the course from Gourock to Rothesay and Ballach Bay and return, forty miles. A light, steady wind was blowing, and fine weather canvas was set on both yachts.

Shamrock I. had the advantage in being two hundred yards dead to windward when the yachts started to beat down Channel on the first leg of the course. But the cup challenger, lying very high in the wind, pulled up steadily. After a couple of miles short tacking the Shamrocks came together, and the challenger had done so well that she was able to cross the bows of her opponent and take the lead. On turning the Rothesay mark at the finish of a ten-mile beat, the times were; Shamrock III. 1.03.15; Shamrock I., 1.11.40

A FARMER CURED OF RHEUMATISM.

"A man living on a farm near here came in a short time ago completely doubled up with rheumatism. I handed him a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and told him to use it freely and if not satisfied after using it he need not pay a cent for it," says C. P. Rayder, of Pattens Mills, N. Y. "A few days later he walked into the store as straight as a string and handed me a dollar saying, 'give me another bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I want it in the house all the time, for it cured me.'" For sale by all druggists.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

Commencing May 2nd and during June, July and August The Intelligencer Office will close on Saturdays at 5 p.m. sharp. Customers and subscribers will please note this.

FOR ODDFELLOWS' HOME

A SITE HAS BEEN PURCHASED NEAR OAKVILLE AT A COST OF $7,000.

The members of the Independent Order of Oddfellows in Ontario have within the past few days, through their Treasurer, Mr. McCormack, and a special committee, purchased a piece of property just north of Oakville, on the lake shore road, for which $7,000 will be paid just as soon as the title of the site has been proven. The desire of the Order for many years will then be realized, and a substantial structure, costing many thousands of dollars, will be erected, to be known as the Oddfellows' Home, in which aged members of the Order, widows of deceased members, and orphan children of deceased members will be taken care of. Fully $20,000 has already been contributed towards this work, and the recent purchase of the land is the crystallization of much effort into the practical accomplishment of the fixed purpose.

GAMEY ENQUIRY RESUMED

World Reporter Saw Mr. Stratton With Frank Sullivan.

THEY TALKED IN CORRIDOR.

Mr. Stratton Swore That He Had Not Talked With Sullivan Between Sept. 9 and March 9, But Cavers Swore He Saw Them Together Talking Outside Provincial Secretary's Office Between the 1st and 10th Feb.—Manitoulin Conservatives Say Gamey Ran as a Straight Conservative.

Toronto, May 13.—The Gamey Commission resumed its labors yesterday morning, and took evidence for two hours and a half, after which it adjourned until this morning at ten o'clock.

No Further Examination.

The Ontario Bank has finally decided, after some weeks of controversy, that no outsider shall be permitted to examine its books. A letter to this effect from Mr. Walter Barwick, K.C., was read, but it was added that the officials of the bank had been instructed to look into the books, and that they would be in a position to report to-morrow.

A couple of reports as to the condition of the jail at Little Current, a minor matter, which has come up in connection with the enquiry, were put in.

What a Reporter Saw.

Charles Cavers, reporter for The World newspaper, was the first witness called. He testified that he knew Frank Sullivan personally, and Hon. J. R. Stratton by sight and had spoken to him. Between January 16 and February 10, of this year, he was visiting the Parliament Buildings daily. On one occasion he was with Sullivan in the corridor, and Mr. Stratton came along. Sullivan left him and remained in conversation with the Provincial Secretary for upwards of five minutes.

Mr. Johnston, in cross-examination, asked Mr. Cavers to fix the day of the week. He said that it was difficult, as he went to the Parliament Buildings every day at that time; it was, however, late in the afternoon, and he thought between the third and tenth of February. Sullivan told him that Stratton was a friend of his, and that he would introduce Cavers to him some day; and that Mr. Stratton would put him on to what was going on in the buildings.

Mr. Johnston read Mr. Stratton's testimony, in which he stated that he had not had an interview in the corridor about Gamey a few weeks before the House met, and asked Cavers if he would contradict it. The witness said he could not, as he did not hear the subject of the conversation.

Mr. Ritchie, in re-examination, read extracts from Mr. Stratton's evidence, in which he swore that he never talked with or had any communication with Frank Sullivan from September 9 until March, 9, the day before the House met.

Gamey Ran as Conservative.

William H. Hearst, barrister of Sault Ste. Marie, testified that he had campaigned in Manitoulin with Mr. Gamey, and that the latter had made it clear at his meetings that he was running on the straight Conservative platform. The only speakers at most of the meetings were Mr. Gamey, Dr. Fell and the witness.

In cross-examination, Mr. Hearst said he knew nothing about Mr. Gamey's personal canvass.

Dr. Fell, who was Conservative candidate in East Algoma in the campaign of 1898, followed. In last May's campaign he stumped Manitoulin in all its settlements on Mr. Gamey's behalf. At some meetings Gamey was present with him. He swore that Gamey ran as a straight Conservative. He had spoken in many ridings, but had never heard more bitter denunciations of the major portion of the Ross Government's policy than those which fell from Mr. Gamey's lips.

To Clear Misapprehension.

Dr. Fell said he wished to clear up some misapprehension that existed among honest people on this question. Every candidate in his experience, be he Grit or Tory, used certain stereotyped phrases stating that he would reserve to himself the right of judgment on the measures he would support. That was all that Gamey had said.

Cross-examined, Dr. Fell said that no sane man nowadays went to Parliament bound hand and foot.

Gamey Denounced Ross Policy.

John Kinney, farmer, and Town Clerk of Gore Bay, was next sworn. He stated that he had attended several meetings held by Mr. Gamey, at which Gamey spoke as a Conservative and denounced the policy of the Ross Government. At the Conservative convention Gamey was given a free hand, but witness said he would certainly find fault with Gamey if he voted for a Government measure in the interest of the constituency alone. Witness naively admitted he was a strong politician.

J. A. Kinney, who was one of the concealed witnesses in the piano factory, said he heard Mr. Gamey at several campaign meetings. Mr. Gamey said nothing to justify anyone in thinking that he would support the Liberal Government.

Samuel King, of Sturgeon Falls, clerk, resided at Providence Bay during the general elections of 1902. He corroborated the evidence of previous witnesses. During his testimony, it transpired that he had been in Chicago for some weeks in 1902, but had returned in time to cast a vote in the election. This led Mr. McEvoy to ask the witness: "Are you an American citizen?" Witness replied in the negative.

No Conservative Measures Bad.

A. A. Riley, a Toronto citizen, who came from Little Current last December, and was formerly Mayor of the town, next took the stand. He was nominated at the Conservative convention, but retired in Mr. Gamey's favor. Nothing was said at any of the meetings about Mr. Gamey giving an "independent support" to the Ross Government. Mr. Johnston was curious to know if the member for Manitoulin should oppose bad measures initiated by the Conservatives, but the witness didn't expect there would be such measures.

"My Dear Foy" Again.

Mr. Ritchie called attention to the reason Mr. Stratton gave for addressing a letter in October to "My dear Gamey" if he were not on friendly terms, that he might have been thinking of "My dear Foy." He produced a letter written by Mr. Blake to Mr. Foy, dated December 27, nearly three months later, so that Mr. Stratton could not have had it in mind.

Mr. Johnston retorted that there was another "My dear Foy" letter written before the 22th, in which vitriol was poured on the party.

Mr. Ritchie dissented from this.

Mr. Johnston said that if necessary he would call upon Mr. Foy to produce the correspondence with Mr. Blake, for Mr. Blake did write before the general elections promising to speak for him in Toronto.

Mr. McPherson put in a number of technical exhibits, covering minor points in the case. The question of how Mr. D. A. Jones should be called was discussed. Mr. Johnston undertook to examine him in chief, with the privilege of cross-examination if new matter were brought out.

The Chancellor asked if Mr. Gamey would testify. Mr. Ritchie said that Mr. Blake, who was absent from the court, was considering that point.

After the filing of a few formal documents the court adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning.

Cleaning Up Evidence.

If the evidence is concluded to-day, argument will continue this week. This seems unlikely, however, and the plan at present in view is to clean up all the evidence this week, and adjourn until Thursday, May 21. It is estimated that the addresses of counsel will take three full days.

THE TREADGOLD CONCESSIONS.

Mr. Casgrain's Resolution Voted Down by 95 to 52 in Commons.

Ottawa, May 13.—In the House yesterday, Mr. Maclean introduced his bill to change the name of the Hudson Bay to the Canadian Sea.

On motion to go into supply, Mr. Casgrain moved an amendment condemning the Government for the Treadgold concessions in the Yukon, and spoke in its favor. He quoted The Dawson Sun on the value of the concessions.

Sir William Mulock contended that Mr. Casgrain had greatly exaggerated the value of the concessions, but promised that the Government would make a searching investigation into the charges.

Mr. Pringle said that the Liberal Association of Dawson had gone so far as to charge that fraud and misrepresentation must have been used to obtain use of the enormous concessions.

Minister Blair replied that he thought that Mr. Pringle, though generally a fair-minded man, had worked himself into a somewhat unreasonable frame of mind on this question. There was no evidence that the country would lose an enormous revenue, and there was nothing to interfere with the rights of miners, except in places where works were actually constructed.

Mr. Porter argued that the sale of lands by Order-in-Council was illegal.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier defended the concessions. He argued that ample means had been taken to defend the public interests, and the interests of individual miners. He said that in the first Order-in-Council the abandoned claims were given to the syndicate that seemed fair at the time, but the Government had found reason to modify its view, and the second Order-in-Council very much restricted the power of the syndicate to work abandoned claims. The Order-in-Council had been amended again and again in deference to the protests of miners and others.

Mr. Borden, leader of the Opposition, asked how it was that the Government had not long ago opened the investigation which they had promised this evening. What did the Liberals in the Yukon mean when they said these concessions had been obtained by fraud? Had the Government had any information on this subject? There should either be free competition or efficient Government supervision.

The debate was continued by Messrs. Fitzpatrick, Barker and Osler, and the division taken at 1 o'clock. Yeas, 52; nays, 95; Government majority, 43.

Ralph Smith of Vancouver, Jabel Robinson of West Elgin and Mr. Puttee of Winnipeg voted with the Opposition.

The House adjourned at 1.10.

Father of Welland Canal Dead.

St. Catharines, May 13.—After an illness of six months from cancer, William G. N. Thompson, former superintendent of Welland Canal, died yesterday morning. Born in England 70 years ago, he was educated for a civil engineer and was engaged on important work at different times in India, China, and other countries. He superintended the construction of the Welland Canal and the Canadian Canal at the Soo. In 1890 he was appointed superintending engineer, from which position he retired two years ago. He married a daughter of the late Judge Macdonald, who, with one daughter, survives.

Manchuria Now Open.

Pekin, May 13.—The Russian Charge d'Affaires, M. Plancon, has given reassurances regarding Manchuria. He has issued an official notice that all Manchuria is open to foreign travel, and adds that passports are no longer necessary.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC BILL

Down East M.P.'s Advocate Line Beginning at Moncton, N.B.

Commons Railway Committee Receives Information From General Manager Hays and Discuss Subsidies and New Routes to Canada's Granary—Arrangement With the Intercolonial—Must Be Canadian.

Ottawa, May 14. — The Railway Committee met yesterday, when the Grand Trunk Pacific bill came up again for consideration. The preamble was adopted without discussion.

In reply to questions by Mr. A.E. Kemp, Mr. Hays said that the present freight arrangement with the Intercolonial and the Grand Trunk was satisfactory to the Grand Trunk. The proportion of receipts which the Grand Trunk obtained for this traffic was also satisfactory. Under the existing arrangement the Grand Trunk handed over to the Intercolonial a considerable quantity of grain for shipment by way of St. John and Halifax.

Mr. Hays also stated in reply to Mr. Kemp that under an arrangement similar to that which is in existence at the present time, the Grand Trunk Pacific would be able to hand over the products originating on their line to the Intercolonial to be so shipped. Products originating on the Grand Trunk Pacific would find their way, he said, to Halifax and St. John with as great facility as to Portland.

When They Would Build.

"If," said Mr. Hays, "We fail to make a satisfactory arrangement with the Intercolonial Railway, then we will build a line to a winter port in the Maritime Provinces."

Mr. H. J. Logan next put a couple of questions on this point.

"You do not," said Logan, "propose to build independent of the Intercolonial?"

Mr. Hays—"I would not say that. What I did say was that if satisfactory arrangements were not made with the I.C.R. then we would build to the Maritime Provinces. If they did build into the Maritime Provinces. If they did build into the Maritime Provinces then it would likely be to Moncton."

Mr. Logan—"Do you intend to build north or south of Lake Abitibi?"

Mr. Hays—"Either north or south, somewhere near there. He could not say until surveys were made."

I.C.R. Not Satisfied.

Mr. Blair explained that while the arrangement between the Grand Trunk and the Intercolonial might be satisfactory to the Grand Trunk, it was not to the Intercolonial. The rate which the I.C.R. received from the G.T.R. at Montreal was the same as that which was paid to the G.T.R. to Portland. The distance to Halifax and St. John was very much greater, and therefore the arrangement would require to be amended considerably in this regard. The I. C. R. could handle at Halifax and St. John, all the traffic that the Grand Trunk would give.

Mr. Fowler spoke of the charter being fixed so that the company would be compelled to take the traffic to the Maritime Provinces. Mr. Hays replied that the company could not control the shippers.

From a National Standpoint.

Mr. Emmerson said that unless the company agreed to carry their line to the Maritime Provinces, the object of making the road an all-Canadian road, with a Canadian ocean port, could not be obtained. He was not in favor of the terms of the proposition as now before the committee. The committee should grapple with the question from a national standpoint. The only way that this could be done properly was by the Government constructing a line into the wheat fields of the great west. He did not think that the people were just now clamoring for a transcontinental line. Before any subsidy was granted to the Grand Trunk the road should be ensured to go to a Maritime Province port. He spoke from a Canadian standpoint.

Mr. Logan said the committee should see to it that the road was constructed on Canadian territory with an ocean port on the Atlantic and the Pacific. He had no confidence, however, in the Grand Trunk carrying out its promises. It had already broken all the promises it had made in connection with the Drummond County contract. All that Mr. Hays now said was that the Maritime Provinces would get the preference. What he wanted to see was an arrangement which would make it to the company's advantage to take the traffic to St. John. If the company built to Moncton, this advantage would be obtained.

Mr. Wade (Annapolis), spoke strongly for the company building to Moncton, and therefore he would suggest amending the bills so that the company would commence its road at Moncton.

Mr. Blair's Object.

Mr. Blair said that while there was force in Mr. Wade's suggestion, he did not desire, if it could be helped, the building of another line which would parallel the Intercolonial from Quebec, and therefore it might be possible to make an arrangement between the G.T.R. and the Intercolonial. He thought this could be done between himself and Mr. Hays. If not then the G.T.R. could build.

Hon. D. C. Fraser was in favor of giving a charter to any company that would build. He was in favor of anything that would enhance the price of what Canada produced. If Canadians got a good price it mattered not where the goods went. When the subsidy came up for consideration he would then and not until then agree with very much of what was being said. One thing at a time was sufficient. The subsidy could be dealt with when it came up.

Mr. Galliher favored an all-Canadain road and Mr. Cargill wanted the Government to extend its road to Winnipeg. Mr. P. Roche said that Halifax had excellent terminal facilities for handling all the traffic that could be sent to it.

The committee adjourned without passing any of the clauses.

The bill comes up again on the 27th.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Street Car Kills Pedlar.

Hamilton, May 14.—William Cohen, a peddler, who lives at 146 North Ferguson avenue, was fatally injured last evening. He was run into by a street car, at the corner of Herkimer and McNab streets. His skull was fractured, and he lived only about ten minutes after reaching the hospital.

THE AUSTRALIAN STRIKE

Premier Irvine's Bill Proposes Drastic Remedies.

The Issue, He Said in His Speech, Concerned Every Country in the World—What the Far-Reaching Bill Provides—A Conciliatory Amendment to the Second Reading Was Voted Down by 58 to 30 Votes.

Melbourne, Victoria, May 14.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday, Premier Irvine made a speech on the subject of the strike. He said the country faced a long meditated revolt against established authority. The issue concerned every country. The strike had thrown the State into confusion, and it would be a fight to a finish.

The Premier then moved the second reading of a bill providing for the suppression of the strike, which was not retrospective, and which will not remain in force after the termination of the strike. It provides that an employe leaving his work without giving four nights' notice is to be assumed to have joined the strike, and will incur the penalty of $500 fine or a year's imprisonment, with loss of pension, and will be ineligible in future for Government employ.

The bill also forbids interference with employes, the collection of strike funds, or encouraging the strike in any manner.

The bill further empowers the police to destroy documents encouraging the strike, makes printers thereof offenders against the law, and declares meetings to be unlawful if four strikers are present. All persons refusing to disperse are liable to arrest without warrants, and the police are empowered to forcibly enter meetings.

An amendment expressing regret at the strike and promising that Parliament would consider the grievances of the railroad men if they return to work was defeated by 58 to 30 votes.

10 KILLED, 200 INJURED.

Dock Laborers' Strike at Valparaiso Becoming Very Serious.

Santiago, Chili, May 14.—The strike of dock laborers at Valparaiso is becoming more serious. The strikers, after setting fire to the Guay, as well as to the offices of the South American Steamship Company, had a number of encounters with the police, during which ten persons were killed and 200 were injured. A detachment of 3,000 troops has been despatched to Valparaiso to quell the disorder. The Government has refused all offers to compromise the difficulties, and is determined to adopt the sternest measures to restore order.

6,000 Return in New York.

New York, May 14.—Pending the arbitration of their grievances, most of the 6,000 strikers returned to work on the subway yesterday.

INTERNATIONAL COURTESIES.

The Vice Regal Party's Visit to Windsor and Detroit, Mich.

Windsor, May 14.—The visit of Canada's Governor-General, Lord Minto, and Lady Minto, and daughter to this city yesterday was made the occasion for an international celebration, 25,000 people participating. Troops on both sides of the line vied with each other to do honor to the King's representative in Canada.

In addition to the splendid reception tendered the distinguished visitors at the Russell House in Detroit last evening, a thousand United States troops, regulars and militiamen, marched under arms as a guard of honor to the vice-regal party as their carriages traversed several of the main thoroughfares of that city.

Mayor Maybury, with a number of Detroit ladies and gentlemen, escorted Lord and Lady Minto across the river from Windsor early last evening in the yacht Vita.

After the officers had been presented by Col. Bartlet, Their Excellencies proceeded to hold an informal reception, assisted by Lady Eileen Elliot.

At 4 o'clock an adjournment was taken to the large drill hall, where Their Excellencies, after taking their place upon the platform, listened to an address of welcome by Mayor Drake. Lord Minto replied briefly, thanking the Mayor for the warm welcome extended him on the occasion of his first visit to Western Ontario.

During his stay at Detroit Lord Minto was constantly guarded by half a dozen plain clothes men. The whole affair passed off most satisfactorily and pleasantly.

Another Hamilton Suicide.

Hamilton, May 14.—The fourth case of self-destruction within the past few days was brought to the notice of the police yesterday morning, when Alfred Emberson, 68 North Wellington street, ended his life with a razor. He made two big gashes in the front of his throat, and then slashed his wrists. He was 51 years of age.

500 More New Settlers.

Halifax, N. S., May 14.—The steamer Carthaginian, which arrived yesterday afternoon from Liverpool via St. John's, Nfld., landed 522 passengers last evening. They are a mixed lot, consisting of English, Scotch, Norwegian, Swedes, Finns, Danes and Russians, and are bound for various points in Canada.

WEAK AND EXHAUSTED.

"Though weak and exhausted I was often unable to eat. After taking Angier's Petroleum Emulsion for two weeks I was able to eat and enjoy three meals a day, and the nervousness left me entirely."—M. E. Nesbitt, Toronto, Canada.

CIRCUS TAX RAISED.

Ontario Legislature Also Cuts Out Gambling Accessories—Important Legislation Brought Down in Assembly.

Toronto, May 14.—Premier Ross brought down in the House yesterday a bill to increase the tax on circuses and traveling shows from $50 to $100 a day for the big shows, and a graduated scale for smaller ones. It is provided that the license may be revoked when gambling is carried on in connection with the show, and heavy penalties may be exacted from the owners of the peanut shell and other games of chance, or no chance. The minimum penalty is raised from $100 to $200, and the maximum penalty from $200 to $300, while the term of imprisonment is increased from 30 days to three months. The proprietor of the show will be held liable for any gambling operations in connection therewith. It is also provided that an official of a municipality must require the production of the Provincial license before issuing a license of the municipality, and he will be liable to a penalty if he fails to carry out this provision.

Detectives to Be Dead-Headed.

By the bill, detectives will be given free access to theatres, ball games and public gatherings.

The sideshows, forming a part of an industrial exhibition or agricultural fair, shall not require to be licensed under the act.

The Premier also brought down a bill to protect the banks of the Niagara River, from Fort Erie to Chippewa, from the wash of the river, and to improve the highway along the bank. The Premier proposes that any electric railway company, which may receive a charter to run over the highway, shall enter into a contract to widen and otherwise improve the highway.

Of Interest to Candidates.

A third bill introduced by the Premier amends the Statute Law, by providing that a person is not disqualified from being elected a member of a municipal council by reason of any exemption privileges he may enjoy, even if based on a contract or agreement with the corporation.

Other bills introduced by the Premier were: To amend the act for the improvement of public highways, and to amend the Municipal Act.

Mr. Pettypiece introduced a bill, amending the act respecting the Town of Sault Ste. Marie, the Lake Superior Power Company and certain other companies.

Conmee Act Repeal.

Mr. Downey's bill to repeal the Conmee clauses of the Municipal Act will come up for a second reading on Friday, the second reading being deferred at the request of Mr. Ross, owing to the absence from the House of Mr. Conmee.

Second Readings.

Mr. Joynt moved the second reading of his bill to amend the act respecting veterinary surgeons. It went to the Agricultural Committee.

Mr. Powell's bill to prevent the overcrowding of street cars was declared lost on division.

The bill of Mr. Little of Cardwell, to allow corporations to narrow their highways, was sent to the committee.

Second readings were given to a number of private bills.

In committee of the whole House several bills were adopted.

City of Toronto's Bill.

The bill of the city of Toronto which proposes to wipe out the property qualifications for Mayor and Aldermen so that anyone who has a vote in municipal affairs may be elected to the City Council. It reduces the property qualifications for voters from $400 to $200, and allows women who have the requisite property qualification to vote, whether married or single. There are also some elaborate provisions in reference to the transmission of electricity, similar to the provisions of the Premier's power bill.

The bill went to the Municipal Committee.

Won't Introduce License Bill.

Premier Ross is authority for the statement that the Government will not this session introduce the bill outlined in the speech from the throne, dealing with a proposed reduction in the number of licenses and an attempt to regulate the treating system. At any rate, that is the reply he gave to a deputation from the Ontario Alliance that waited upon him in his office yesterday morning, although there seems to have been a general endeavor to prevent it leaking out.

DRAMATIC CRITIC UPHELD

BRITISH APPEAL COURT REVERSES DECISION AGAINST HIM.

London, May 13.—The Appeal Court has reversed the judgment of the court below in the case of the manager of a fifth-rate travelling show against the Western Morning News, in which the trial jury gave the plaintiff a verdict of £750 damages and costs for printing an adverse criticism of the show. Costs are also granted to the newspaper. The court held that the criticism was fair, and that the jury did not have the right to substitute its own opinion of the merits of the play for the critic's opinion, or to test the fairness of the criticism by any such standard. The court added that it was of the highest importance to the public that a critic be saved from such a possibility. The verdict was against the evidence, and the trial judge had misdirected the jury.

POOR GIRL, PITY HER.

Growing! Yes, into weakness, but not strength. Studies—plenty of them. Tired, of course she is, and weak too. Does not eat enough and digests far less than enough. This condition is so frequent, but how seldom noticed even by fond parents. Give her Ferrozone, then watch her appetite improve, her cheeks and lips grow ruddy, her step elastic, her spirits bouyant. All this simply the result of eating and digesting enough, making blood, and thereby strengthening the nerve and brain power. Ferrozone gives a woman's strength to weak girls. Your daughter or wife needs Ferrozone. Get it to-day.

Doing good is the only certainly happy action of a man's life.

GRIT GERRYMANDERING

WHAT SOME GRITS WANT.

An outline of what is proposed by the present Ottawa Government, in re-arranging and dividing up the present electoral ridings in Ontario, has been foreshadowed in telegrams from Ottawa already published in our columns.

Conservative constituencies, it will have been seen, are to be the principal sufferers.

Hastings has in the past been too Conservative, hence it is to be robbed of one representative. Henceforth there are to be but two ridings, each electing one member, instead of three as in the past. How the County is to be carved up has not yet been made public.

Rumor is rife as to what is to be done, and what local Grit wire-pullers are attempting to accomplish, in order if possible, to secure one of the ridings for the "Machine" governing party.

One proposition is to return to the old boundaries of South and North Hastings, minus Trenton, which town they desire to be attached to East Northumberland. This, the Grits argue, would reduce the Conservative majority in South Hastings by about 150. Suppose this is done, what becomes of the much-boasted theory of County boundaries? Trenton for over a third of a century has been a part of the County of Hastings, both for municipal and political purposes. What care these Grits for principle—real or assumed—if political ends are to be attained?

We have been asked several times lately if we are still serving Lunches now that the oyster season is over.

Yes, we are still serving Lunches. We have added a number of new dishes to take the place of oysters, and are prepared to serve you a meal at any hour of the day or night up to midnight.

J. ARTHUR MARSH.

The next novel proposition which has been mooted, is, to make the South Riding a checker-board constituency; that is, to put Trenton into East Northumberland, and make the South Riding consist of Sidney, Huntingdon, Tyendinaga, Deseronto and Belleville, thus throwing Thurlow into the North Hastings. It is difficult to conceive how any stupid Grit would think of such a division, as it would make the two Ridings sure Conservative.

The most comical suggestion yet made, is one, the creation of a leading Grit mind, who is aspiring to a high and honorable position in the political world. It is that Coleman Ward, in Belleville, which in the past has given, upon some occasions, from 80 to 90 Grit majority, be annexed to what is now East Hastings, for the purpose it is thought of making that constituency, with Trenton transferred to East Northumberland, sure for the Grits.

This is no fiction. The rattle-brained would-be statesman who has proposed such an absurdity, has been corresponding with Secretaries of other ridings, to secure their approval.

Think of it, these are the Pharisaical, professed Puritans, who for the past twenty years have been brawling about the iniquities of gerrymandering.

Our readers will wait with some degree of interest the Government scheme, by which they expect to secure one of the Ridings in Hastings.

There was an eloquent, child-like simplicity about the evidence given by Mr. Stratton the Ontario Provincial Secretary, which must have impressed itself upon the minds of the judges, as it has done upon the minds of the public. Mr. Stratton told the Court that when the Premier, Mr. Ross, left Canada for England, the looking after the protests was confided to him, but he did not know that there was any election fund, and if there was such a fund, he did not know who was the Treasurer or Secretary! Does not this evidence verify the truth of the old adage: "Where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise?" And does it not also suggest the question:—"Where did the money come from to enter some 15 or 20 protests at $1000 each?" Truly, Mr. Stratton, you are too verdant for the position you hold.

An Old Soldier Tells What O. R. Kidney Cure Did for Him.

Belleville, Ont., July 25, 1902.

The O. R. Medicine Co., Limited
Toronto, Ont.:

Dear Sirs,—While suffering severely with pain in my groin from kidney and bladder trouble, I was strongly advised by several of my neighbors to use the O. R. Kidney Cure. Before I had taken one bottle it fully satisfied me that I had secured the right thing, and since being cured I, like my friends, have told others of this wonderful remedy for all diseases of the kidneys and for urinary troubles.

I remain, dear sirs,
CAPTAIN A. PETERSON.

O. R. Kidney Cure is put up in liquid form, quickly assimilated and gives instant relief. Price 50c bottle. O. R. Liver Pills 25c bottle. O. R. Dyspepsia Tablets 25c box at druggists or write.

HEAVY LOSSES CAUSED BY BUSH FIRES

MANY PARTS OF HASTINGS COUNTY SUFFERED SEVERELY.

Readers of The Intelligencer have from time to time seen it stated that bush fires had been doing great damage in many parts of the back townships of Hastings County. The following summary will show the damage sustained, so far as heard from:

At the Village of Bancroft the efforts of townspeople and the Rathbun Company were united to withstand the fire which came from the north and threatened to wipe out the Rathbun Company's mills, offices and lumber yard. Had these gone, nothing could have saved the village.

Along the line of the Central Ontario Railway, and for miles on either side of it, from Bancroft to Ormsby Junction, a distance of twenty miles, the fiery element consumed and destroyed thousands of dollars' worth of property.

At Brouson an immense amount of pulpwood and all kinds of timber was swept away, nothing being left except the station.

Just a few rods south of L'Amable station another fire started, and but for the direction of the wind, nothing could have saved the yard, station, freight sheds and the village. As it was the wind blew it away and carried it to Egan Creek settlement, where the following farmers lost their barns, machinery and grain: James Sutton, Frank Moore, Charles Connell, William Smith and George Sager. Fences were swept before it, and even sheep in the fields were burned, the wind carrying cinders and sparks.

At the Turriff settlement the following lost their houses and barns: John Sebryver, R. Black and Thos. Betts. Mr. Black also lost a flock of thirty sheep.

Two miles further south at Egan Creek the Rathbun Company's office buildings were all swept away, men who were at dinner barely having time to escape from the house, not saving their clothes or trunks. Here for about four miles at the railway siding they fought to save the Rathbun Company's wood, and by so doing saved about fifteen cars belonging to the railway.

Just south of this at Baskin's grade several families by name of Reid lost houses and all their effects, except what they buried in the sand.

At Spring Lake Camp Mr. John McKenzie, of Ormsby, lost about 600 cords of wood, pulpwood and cedar poles. Loss $2,500, with no insurance.

At Hybla E. Bartlett's barns were burned. The house, with difficulty, was saved. Hybla cheese factory, contents and first day's make of cheese were destroyed. Loss is partly covered by insurance.

In Monteagle Robt. McCannon lost his house and nearly all the contents. J. Jordison lost his house and barn and all outbuildings. Chas. Montany lost his barn, team of horses and all his grain. Bartlett & McGee lost part of a saw mill and 70,000 feet of lumber. Ned Bartlett lost a shingle mill.

In Mayo David Pritchard lost house, barn, stables and grain. Norman Dillipah lost barn, one hundred bushel of oats, wheat, sleighs and cutter. Wm Inwood lost barn, house and contents.

In Dungannon Tom York lost all outbuildings, and with hard work saved his house.

In Faraday John Hallatt lost all outbuildings, hay and grain. Samuel Connell, barn and contents. Samuel Kelly, barn, fifteen tons of hay, five calves and all his seed grain. Wm. Black, barn and implements, thirty sheep and grain. The Rathbuns and Gilmour Co.'s also were sufferers in the loss of valuable timber.

In the northern part of Frontenac there were also very heavy losses.

In Claredon township the losses were: Andrew Laundry, everything except house; Wm. Johnson, house barns, everything; Jas. Payea, barns, house, everything; D. McDonald, barns; Joe Hermer, house, barns and contents; Isaac Bauler, barns; John Armstrong, barns; E. Hanes, barns; bridge at Ardock across the Mississippi River; bridge near Ompah.

Thompson & Avery, Sharbot Lake, lost heavily in the forest fires. Their big camp in Olden township was completely wiped out, entailing a heavy loss. In the same township they had 200 cords of wood consumed; another pile of 2,000 cords was saved by the efforts of employees of the farm.

In Kennebec township two farmers, one named Newton, lost everything they possessed.

The Rathbun Company lost a large quantity of cordwood and logs. At Folger Station, Isaac Allen, lumber merchant, had 60,000 feet of lumber entirely destroyed. His lumber camp below Ardoch, on the Mississippi River, was burned. Those in the camp at the time were forced to take to logs and push out into the stream in order to save themselves.

Presentation

A very pleasant event took place at the home of Mrs. S. Loucks, near Canifton, on the departure of her daughter, Jennie, to Minnesota, when the people of that vicinity took advantage of the opportunity to show the high esteem in which she was always held. They presented her with a very beautiful toilet case and an address.

Anecdotal.

In an after-dinner speech at the London Savage Club recently on the purity of the English tongue, Winston Churchill remarked: "I have written five books, the same number as Moses—but I will not press the comparison."

Charles II. once granted an audience to the courtly Quaker, William Penn, who, as was his custom, entered the royal presence with his hat on. The humorous sovereign quietly laid aside his own, which occasioned Penn's enquiry: "Friend Charles, why dost thou remove thy hat?" "It is the custom," he replied, "in this place for one person only to remain covered."

Eben Jones, the crabbed millionaire lumberman of Minnesota, hired all his mill-hands himself. One day a Swede applied to the irritable old man, and secured a place on the saws. As he was leaving he said: "Mester Yones, in dees yob you geef me doaller and hallef a day. Besides dat, do you eat me or do I eat myselef?" "Oh, eat yourself!" replied the old man. "I have dyspepsia."

Phil May, the noted English cartoonist, went into an oyster saloon in the East-End of London one day and ordered a dozen natives, when another man entered and gave a similar order, enquiring anxiously of the proprietor if the oysters were fresh. "Fresh!" echoed the bivalve merchant. "Fresh! Why"—indicating Mr. May with a wave of his hand—"the first oyster that gentleman took up bit his lip!"

An Irishman who was charged with stealing a watch from a fellow-citizen, stoutly denied the impeachment in court, and brought a counter accusation against his accuser for assault and battery committed with a frying-pan. "Why did you allow the prosecutor, who is a smaller man than yourself, to assault you without resistance?" asked the judge; "had you nothing in your hand to defend yourself with?" "Bedad, your honor," said Pat, "I had his watch, but what was that against a frying-pan?"

The "Scotsman" tells of a Dublin man who insisted that a Scotch friend should stay at his house instead of a hotel, and kept him there for a month, playing the host in detail, even to treating him to all places of amusement, paying all the cab fares and the rest. When the visitor was returning to Dunedin, the Irishman saw him down to the steamer, and they went together to have a last cigar. "Now, look here," said the man from Dunedin, "I'll hae nae mair o' this. Here ye've been keepin' me at your hoose for a month, an' payin' for a' the amusements and cabs and so on—I tell you I'll stan' nae mair o' it! We'll just hae a toss for this one!"

One of the eccentricities of that most penurious of pedagogues, Dr. Barrett, was that he hardly ever appeared outside the walls of Trinity College, conducting his modest menage there with the help of a decrepit old housekeeper, who attended to all his wants, even to daily fetching from a nearby dairy the half-pennyworth of milk needed in the establishment. When one frosty morning, Mary, going on this errand, slipped and broke her leg, the worthy doctor for the first time in years left the college to pay her a visit in the hospital. On reaching her cot, it is related that his sympathetic greeting was: "Hello, Mary; so you broke your leg; I suppose you broke the jug, too, but where is the half-penny?"

ONTARIO CROP BULLETIN FORESHADOWS BIG YIELD

FRUIT TREES HAVE COME THROUGH THE WINTER WITHOUT INJURY EXCEPT BY FIELD MICE.

Toronto, May 13.—The May crop bulletin for Ontario states that crops generally promise well. Less fall wheat was plowed up than usual, and the prospects for clover are particularly bright. Spring seeding was backward, however, owing to the relatively slow progress of vegetation.

Taken altogether, the outlook for live stock is good, the prospects for cattle raising in Ontario being very assuring. Orchards hvae come through the winter in excellent order, so far as weather conditions are concerned, no injury from severe frosts or ice storms being reported. The only damage to fruit trees between November and April was caused by a plague of field mice, which appear to be working steadily westward, the centre of operations now being in the Lake Ontario counties, while a year ago they were most hurtful in the counties along the St. Lawrence.

Thousands of valuable fruit trees have been girdled by these pests, and some correspondents regard their operations as a serious menace to fruit culture. It was the opinion of several correspondents, however, that stone fruits, such as cherries, plums and peaches would be relatively better in yield than apples and pears. Small fruits give promise of an excellent yield should favorable weather continue.

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

The best wheel of fortune is honest labor.

HAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickason, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

Wedding rings in St. Kilda used to be made of worsted.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed 'Perfection.'

Coral is a talisman against thunder and evils by flood and field.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Signed, JEAN VALCOURT,
Wotton, P.Q. General Merchant

A woman never knows where the match box is.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

Use the safe, pleasant, and effectual worm killer, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator; nothing equals it. Procure a bottle and take it home.

The average watch represents but 12 hours of human labor.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

If thy friend is honey, do not lick him up altogether.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

Attend no auctions if thou hast no money.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes: "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

Many a man's self-conceit is due to his ignorance.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Over 250,000 copies of Charles Dickens' novels are sold annually.

Do not despair of curing your sick headache when you can so easily obtain Carter's Little Liver Pills. They will affect a prompt and permanent cure. Their action is mild and natural.

DAISY GORDON'S FOLLY

—OR—

THE WORLD LOST FOR LOVE'S SAKE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY,

Author of "The Crime of Hallow-E'en," "The Flirtations of a Beauty," "Willful Gaynell," "Little Leafy," "Only a Mechanic's Daughter," etc.

"I knew she was very delicate, my pretty little wild flower," he murmured, bending his handsome head and kissing the lovely face lying against the white pillow; "but I did not know she was so fragile as this, my poor, pretty Daisy."

When Daisy opened her eyes she found herself alone with her maid.

She sprung from her couch with a wild, bitter cry, clutching frantically at the maid's arm.

"Is it a dream, Janet?" she wailed piteously. "Have I been asleep and dreamed a most horrible dream, or is it a reality?"

"Is what a reality, ma'am?" asked Janet, curiously, anxious enough to know what had caused her lady to swoon.

Daisy had turned her face to the wall, memory returning to her like a flash.

"Leave me to myself, Janet," she whispered, "let no one come near me, not even Aleck —my —my—husband."

Only heaven saw how wildly she wept when she found herself alone, pacing the floor, crying out that it was the hand of heaven that had taken just vengeance upon her by setting Harold St. John free.

Of course he had gone directly to the farm to claim her. What had he done when he found she was not there, that the farm had been sold, passing into the hands of strangers, and the family had gone none knew whither?

The neighbors would tell him how her father had suddenly acquired great wealth by the death of a relative; then, yes, then he would be eager to claim her as his wife. He would search the whole world over for her, and if he found her — what then?

"No, no, he must not —he shall not find me," she wailed madly. "I should fall dead at his feet. It would kill me to be parted from Aleck."

Then a great horror came over her as to what Aleck would think if he knew. He would spurn her from him with loathing and abhorrence, and one bitter word from him would slay her just as surely as the sun shone in the blue sky yonder.

From this moment as long as her life lasted she was never to know peace again.

She could never walk the streets with Aleck, never ride by his side, without the haunting dread of the sword which hung above her head falling.

She would have to laugh, be merry and gay, and all the while her soul would be in mortal terros, lest by the cruelty of fate she should come suddenly face to face with Harold St. John. The man would show her no mercy; he would claim her, now that she was heiress to a fortune, she well knew, for money was his god.

CHAPTER XI.

Harold St. John's Terrible Discovery.

As Daisy had supposed, Harold St. John lost no time in returning to the village in which he had wooed and won her, yet few would have recognized him as he stepped from the train, he was so disguised.

How would Daisy greet him, he wondered, as he walked up the well-remembered path that led to the farmhouse?

Something like pain and sorrow throbbed in his heart for the life which might have been so brilliant, and which had gone all wrong.

He did not realize how well he loved Daisy until he had been torn so rudely from her.

When he had effected that daring escape from the officers, he had promised himself that he would reform, for Daisy's sake.

Acting upon this impulse, he had refunded the money he had taken, making the first move in the right direction.

His hand trembled and his bronzed cheek turned pale, as he opened the wicket gate, and walked up the graveled path.

Would Daisy turn from him in horror, or would she forgive all for love's sake?

He would tell her how near that terrible leap from the swift running train, down into the swirling river, came to costing him his life. How he was rescued by an old fisherman in whose cot he lay ill unto death for two long and weary months, and how he had come to plead with her to pardon him, as soon as he was able to travel.

He expected to have a terrible scene with the old farmer, but he had determined to brave everything and claim Daisy.

What if she refused to go with him!

His brow darkened. He would force her to go with him. She was his wife —he would assert a husband's right to claim her and take her away.

What had she thought when the sunlit summer days came and went and brought him not; when the weeks had lengthened into months and yet no line from him had reached her? What had sweet little Daisy thought? Had she pined away and died through cold neglect?

Of course she must have heard that he had made his escape.

Had she watched and waited for him to come to her?

Ah, if he had met Daisy before he lent himself to such folly, life would have been different for him.

Hot, burning tears fell from Harold St. John's dark eyes. It was not yet too late to reform, he assured himself. From the moment he kissed those sweet pure lips a new life should begin for him. He was still young, accomplished. He would live down the past and build up for himself a future like other men.

He would take Daisy quietly away —he would take her to far-off California, where no one who ever knew of him would see or recognize him.

With face flushing and paling with emotion, he hurried up the rose-bordered path to the door of the farmhouse.

For a moment he drew back with his hand on the old-fashioned knocker.

How his heart beat! Strong man that he was, he trembled, his breath came hot and quick.

What if it were Daisy who opened the door for him?

Even though a hundred eyes were on him, how could he refrain from catching her in his arms, kissing her lovely face, crying out as he strained her to his heart:

"My darling, I have come back to you—at last!"

A voice broke the horrible stillness. It was a stranger's from within, sharp and discordant.

He touched the brass knocker with a trembling hand, and it seemed to him the length of eternity before the door was opened.

He knew that he must call for the farmer; he could not trust himself to call for Daisy just yet.

The door was opened at length, and the woman started back at the white face of the stranger standing there.

"I should like to see Mr. Gordon," he said, raising his hat courteously with a low bow; but, even as he spoke, his yearning eyes roved past her to see if he could discern a glove, a hat, a bit of ribbon —anything that would be likely to belong to Daisy.

It had been a ludicrous mistake, imagining her to have been Lillian Ruthven, the heiress, yet, after all, he would not give up Daisy, penniless though she was, for a thousand Miss Ruthvens.

After he and Daisy were far away he told himself that he would write back and clear Miss Ruthven from all knowledge of that marriage in which her name had figured so prominently.

He repeated his question, for the woman was looking at him curiously —could he see Mr. Gordon?

"You don't seem to know, sir," she answered, "that Mr. Gordon does not live here any more."

The shock was so great that Harold St. John fell back against the casement of the door like one who had been dealt a heavy blow.

"Where have he and his family gone?" he asked, and the voice which asked the question was scarcely human in its agonized intensity.

"That no one seems to know hereabouts," she replied. "They left very suddenly, and very secretly, too, sir, leaving no address behind them."

"He took his daughters with him —all of them, I suppose?" interrogated St. John, hoarsely.

"Of course, sir," assented the woman; "Farmer Gordon set great store by his girls, and the youngest one, Daisy, was dearer to him than the apple of his eye."

"Did she —did Daisy want to go?" he asked breathlessly.

"I couldn't answer that," she replied, eyeing him curiously. "I should rather imagine not, though, for she was always in tears; and she grew so pale and thin that people who used to know her would never have recognized her."

Sudden Changes Bring Many Colds

EVERYWHERE YOU HEAR PEOPLE COUGHING AND WONDER HOW MANY OF THE COLDS WILL PROVE FATAL.

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE.

Although Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has by far the largest sale of any similar medicine, there must still be many persons who have not yet tested its merits. They have read about it, perhaps, or heard someone speak about its great curative properties, and have concluded that it was somewhat similar to the "cough mixtures" they have been using.

This is a mistaken idea, for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is far more than a mere cough remedy.

No mere cough remedy has such a thorough and far-reaching effect on the system as has this great prescription of Dr. Chase, and that is why it it so remarkably successful in curing croup, bronchitis, and asthma.

Besides aiding expectoration and clearing the air passages, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine allays the inflammation of the bronchial tubes and lungs and heals the delicate membranes, which are made raw and sore by disease and violent coughing.

Croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma, and severe chest colds are positively cured by this preparation, and it affords the greatest relief even to the consumptive in the most serious stages of his disease.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is indispensable in the home. Twenty-five cents a bottle, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signatures of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, is on every bottle. 6

A System that Will not keep You waiting

Whether you want Painting, Paper Hanging, Decorating. Graining, or anything in our line, we will not keep you waiting. WE WILL NAME THE DAY, and that very day you will find us at your work, with an excellent staff of workmen—the very best mechanics that can be secured—workmen that we can rely on and that please our customers every time.

OUR WALL PAPER TRADE this year is so far the largest in the history of this house, and there are reasons behind the increased trade, and here they are—

FIRSTLY—Times are good, people have money and know where to spend it to advantage.

SECONDLY—By comparison with other lines our customers find our prices much lower and our styles of Wall Paper much higher than the ordinary.

THIRDLY—We give free two yards of bordering with each double roll of the Wall Paper it matches.

We hang our paper at very reasonable prices and always please our customers whether in papering, painting or anything else.

Surveying parties arrived in town this week to stake out the route for the extension of the B. of Q.R. northward from here.

Many of our citizens attended the funeral of the late T. T. Porter on Saturday last at Thomasburg, where an immense concourse of people gathered to pay their last respects to a good and useful citizen.

The name most prominently mentioned for the vacancy in the County Council caused by Mr. Porter's death, is that of John Fleming, Esq., of Ivanhoe, ex-Reeve of Huntingdon. If he can be induced to accept a nomination, there will probably be no opposition offered.

O. M. Reeves, dentist, of this place, is leaving to locate in Chicago.

A MODERN JOB

Faith, patience and six bottles of South American Nervine "made over" Mr. Wright—and all his troubles started in a disordered stomach.

"As a general builder up of the system I believe nothing can equal South American Nervine. At one time I seemed to be afflicted with almost all the ills that flesh is heir to—indigestion, nervousness, gastric and nasal catarrh, and liver and kidney disorders. This great remedy was recommended to me. I took six bottles in all, and what was apparently a hopeless case was quickly and permanently cured. I felt myself improving from the first few doses."—Noble Wright, Orangeville, Ont. 74

Anecdotal.

Philoxenus was sent to the stone-quarries by Dionysius for contempt of his verses. Being recalled, he was invited again to hear them. After listening patiently for a time, he got up to go. "Whither now?" asked Dionysius. "To the quarries," says he.

One of the admirals, after the first day of a grand naval review at Portsmouth, asked Foote if the profusion of fire and smoke did not give him an idea of hell. "Yes, indeed it did," replied the wit, "especially when I observed Your Lordship in the midst of it."

When the late Ameer of Afghanistan was troubled with a bad toothache he sent for his European dentist in open court. The dentist examined the tooth, and advised that the Ameer should take laughing-gas and have it out. The Ameer enquired into the effect of the gas, and replied: "I cannot risk being a dead man for five seconds, much less five minutes." So, while the whole Afghan court surveyed the operation, the dentist struggled with the tooth, and the stout old Ameer never moved a muscle.

When ex-Governor Bradbury of Maine was almost a century old and still hale and hearty, he was asked if he had always enjoyed such robust health. "No," said he; "when I was a young man I had to leave college because of ill-health, and my disease was thought to be incurable." "Well, Governor," said the enquirer, "you must have had valuable experience in getting and keeping well. What would you advise to insure longevity?" "To get an incurable ailment in your youth," replied the ex-Governor, smiling, "and nurse it until your death."

Pope Leo indulged in a quiet little satire not long ago at the expense of a most estimable and pious member of one of the royal houses of Europe. This lady, who fancies herself an artist, painted his portrait upon a piece of canvas, leaving a blank at the bottom in which she requested him to write his autograph. When the picture was received it was such an atrocious caricature that the members of the Papal household determined to destroy it, but the Pope would not permit them to do so. Taking his pen, he wrote in Latin this inscription: "It is I; be not afraid. Leo XIII."

When the British ships under Lord Nelson were bearing down to attack the combined fleet off Trafalgar, the first lieutenant of the "Revenge" on going round to see that all hands were at quarters, observed one of the men, an Irishman, devoutly kneeling at the side of his gun. So very unusual an attitude exciting his surprise and curiosity, he asked the man if he was afraid. "Afraid!" answered the tar, "no, Your Honor; I was only praying that the enemy's shot may be distributed in the same proportion as the prize-money—the greatest part among the officers."

While enjoying a good book in the parlor one afternoon, the Rev. Clinton Locke, who was for nearly half a century rector at Grace Episcopal Church, in Chicago, noticed a woman coming up the front steps whom he particularly detested. The doctor fled precipitately, leaving his wife to meet the caller. After a half-hour had passed, Dr. Locke came out of his study and listened at the head of the stairs. Hearing nothing below, he called down to his wife: "Has that horrible old bore gone yet?" The caller was still there. Mrs. Locke was equal to the emergency, however, and she called back: "Yes, dear, she went nearly an hour ago. Mrs. A. is here now."

An Irishman, bent on showing his recently arrived friend the sights of New York, took him to the bridge at Fifty-fifth street, over the railroad tracks, near the entrance to the Fourth avenue tunnel. While they were admiring the view, the bridge, and the tunnel, the Empire State Express passed under them with a roar and a rush that almost took their breath away, and disappeared in the tunnel. "What d'ye think of that, Pat?" said Mike to his dazed companion. "Well, Mike," rejoined Pat, as he gazed at the gaping orifice that had just swallowed the rushing train, "'tis a mighty small hole, and a mighty big train. If them cars iver miss it there's going to be a horrible smash some day."

Mr. Justice Mathew of England is a man of such mild and kindly exterior, with such gentle voice and manner, that almost invariably he gives the impression of being a simple country gentleman rather than a profound lawyer. This was evidently the idea of a professional seller of painted birds, who some years ago met him in the neighborhood of the law courts, and, exhibiting one of his birds, asked him if he could tell to what species it belonged. The judge stopped, examined the bird with great care, pretended to admire the gaudy plumage, examined it again, and then remarked: "I do not think I have ever seen a bird exactly like this, but, judging from the old proverb that 'Birds of a feather flock together,' I should say it was a jailbird."

Far Reaching Influence.

"OLD-FASHIONED Indian stories, the dime novels of years back which were within the reach of all the boys, were an important factor in building up the great West," said a typical Westerner. "These novels used to circulate in a neighborhood till they had been read by every boy and had fallen to pieces through handling. They fired the ambition of the youngsters, set them to practising shooting and riding, and sent many of them to the West in search of adventures. Some soon returned to their homes, others became bad men and were killed in time, but the great mass of them, too proud to return home, created the vigorous, wideawake population of our Western States. I have talked to hundreds of our Western pioneers about the causes which brought them west, and a majority of them admit that dime novels had more to do with it than anything else."

Might be Worse.

One day, Mackintosh, having vexed him by calling O'Coigly "a rascal," Parr immediately rejoined, "Yes, Jamie, he was a bad man, but he might have been worse; he was an Irishman, but he might have been a Scotchman; he was a priest, but he might have been a lawyer; he was a republican, but he might have been an apostate."

SUITS FOR MEN

The Entirely Different Sorts.

Not satisfied with equaling in style, fit and excellence of workmanship the made-to-measure garments the best tailors produce, our makers are now fashioning their suits from the same fabrics which have heretofore been exclusive with the Custom Tailors.

Our showing of these suits is very extensive.

They are suits that the average man wants—they give him the style and exclusiveness he seeks without the extra cost of the tailors.

Even the most expert criticism will fail to discover that these suits were not custom made.

The brood showing we make including as it does every size for men of different propostions practically assurs a perfect fit for every man.

But in some cases an exact fit cannot be secured immediately and then we do as the tailors would do at a try on—make the necessary alterations that would secure perfection of fit.

Fancy mixed cashmeres—neat effects in Cheviots—three and four button sack styles including the new straight front.

$6.50 to $15.00

And by the way you can better judge the unassailable quality of these suits if you'll do a little comparing.

REMEMBERED BY BROCKVILLE FRIENDS

MR. FRANK WALLACE RECEIVES A GRATIFYING TESTIMONIAL FROM FORMER COMRADES.

It will be remembered that a little while ago a young Bellevillian, Mr. Frank Wallace, was the victim of a deplorable accident in Brockville, by which he lost an arm. Recently he received the following letter from his former comrades, which will be gratifying to his fellow-citizens in general and his relatives and friends in particular:

Brockville, 9th May, 1903.

Mr. Frank Wallace, Belleville, Ont.

Dear Frank,—Will you please accept the enclosed $79.20 from your fellow-employees here as a token of their esteem for you. You know that we all very deeply sympathized with you at the time of your serious accident, while we admired the fortitude and manly spirit you displayed throughout. We cannot forget you, Frank, and those of us who know you best, have confidence that in whatever sphere of life you decide to enter, your sterling character and ability will carry you to success. You have left many friends here who will continue to be interested in your future welfare. With best good-wishes, we are, on behalf of your fellow-employees of The James Smart Mfg .Co., Limited,

Malt Breakfast Food

Is the Best Food For Children of Any Age After Infancy

If your children are weakly and frail, and have not the snap and vigor of healthy boys and girls, we say, have them use Malt Breakfast Food for breakfast and supper. The usual starchy foods so commonly used for children lack the nourishing elements which they need to develop muscle and bone, and put life and vigor into the blood. In Malt Breakfast Food the Malt changes the starch of the wheat to maltose, the most nutritious food element, and this with gluten and phosphates of the wheat gives a muscle-building and bone-forming food of unequalled value. Ask your Grocer for Malt Breakfast Food.

ROBBED ORRILL'S REFRIGERATOR

TWO YOUNG MEN HAD A PICNIC EARLY THIS MORNING.

Mr. E. Orrill, who resides on the corner of Dundas and Pinnacle Sts., reported to the police at an early hour this morning that some party or parties had broken open a refrigator belonging to him and stolen some articles of food therefrom. The theft took place between 4 and 5 o'clock. The refrigerator was placed under a verandah in rear of the premises, and the articles taken consisted of a shoulder of pork, a number of eggs and a quantity of milk. Officer Hayes was detailed upon the case and in a short time placed under arrest two young men named James Johnson, whose home is on the lower portion of Front street, and Frank Munville. They were found in a barn in rear of a Front street establishment. A basket containing some eggs was found near by. Munville, it is alleged, after his arrest admitted taking the articles in question.

When the accused were brought before the Magistrate this morning they pleaded guilty to the charge of theft. As Munville furnished to the police some information in reference to the case and had a clear record thus far he was given a suspended sentence of one month in jail. Johnson will spend 30 days in Castle Appleby.

Address and Presentation

Miss Edith Phelps, whose home is in the third concession of Thurlow, recently entered the training school for nurses in connection with the Clifton Springs, N.Y., Sanitarium. On the evening before her departure a number of friends unexpectedly assembled at her home and spent a very pleasant hour or two. During the evening an address expressing warm appreciation of her valuable services in Sabbath School, Epworth League and other branches of church work, as well as the esteem in which she is held socially, was presented to Miss Phelps, accompanied by a handsome Bible and Methodist hymnal. The address was signed, on behalf of the School and League, by Mrs. Wilcox, Mrs. Tweedie, Mrs. Cooley, Miss Latta, Messrs. W. Badgley, O. Liddell, M. Brown, J. C. Cooley and W. A. Esmond.

PAIN IN THE JOINTS

may be muscular or rheumatic. The joints are hard to get at, and it requires a powerful, penetrating remedy to reach the affected parts. Polson's Nerviline exactly meets the requirements, for it is both powerful and penetrating. The pain is expelled as if by magic, for one drop of Nerviline equals in strength five drops of other remedies. You won't often call the doctor if Nerviline is in the house. Price 25 cents.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING COMMENT.

There was a fine, manly ring to the remarks of the Rev. James Barclay, who delivered an address to the pupils of the Montreal High School the other afternoon. Boys and girls, he said, were meant to play; this world was not meant to be all work. So with men; men were meant to play as well as to work. The instinct to play was a divine creation. Play, wisely arranged, strengthened the body and mind, and rendered a person capable of greater and better work, but let the play always be characterized by honor and fairness. There was a good deal of play in this country which was not so characterized. There were elements connected with many of our sports that were detrimental to the sports themselves, and to those who took part in them.

One of these was gambling. Why it should ever have been connected with our games he did not know. There were games that people would never play except for the gambling, and it would be a good thing for everybody if they were abolished. Unfortunately the gambling, which began with them, had spread and had caused a deterioration of some of our noblest and best games. If a game was not worth playing for itself, don't play it. Gambling had been followed in this country by professionalism, a thing greatly to be deplored in connection with our sports.

One of the saddest things to him was to see hundreds of able-bodied young men, who should be in the field taking recreative exercise for the development of their system, sitting in crowds watching men play who had been paid to play. He was glad to see that the so-called Montreal Baseball Club had vanished into air. What right had it to be called the Montreal Baseball Club? It was composed of men gathered from different parts of the United States, and paid to come here and play. It was a case of the club that could pay the most that came out victorious. He had no objection to a man being paid to teach a game.

Another curse was gate money. Lots of times matches were played, not to be won, but to be bought or sold, in order that the gate money might be increased. He hoped that the boys he was addressing would do their best to keep their sports clean. There had also crept into this country a spirit characteristic of our friends to the south, and that was a determination to win at all hazards. Wherever that characterized sports, tricks and unfairness would be found to be brought into the games. Play to win, of course, but only by merit, and then if they won, they would have an enjoyment free from all stings, and if they did not win, they would have enjoyment in the success of their opponents.

Lively Runaway

A lively runaway occurred about 6 o'clock yesterday evening, but fortunately no person was injured and the damage done was not great. The horse, belonging to Mr. Daniel McDougall, of Thurlow, became frightened on Mill street, and off it started at a lively gait towards Front street. It had not proceeded far when the buggy came into collision with a pole and it was released. The horse continued on in its mad career to the wharf, where it was stopped. The buggy was somewhat damaged.

HOW ONE MILLION IS SPENT.

Not less than one million dollars is annually spent by people seeking an absolute cure for catarrh, bronchitis and Consumption. Numerous are the remedies, but the one standing preeminently above all others is Catarrhozone. It cures these diseases because it is sure to reach them. Catarrhozone is inhaled into the lungs, throat and nasal passages, and bathes every part of the diseased membrane with its germ-killing, healing vapor. You simply breathe Catarrhozone and it cures. Price 25c and $1 at druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

BROCKVILLE CORPS IS IN A BAD WAY

RADICAL CHANGES AND WHOLESALE REFORMS ALLEGED TO BE NEEDED.

Brockville Times: The condition of the 41st Regiment seems to be getting worse and worse. What with unqualified officers, internal dissensions and men refusing to turn out to drill, its state is chaotic. Now Sergeant Tinck is leaving. He has resigned his position as drill instructor and Sergeant Major and is now acting as caretaker only. He will soon relinquish that post, too, to go to a more satisfactory sphere. It will be long before the 41st Regiment gets as good a man as Sergeant Tinck who bears the name in Canadian Military circles of being a very efficient instructor and a smart soldier in every way. It is a great pity that so good a man could not be retained, but the regiment is so disorganized and in such confusion that there will have to be radical changes and wholesale reforms before the 41st Regiment regains its proper standing and efficiency.

A BOY AND A CANOE

FURNISHED SOME EXCITEMENT ABOVE BURRELL'S DAM YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

A lad named Parker Phillips had a narrow escape from drowning yesterday afternoon. A canoe belonging to a boy named Simmonds was kept on the river's edge, above the Burrell dam. Phillips secured it during the afternoon and was paddling about the river when the craft reached a current and was being taken towards the dam. The boy was evidently not desirous of going over the dam in the canoe and jumped out and reached shore after considerable difficulty. The canoe went over the dam, also over Cooper's dam and was picked up in the mouth of the river. It was considerably damaged.

ALIBI FOR MR. GAMEY, M.P.P.

Was at Industrial Exhibition on Morning of September 9.

CONTRADICTS THE DEFENCE.

Gere Bay Merchant Declares He Was With Member For Manitoulin at the Time of the Alleged Interview With Mr. Stratton on Sept. 9—Gamey Swore the Interview With Stratton Was on the 10th—Loan Company Protests, But Court Rules That Access Must Be Had to Its Books.

Toronto, May 14.—There was a conference at the outset of the Gamey bribery investigation yesterday as to the accountancy phases of the matter. Mr. Walter Barwick, K.C., was on hand in behalf of the Ontario Bank, and Mr. A. Claude Macdonnell represented the Dominion Permanent Loan Company, in which Mr. Stratton keeps his private accounts. The bank finally announced its permission to one counsel on each side to examine transactions in $50 and $100 bills, so long as the strictest privacy were guaranteed. All information gathered by the staff will be submitted.

Mr. Macdonnell objected to the examination of the Loan Company's books unless the prosecution would state just what entries they wanted.

"They cannot," said the Chancellor, "this is a fishing expedition." He held, however, that the counsel were entitled to the information.

Mr. Johnston, on behalf of Mr. Stratton, said that the position was simply this: That the prolongation of the enquiry was a serious drawback to Mr. Stratton in pursuing his duties as a member of the Legislature and a Minister of the Crown. Every item of Mr. Stratton's personal account had been submitted.

The court directed, however, that one counsel on each side should have access to the books. Mr. Johnston requested that the enquiry be limited to the same date as in the case of the Ontario Bank.

The Chancellor directed that counsel should look for traces of the alleged $1,000 transaction of January 29, as well as of the $3,000 affair of September 9.

Evidence Disagrees.

H. E. Sheppard, of Espanola, testified that he had met Mr. Gamey on the train between Sudbury and Webbwood, about noon, on Jan. 14th last. To be on that train on that particular day Mr. Gamey must have left Toronto at 11.15 p.m. on Jan. 13.

Mr. Sheppard's evidence was intended to reply in part to that of Dr. Arthur's, who had sworn that he saw Mr. Gamey at the Walker House on both Jan. 13 and 14.

To Mr. Johnston, Mr. Sheppard said he would not contradict Dr. Arthur's statement, as that gentleman might have seen Mr. Gamey on January 13.

Mr. McPherson quoted from Dr. Arthur's evidence a statement that he had seen Mr. Gamey and conversed with him at the Walker House on January 14.

Promised to Support Whitney.

Thomas Ellis, district constable of Providence Bay, swore that he had been at Mr. Gamey's meeting on May 3. Mr. Gamey had denounced the Government and had said nothing to give the inference that he would support the Ross Government. Mr. Gamey did not mention the name of Mr. A. F. Campbell, and did not make the statements attributed to him by Messrs. Neil McDougall, W. J. Berry, Sylvester Berry, and the other defence witnesses.

To Mr. Johnston the witness said that Mr. Gamey had promised the convention to support Mr. Whitney. In answer to a question as to the course he would expect Mr. Gamey to pursue if Mr. Whitney did not carry out his announced policy, the witness answered that he would expect Mr. Gamey to come home and resign. Asked if he had created a disturbance at one of the campaign meetings, Mr. Ellis said he had not. He had just interrupted a Liberal speaker long enough to correct a statement he had made that witness thought was a subject that should not have been mentioned,

Mr. Gamey Broke the News.

William Vincer, Township Clerk of Carnarvon, Manitoulin, was at the Providence Bay meeting, as well as two or three others. He heard all of Mr. Gamey's speech, in which he denounced the Ross Government. Witness did not agree with Neil McDougall or the Berry's, to the effect that Gamey said he would support good measures of the Ross Government, nor did he hear A. F. Campbell's name mentioned. The whole trend of Gamey's speech was that there would be no Ross Government after May 29. The witness was deputy returning officer for the referendum, and was notified of his appointment by Mr. Gamey, instead of by the returning officer, Sheriff Jackson.

To Mr. Johnston the witness said that he would think it perfectly right for a member of Parliament to support measures which would be for the advantage of the country. He put the country before party.

More of the Same Fort.

William H. Clark, who was at meetings at Providence Bay, Long Bay, Manitowaning and other points last May, swore that Gamey had given no intimation that he would support the Ross Government. The only Liberal for whom Gamey had a good word was Mr. James Conmee. The latter he said he hoped to see elected, as he had a good mining policy and was a good fellow. Clark swore that he had been a Liberal until the last general election, and had known Gamey as a stiff Conservative for eighteen years. He himself supported Mr. Gamey because he was a good man and knew the wants of the country.

George Strain, of Gordon township, gave testimony similar to that of the previous witnesses. He had been a McMillan supporter, but had said to the electors: "If you can't vote for McMillan, vote for Gamey."

James Carter, of Kagawong, corroborated the previous witnesses in regard to the statements that were made by Mr. Gamey at his meeting, and denied that he had ever said he would give the Ross Government independent support. He did say, however, that if the Opposition, meaning the Liberals, were to introduce a measure beneficial to the Island he would support it.

In cross-examination by Mr. Johnston the witness said the principal issue between the parties at the general election was the benefit of Manitoulin, but to Mr. McPherson he said the interests of the Province generally were also to be taken into consideration as well.

Gamey's Movements 9th Sept.

R. J. Armstrong, general merchant of Gore Bay corroborated the previous witnesses as to what happened at Mr. Gamey's meetings.

On the morning of Tuesday, September 9, 1902, he had met Mr. Gamey about 9.15 around Simpson's store in Toronto. They arranged to meet at 10 o'clock at the Exhibition grounds. Witness was at the appointed place at 9.55. Mr. Gamey arrived ten minutes later. The two visited various portions of the Exhibition, and were together until one o'clock, when they separated. Witness then transacted some business with Mr. W. R. Landon, of the Chatham Wagon Works. He fixed the date accurately by a receipt for some notes which he had handed over to Mr. Landon.

Object of the Testimony.

The object of this testimony was to contradict the evidence of Hon. J. R. Stratton, Elgin Myers and Frank Sullivan, that Gamey visited the Parliament Buildings on the morning of September 9, and that this was his only visit during that month. Gamey swore that to the best of his recollection his first visit was on the tenth.

Sticks to the Date.

To Mr. Johnston, the witness said that when he was in the city at Fair time he did not stay at a hotel, but at a friend's place. On the Monday afternoon he had business at the McCormick offices, but could not recall where he went afterwards. On Tuesday morning he went to Eaton's just after the meeting with Gamey, and after walking about for a time, he went to the Exhibition grounds. He would not swear the exact time he arrived at the grounds, but he thought it was within ten minutes of ten o'clock.

Mr. Johnston went exhaustively into the question of time, and witness stuck to the date and the time within ten minutes as he had looked at his watch. He created some amusement by saying that he could not remember ever making any other appointment to meet anyone, though he might have done so in his younger days.

Mr. Johnston then produced a bill for $163, which was paid by the witness to the McCormick Company at the Exhibition grounds by a cheque. Asked the date of the cheque, witness said it was the 9th of September. He could not say why the bill was twice folded.

He was also asked about his movements during the rest of the week. The witness could only recall that he spent most of his days on the Exhibition grounds and visited three different theatres. He could not fix within five or ten minutes where he was on any other day of that week.

In re-examination Mr. Armstrong said he usually visited Toronto once a year, and that at Exhibition time. He was not familiar with the directions here and the only street of which he was sure was Yonge street. The Court adjourned at 2.10 until this morning.

MR. GAMEY BORROWED $1,200 FROM SULLIVAN

Manitoulin's Member Tells of the $900 Extra Deposit.

Called by the Judges—Chancellor Is Very Severe in His Examination—D. A. Jones of Beeton Testifies—Swears That He Was in With Gamey to Make Money on Deals With the Government—Some Light on His Letter of 19th Sept., Which Was Written, He Said, After He Had Had an Interview With Liberal Organizer Alex. Smith, Who Was the "Acting Manager."

Toronto, May 15.—Mr. Johnston, at the opening of the Gamey bribery enquiry yesterday, announced that Mr. Hall, of the law firm of Stratton & Hall, Peterboro', had submitted all the personal accounts of Hon. J. R. Stratton for examination. Mr. Hall will return if his presence is required.

Mr. Gamey's Railway Pass.

Mr. William Cavanagh, C.P.R. conductor of North Bay, identified Mr. Gamey's railway pass, No. Q168, and produced his records to show that he had traveled from North Bay to Spanish River on the morning of Jan. 14 last; one of the days on which Dr. Arthurs of Sudbury says he conversed with Gamey at the Walker House, Toronto.

Mr. C. R. Atkinson, barrister, of Little Current, spoke at four election meetings with Mr. Gamey last May, and swore that the latter ran as a straight Conservative, and that no inference could be drawn from his utterances that he would support the Ross Government if returned.

Mr. Blake's Decision.

The judges then enquired of Mr. Blake whether he intended to call Mr. Gamey. Mr. Blake replied that he had considered the matter fully, and had come to the conclusion that Mr. Gamey had been so fully examined and cross-examined, that there was no new matter on which he could testify, except that of the $900 deposit slip, which he submitted was not material to the main issue. He also pointed out that Mr. DuVernet, Gamey's counsel, was absent.

After consultation, the judges decided to call Mr. Gamey themselves.

Mr. Gamey Called.

The member for Manitoulin stepped into the box, and the Chancellor examined him in very severe tones. He first asked as to the preparation of his statement in the House. Gamey said he had taken about ten days to prepare it, working at it at odd times for about an hour a day.

Asked as to what material he had, he said he had a memorandum book, which was in his valise at the hotel, and a cash-book, in which he had kept a record of payments. He was not so careful in keeping a record of his receipts. He explained that what Mr. Crossin meant when he said that Gamey had kept private memoranda at Gore Bay, was a reference to this latter book. There was a memo of the deposit of $900 on September 11th in this book.

The Chancellor wanted to know if he had any assistance in preparing the document, and Gamey swore that he had none. Mr. J. R. McGregor had read it after it was written, and he had shown the MS. to Mr. W. R. Smyth, M.P.P., who had not read it, however. He had taken reasonable care to have it accurate.

Part of His Game.

The Chancellor then took up the letter Gamey wrote to Mr. Whitney at the end of January, stating that at the request of his many constituents, he had resolved to take an independent stand in the House, and wanted to know if it were true. Mr. Gamey explained that it was true to this extent, that he had been requested by some to do so. In a riding like his, the Liberals, and even some Conservatives might desire him to do so.

"Was it intended to mislead?" asked the Chancellor severely several times.

Gamey kept right on with his explanation, and declared that Mr. Stratton wanted the letter written, and that it was misleading to this extent, that he had personally no intention of supporting the Government.

"Shaking Up the Dry Bones."

The Chancellor then read Gamey's letter writt?n in February, to the editor of The Manitoulin Expositor. In it he told the latter that the people of this province were not satisfied with either political party, and that there would be a shaking up of dry bones, and the Chancellor wanted to know whether it was true or written to mislead. Gamey said it was partially true, but was mainly intended to keep The Expositor quiet.

"I'm sure, my Lord, you'll agree with me that the Liberal party does not represent the good, honest people of this Province!" he remarked.

He added that there were many Socialists in his riding, and in some of their proposals he agreed.

"Well, are you a straight Conservative?" asked the Chancellor.

Gamey said he was a straight supporter of the party as constituted under Mr. Whitney, but nevertheless he would be glad to advise them on some measures which he personally favored.

"Do not make public speeches!" commanded the Chancellor.

A Mining Deal.

The Chancellor then wanted to know whether he had had any mining deal last summer. Gamey said he had been in a transaction with Mr. Bristol. They had had an option on a mining property near Arnprior which expired in November.

"You have followed the course of the evidence?" queried the Chancellor.

"I have," said Gamey. The Chancellor then recited the long list of denials by which his story had been met and asked him if having heard them he still wished to adhere to his story, explaining that it was necessary to ascertain whether the money deposited in court was legitimate money or whether it was forfeited to the Crown.

"In the face of all that evidence" he concluded his lengthy address to the witness, "do you still adhere to your evidence?"

"Certainly I do," said Gamey emphatically. The Chancellor had alluded to the fact that that Crossin's evidence would appear to show that $900 was deposited by Gamey in the Ontario Bank on the morning of Sept. 11 before the money was alleged to have been paid by Stratton. Gamey pointed out that the books of the bank showed that the money was deposited in the afternoon of that day.

He Borrowed $1,200.

He then went on to explain that after the division of the $3,000 on Sept. 11, he had borrowed $1,200 of Frank Sullivan's share, giving his I.O.U., $900 he deposited to the credit of the Crossin Piano Company and $300 in Mr. Burke's private bank in Gore Bay. In the House he had not stated this because he thought Sullivan would be more likely to tell the truth if he thought he would get this money back. In the court he had not been asked anything relating to the matter.

Mr. Johnston asked their Lordships to enquire when the $1,200 was to be paid back. Gamey swore that the I.O.U. was to be paid off when he and Sullivan settled their deals together.

Before he left the box Mr. Gamey was asked if he had anything more he wished to add to his testimony. He replied that he wished to deny the evidence of Mr. James Conmee as to their conversation on the train on June 12. The latter's statement that they had discussed a protest was clearly false, since the returns were not made until June 17 and the petition was not filed until July 14.

Conmee Asked Him to Join.

He had not discussed Mr. Whitney's speech at Sudbury. In the first place because he was not at the Sudbury meeting, in the second place because Mr. Whitney was sick when he was there, spoke only a few minutes, and did not enunciate a mining policy. He added that he had been asked to join in the smelter proposition by Mr. Conmee solely on the ground that he was a Conservative and might help to satisfy the Opposition while Conmee handled the Government.

Asked about the deposit slip transaction, he said he would be delighted to give an explanation to the Commission, except that Mr. Johnston had been kind enough to threaten him with criminal proceedings, and he had been advised that he should reserve his defence until he came into court. Moreover, he did not deem the matter relevant to the enquiry.

When Gamey left the box, Mr. Johnston put in the newspaper interviews granted by Mr. Gamey at Buffalo, in which he said that he had gathered the $900 in the previous summer.

Gamey, recalled, would not deny the interviews, and added that he had considered the loan from Sullivan as private funds.

Messrs. John S. Maclean, of The Globe; E. Middleton, of The Mail and Empire; and John R. Bone, of The Star, who interviewed Gamey at Buffalo, verified the published reports.

Mr. D. A. Jones of Beeton.

Mr. D. A. Jones, of Beeton, was then called and swore that he was an uncle by marriage of Mr. Gamey, and that some time prior to the last general election Gamey had told him that he was going to run as an independent. After the general election, some time in June or July, Jones swore that he saw Gamey, and the latter said that he did not propose to sit in Opposition for four years. The bargain was struck that they were to go into partnership on various "deals." They discussed the matter of patronage, and Gamey said he would be content with half of it, and would be careful to avoid friction.

After ascertaining Gamey's position, Jones went to see Mr. Alexander Smith, the Liberal organizer, and told him that Gamey would support the Government. He didn't let him know that they were pulling together, however. He was acting entirely without the knowledge of the Government. He saw Gamey again and suggested that he get evidence to unseat Mr. Smyth and Mr. Miscampbell and Gamey said that if he did so he would want to be well paid for it. That was what he alluded to in his letter to Gamey of August 16th, in which he said that if he were in his position he could pick up thousands of dollars. Asked what he meant by "You will be even better treated than you expect." Jones said that he meant Gamey would be a strong candidate at the election, which must follow his being unseated, because he would not be opposed.

Organizer Smith's Decision.

He had seen Smith and asked if it would be legal to pay Gamey's expenses for collecting evidence in Sault Ste. Marie and Algoma, and Smith said it would. Mr. Smith was the "Acting manager" referred to in the letter.

Asked what he meant by his allusions to the railway passes being all right. Jones said that at Gamey's request he had seen Mr. Smith about them, and the latter had said he thought they would be all right. The letter of September 14, Jones explained, referred to mining matters in part. They were considering some good things down East. The "party" alluded to was a party Gamey was to hunt up in connection with the Sault protest. He could not say who the party was.

Not the Attorney-General.

When he said that he could get into Mr. Gibson's office at any time, he meant the office of Thomas W. Gibson, of the Bureau of Mines.

He had never known that Gamey had been near the Parliament Buildings, or that he knew Frank Sullivan. He thought that he and Gamey were working together to make what money they could out of deals. Gamey had expected but half the patronage, but Alex. Smith said it was usual to give Government supporters the whole of it.

Jones Cross-Examined.

Cross-examined by Mr. Blake, Jones could not say how long previous to August 16 he had first talked with Gamey and with Smith about the petition.

"Is it not an absurdity for you to speak of Mr. Gamey's being unseated when he was going to support the Government?" asked Mr. Blake. Mr. Jones answered that he would not do an injury to his friend.

He admitted that he wanted to make use of Mr. Gamey's influence in getting hold of franchises. He wanted to make a little legitimate money. There had been no mining deal between them since 1898.

Mr. Blake took up a phrase in one of the letters, in which Jones said he had seen "the present acting manager." Counsel pointed out that the Premier was then in England, and someone was acting in his place, whereas Mr. Smith had been Liberal organizer for nine years.

Mr. Jones could offer no explanation.

Wouldn't Shy at a Graft.

Asked again what he meant by "better" treatment, Mr. Jones said he referred to the fact Gamey was to get more patronage than he expected. The witness said he wouldn't be human if he shied at a timber limit with possibilities in it that came in his way.

The court adjourned till 2 o'clock.

"A Good Haul at Once."

Mr. Blake continued the cross-examination of D. A. Jones at 2 o'clock.

"Then you state," said Mr. Blake, "that you were going to work in line with Mr. Gamey and you say 'I can tell you how to make a good haul at once.' This letter you said was written shortly after the conference with Mr. Alexander Smith."

Mr. Jones—"It was written after I had seen him." He had not suggested anything in regard to information as to Algoma and Sault Ste. Marie. Although not an ardent politician he had made the suggestion in order to strengthen Mr. Gamey's influence.

Q.—And where were you to come in? A.—I was to come in because he had more influence with the Government and I would be able perhaps to get more——

Shall We Call It Pickings?

Q.—Shall we call it pickings? A.—Call it what you like.

Q.—I would call it stealings, but it was in case of you that I called it pickings. Put your own name to it? A.—Legitimate franchises.

In answer to further questions, Mr. Jones said the "Certain important information that will be sufficient to answer the purpose desired," was to open the seat and get Reformers put in. He had asked Gamey to go as a Conservative among Conservatives and get such information as could be handed over to Mr. Smith for the Reformers and get him (Miscampbell) unseated for it.

Didn't Bring Him Up.

Mr. Blake—Q.—Are you bringing up many nephews in the same way? A.—I didn't bring him up.

Continuing, Mr. Jones said the "proper place" to which he could pass the information was Alexander Smith. "That will make a clean sweep of three," meant Manitoulin, Algoma and Sault Ste. Marie. "A good deal of a politician able to get three seats," queried Mr. Blake, and Mr. Jones nodded. He was not to get any of the profit of the payment to Mr. Gamey for what Mr. Blake called treachery to his friends, but he would have his share of the franchises if they secured any.

The Question of Dreams.

Witness explained that "No one would dream of you and me," meant that his name would be used in connection with the deals and Mr. Gamey's would not appear. "The snap worth trying for," and "It will come to hand quick sure," were written after his conversation with Mr. Alex. Smith, and Mr. Jones explained that it was his own assurance that he thought they would be willing to pay a reasonable amount for the information.

"The Pot of Money."

"The pot of money" written of was to be had from some mineral claims that he thought would do it, and these were so rich that he had written, "I will surprise you." Others had been surprised at the richness of the samples of copper he had shown, but he had not made anything out of them yet. Mr. Gamey had told him not to be seen speaking to him, as the Conservative party suspected him, and he didn't want to do anything that would injure his party, at a time when the Government majority was dwindling. If Ross didn't succeed he wanted to hold in with his own party. This was just after the letter of the 19th Sept., and they bid each other the time of day—that is, parted.

No Franchises Until—

Asked if Gamey had an opportunity of discussing these franchises with Mr. Jones, witness said there wasn't any franchises until he had declared himself, and he had never said anything further to witness about them except his statement in the House. Witness thought his chances were very small after his statement.

To Mr. Johnston, Mr. Jones said he had shown his mineral samples to Mr. Thomas Gibson's secretary, a mineralogist, and he was so surprised at their richness that he had some remarks put in the paper about it. Mr. Gomey had said there was a lot of funny work going on in Mr. Miscampbell's constituency, and Gamey had assured him for the last three years that he would support the Reform Government.

What Gamey Was Pretending.

Q.—Now I am asking you, if he was pretending then, politically or in any other way, that these Conservatives were friends of his, or treating them as such? A.—He was simply pretending to me that he was doing everything he could to make himself strong with the Government.

Witness said that Mr. Gamey first suggested the prices of information regarding Miscampbell's constituency, and he it was who first talked money concerning it.

To the Chancellor he said that it was at the time there was said to be one of a majority, before the election in the three Norths, that Gamey talked to him about the Ross Government holding the reins of power and the majority dwindling.

Gamey Pledged.

Lachlan Galbraith, farmer, Providence Bay, said he had attended meetings of Mr. Gamey's during the election campaign. There was nothing in his speeches that could be construed as meaning he would support the Ross Government or their measures. He pledged himself to support the Whitney policy at the convention, and he denounced the Ross Government. There was nothing said about Mr. Campbell at the meeting on May 3. W. J. Berry had told him he was not at the

The Rochester Route

Activity prevails on board the steamers "North King" and "Caspian" in the Kingston harbor, where they have undergone extensive repairs during the past winter. Summerville, N.Y., port of Rochester, will again be the landing place on the American side, and the cars of the Rochester Electric Railway will transfer passengers and baggage to the city. The service will be further perfected by the landing of the steamers just above, the ferry and the car tracks, being run to the water.

The following officers will be in charge of these popular steamers this season:

Steamer "North King"—Captain, J. Jarrell; first officer, A. Hicks; second officer, M. Lawless; chief engineer, H. Dupere; second engineer, R. Vince; purser, A. Muir; steward, J. Tilton.

Steamer "Caspian"—Captain, William Bloomfield; chief engineer, O. J. Hickey; second engineer, G. Sauve; purser, J. G. Dwyer; steward, H. Wemp.

The steamer "North King" begins her weekly trips on the Bay of Quinte and Rochester route 31st May, and her daily trips on the Port Hope, Cobourg and Rochester route on 1st June, arriving and leaving at about the same time as last year. During July and August the Bay of Quinte and Rochester service will be daily, except Monday, when the steamer "Caspian" will be put into commission.

THE GAMEY INVESTIGATION

STRATTON CONTRADICTED — INTERESTING DEVELOPMENTS.

As the investigation proceeds it is shown that the Stratton-Sullivan defence is not above suspicion. Here are a few of the salient points:

Mr. Harry Sheppard swears positively that he met Gamey at Webbwood on the afternoon of January 14th last, and he must have left Toronto on the 13th to reach there. This was used to combat the testimony of one of Stratton's witnesses that he conversed with Gamey at the Walker House both on the 13th and 14th of January. The Stratton defence is developing strange traits in the political Grit character.

• • •

The attempt on the part of the defence in the Gamey investigation, to show that Gamey ran his election as an independent, has signally failed. A number of witnesses of the most respectable character have sworn positively that at every meeting he held he denounced the Ross Government in the most positive language.

• • •

The Gamey investigation is becoming more interesting as the facts are brought to light. Mr. Stratton swore that the date upon which Mr. Gamey visited his office was on the 9th of September. Mr. Robert I. Armstrong, a general merchant and machine agent of Gore Bay, swears positively that at that time he was with Gamey attending the Toronto Exhibition. People will begin to think Stratton has a treacherous memory.

• • •

Mr. Wm. Vincer, township clerk, swore that at the referendum he got the appointment of deputy returning officer through the influence of Mr. Gamey.

This shows clearly that Gamey had an arrangement with the Government through which he was to have the patronage.

• • •

A district constable of Providence Bay, Manitoulin, gave evidence as to Gamey's utterances during the election contest. He declared in the most positive manner that Gamey made no statement from which a deduction could be drawn that he was going to support the Government. Mr. Johnston, who has played the part of bully in his cross-examinations, asked Ellis if he thought the witnesses who had been called to give evidence for the defence would tell the truth?

"They might, possibly!" he declared.

"Come, come now!" said Mr. Johnston.

"If they swore what you say they did," declared Ellis, "they swore to lies."

He then admitted having made interruptions at a Liberal meeting held later on.

"Them Grit speakers was telling lies," he said, by way of explanation, for one of the Government orators told the audience that Mr. Foy was going to abolish Separate Schools, and he knew that was a lie, and for that reason interrupted the speaker.

With the strawberry season coming on it may be well to remember that there are more ways of winning the lightweight boxing championship than by fighting for it in the squared circle.

• • •

Now what can Minto and Maude be thinking about, to go gallivanting around all the jay towns in western Ontario and never come near this beautiful city at all. Have they never heard of Queen Victoria Park? It looks like it.

• • •

Hold on, though, perhaps it is the rep. of the old d.s.b.g. which keeps 'em away. And, come to think of it, we wouldn't want them to come here till that awful place was fixed up. By the way, when does the great body known as Mr. O'Flynn's Bible class intend to carry out their threats in regard to the desolate spot in question? Here it is the middle of May, and not a post hole dug yet.

It might not be out of place to point out to the Aldermen that if they are going to do anything this season towards giving the city a public bath they might as well talk the matter over to-night. If it's put off much longer it will be another case of "Oh, the season is too far advanced now; wait till next year."

During a discussion in the Ontario Legislature on the proposed bill to legalize the establishment of civic coal and wood yards, Mr. Pense, of Kingston, is reported to have said that Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa and Brantford were the only places that suffered last winter. What does Mr. Pense mean by that? Does he not call it suffering when people had to pay from $10 to $15 per ton for coal? Plenty of places, besides the ones he mentioned, had to do that. Mr. Pense is either wrong in his premises or he has been misreported. It might not cause him suffering to pay $10 or $15 a ton for coal, but there are plenty of people who would consider it very hard lines, indeed.

Cyclists and drivers in this city may do well to remember that the road law respecting such matters says: "In case a person on a bicycle or tricycle, or other vehicle, overtakes a person or vehicle travelling at less speed, the person first mentioned shall give audible warning of his approach before attempting to pass, and shall in passing turn out to the left so far as may be necessary to avoid a collision."

Apropos of Mr. Andrew Carnegie's recent sneer at Canada's steel manufacturing trade, it may be interesting to note that, at a special meeting of the Dominion Iron & Steel Company, held in Montreal, the report showed that, "During the past two months a fair profit has been made on pig and steel billets and from the contracts that have been made the directors expect to earn sufficient to pay the preferred dividend." That does not seem the "mirage" that the great Carnegie termed it.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING COMMENT.

Mr. J. S. Winchester, representing the local lacrosse club, is in Port Hope this afternoon attending a meeting of the clubs in District No. 12, in which district the local club's lot is cast. The district schedule will be drawn up this afternoon, and if "Winnie" looks after the interests of the lacrosse men as well as he did those of the hockey boys last winter they won't have much to complain of.

It is expected that the championship season will open in this city about the end of the present month, though arrangements are under way to have an exhibition game here on the afternoon of May 25th.

In future the practise nights of the club will be as follows: Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, from 6 to 8, on the Cricket field; on Saturday afternoons the practice will be on the Driving Park. The attendance at practises has been fairly good, as many as eighteen having been out at one time, but the time has arrived now for regular, systematic practise, and the boys are urged to be present on all regular practise nights, at all events.

There is no doubt at all that Belleville can turn out a team this year fully the equal of last year's team, if not better. In fact it is whispered that there are a few stars in the city at present who will open people's eyes when the playing season begins. The boys will need to practise hard and take no chances, for they are up against no easy propositions in Peterboro, Port Hope, Oshawa, et al. However, Belleville players have never disappointed their friends yet, and we don't think they will this summer.

JEWELRY

THE CIRCLE OF GOLD

Fashioned daintily and set with a Pearl, Opal, Turquoise or Diamond, according to choice, that we can sell you for from $5 to $20 will be a revelation.

Quality alone means nothing, beauty of design, fine workmanship, or price mean nothing. But a combination of all these means a great deal, and we shall give them with quality at the high point and price at the low point ratio. And although this statement applies to rings in particular, it also applies to our entire stock of jewelery.

Auto-Expanding

The foot spreads when borne upon!
It contracts again when lifted!

A new shoe, which fits the foot neatly when off the ground, must therefore pinch it when stood upon, till it is stretched to the maximum width of foot.

A shoe which has thus been stretched, till comfortable across the ball when stood upon, must be too loose when the foot is lifted.

The RESILIA is the only shoe which expands at the ball when the foot does, and contracts again when lifted.

It becomes a size larger inside when the foot sinks down into the resilient centresole, the rebounding of which takes up the leather slack again when foot is lifted.

It is thus as easy as an old shoe the first moment it is worn, requires no "breaking in," and retains its shape because the leather is never overstretched.

In Memoriam

RICHARD PORTER.

By the death of Richard T. Porter, of Huntingdon Township, at his home one mile northwest of Thomasburg, on the 7th day of May, the community, and in fact the whole county, is bereft of a useful and honorable resident.

Mr. Porter, though not of a rugged disposition, had been ill only two weeks, his death being due to blood poisoning.

Deceased was the youngest son of the late Samuel Porter, of Huntingdon, and was born in that township in the year 1850.

Some twenty years ago he was united in marriage to Tillie, daughter of Andrew Coulter, Esq., of Huntingdon, by whom he is survived, together with a family of seven children, four sons and three daughters, all residing at home except one son, Charles, in the Ontario Bank, Tweed. Deceased also left two brothers and three sisters, Mrs. R. H. Morton, of Huntingdon; Mrs. Thomas Graham, Mrs. Wm. Blakely, William Porter and Robert Porter, of Hungerford.

In addition to being a good and up-to-date farmer, Mr. Porter's services were given to the public in various avenues.

He was superintendent of Christ Church Sabbath School, Thomasburg, a member of the School Board, a trustee of the Clarion cemetery, president of the Moira Valley Cheese Mfg. Co., president of the Tweed Cheese Board of Trade, and a County Commissioner for District No. 5 of the County of Hastings. He was for several years Reeve of Huntingdon Township, and had filled various positions in the Orange Order.

He was a prominent member of the Anglican Church and in politics a Liberal-Conservative. Deceased was connected for many years with L.O.L. No. 131, Thomasburg, and also I.O.O.F. No. 293, Thomasburg, and A.O.U.W. Lodge No. 264, Tweed, all of which societies were in attendance at his funeral on Saturday afternoon last. The beautiful burial service of the Oddfellows was held at the house at one o'clock, after which the cortege moved out in the direction of Thomasburg, followed by about 250 carriages, believed to have been the largest funeral ever witnessed in this district. The pall-bearers were: R. A. Morton, J. A. Beatty, Joseph English, W. H. Carelton, W. H. Davis and George McCallum.

The service at the church was conducted by the Rev. J. de P. Wright and interment took place in the Union cemetery alongside.

The County Council was represented at the funeral by Messrs Andrew Kirk, H. K. Denyes and F. B. Parker.

The floral tributes from societies and friends were numerous and rare.

The passing of a man of the stamp of deceased leaves a gap in a community which is hard to fill. A fluent speaker and possessed of good business capacity, his services were sought in many ways, but in no place will the loss be felt like his own home, to which he was fondly attached. To the bereaved family are extended the sympathies of the entire community.—Com.

POOR GIRL, PITY HER.

Growing! Yes, into weakness, but not strength. Studies—plenty of them. Tired, of course she is, and weak too. Does not eat enough and digests far less than enough. This condition is so frequent, but how seldom noticed even by fond parents. Give her Ferrozone, then watch her appetite improve, her cheeks and lips grow ruddy, her step elastic, her spirits bouyant. All this simply the result of eating and digesting enough, making blood, and thereby strengthening the nerve and brain power. Ferrozone gives a woman's strength to weak girls. Your daughter or wife needs Ferrozone. Get it to-day.

Dominion Parliament.

Ottawa, May 15.—The time of the House of Commons was taken up all yesterday afternoon discussing the Minister of Finance's resolution to increase the annual grant of 2 per cent. on the cost of dry docks approved of by the Government to 3 per cent., up to the extent of $30,000 a year for twenty years. Practically, the first dry dock to come under the new proposal is now being built at Collingwood. Mr. Fielding hoped that one at St. John would be built under the new bonus, and that others would follow. The House generally favored the project, but various criticisms were passed. The evening session was spent discussing the question of German goods coming to Canada under British preference.

Representatives of railway companies and Boards of Trade yesterday had a conference with Hon. Mr. Blair and Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick respecting the former's bill creating a railway commission.

FIGHT WHOLE COMMONWEALTH.

Unionism Is Preparing to Branch Out in Australia Strike.

London, May 15.—In a despatch from Sydney, N. S. W., the correspondent of The Daily Mail reports secret meetings on the part of New South Wales trades unionists, notably the railroad and street car men. The official head of labor unionism in New South Wales, declared that all workmen would support the railroad men solidly, and that unless the Victorian Government surrendered the struggle would extend to the other States, the Victorian fight being only an outpost skirmish.

Collector McGregor Dead.

Windsor, May 15.—Collector of Customs William McGregor died at his home here yesterday afternoon in his 68th year. The deceased was taken suddenly ill while addressing a public meeting about ten days ago. He was born in Sarnia in 1836. He was educated at Oberlin College and afterwards came to Windsor and engaged in the banking business. He was Warden of Essex County for five consecutive terms, and served four terms as representative of North Essex in the Dominion Parliament.

Doing good is the only certainly happy action of a man's life.

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

The best wheel of fortune is honest labor.

HAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickerson, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

Wedding rings in St. Kilda used to be made of worsted.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed 'Perfection.'

Coral is a talisman against thunder and evils by flood and field.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Signed, JEAN VALCOURT,
Wotton, P.Q. General Merchant

A woman never knows where the match box is.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

Use the safe, pleasant, and effectual worm killer, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator; nothing equals it. Procure a bottle and take it home.

The average watch represents but 12 hours of human labor.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

If thy friend is honey, do not lick him up altogether.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

Attend no auctions if thou hast no money.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been saved. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes: "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

Many a man's self-conceit is due to his ignorance.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given when taken for dyspepsia, dizziness, pain in the side, constipation, and disordered stomach.

Over 250,000 copies of Charles Dickens' novels are sold annually.

Do not despair of curing your sick headache when you can so easily obtain Carter's Little Liver Pills. They will effect a prompt and permanent cure. Their action is mild and natural.

The proposal to start a Cadet Corps among pupils of the High School does not, we hear, meet with favor among certain members of the Board of Education. They are not averse to the boys getting physical culture, but think that, if the lads want to wear a uniform and carry a rifle they might as well connect themselves with the local regiment, which is here for the purpose of educating the rising generation in the useful accomplishments of marching and shooting. There is likely to be quite an animated discussion on the matter when the Boarders get together again.

Premier Ross is after more money at the expense of municipalities. He has introduced a Bill to levy a tax of $100 upon circuses and travelling shows. This is correct, but the money should belong to the municipality in which the show is held, and not to the province. It is by this means municipalities are robbed of a large part of the income that legitimately belongs to them.

THE "DROP-OFF" HEART

Doctors didn't give Mrs. James long to live—but Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart foiled them and cured her.

For fifteen years Mrs. John A. James, of Wiarton, Ont., was a great sufferer from Heart Disease. For days at a time she was confined to bed, and it seemed as though every breath might be her last. Her physicians said that she might "drop off" any minute. With woman's tenacity in suffering, and believing that "while there's life there's hope," she started using Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart. Three bottles cured her. This remedy relieves in thirty minutes. 75

The Final Stages of Locomotor Ataxia

ARE ABSOLUTE HELPLESSNESS, LOSS OF ALL POWER AND COMPLETE PARALYSIS — PREVENTED AND CURED BY

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Locomotor ataxia is a form of paralysis which is becoming frightfully common these days, because of the nerve-exhausting habits of the present age.

Probably you have seen victims of this ailment, walking with a jerking motion, and putting their feet down in an awkward manner, and wondered what ailed them. It was locomotor ataxia, or paralysis of the nerves and muscles which control motion.

There is a peculiar numbness of the feet and legs, an uncertain feeling when you start to walk, when you go up or down stairs or around corners. The limbs no longer obey the commands of the brain, the soles of the feet seem to have lost their feeling, and you feel as though you might topple over or move backwards instead of going ahead.

The final stages of locomotor ataxia are absolute helplessness, loss of all power, and complete paralysis of the nervous system.

The time to begin treatment is when the first symptoms of nervous exhaustion become apparent. When you find that you do not sleep well, start up suddenly, have difficulty in concentrating your thoughts, suffer from headache, indigestion, and irritability, it is time to take prompt action to restore the vitality of the blood and nerves. For this purpose there is no more satisfactory treatment than Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Nervous diseases never get well of themselves, nor can they be cured in a few days, but Dr. Chase's Nerve Food assists nature in restoring vitality to wasted nerves, acts in accordance with nature's laws, and is certain to do you good, because it forms new, rich blood and nerve cells. DAISY GORDON'S FOLLY

—OR—

THE WORLD LOST FOR LOVE'S SAKE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY,

Author of "The Crime of Hallow-E'en," "The Flirtations of a Beauty," "Willful Gaynell," "Little Leafy," "Only a Mechanic's Daughter," etc.

The handsome stranger turned about with a muttered imprecation.

"I see how it is," he muttered fiercely, as he turned away. "Daisy has confessed our marriage to her father, but to no one else, and when the old farmer learned of my escape from the fate that awaited me, knowing I would come here to claim my bride, he has spirited Daisy off; but I will follow him to the end of the world, and take her from him. She is mine! No one shall part us!"

He made the most diligent inquiries, but all efforts to trace the whereabouts of Farmer Gordon proved futile.

Deep and loud were the threats of vengeance he muttered against the farmer.

He made it the business of his life to search for Daisy. Sooner or later he would find her.

He would not believe that she had gone away willingly —she was coerced in the matter, he was quite sure.

The terrible disappointment made him desperate. He fell a victim to his old habit of drink again to drown trouble in forgetfulness, and sunk lower from bad to worse, but through it all, low as he had fallen, associated as he was with criminals, he never once gave up his hope of finding Daisy and compeling her to live with him.

"The wife should share the husband's lot," he would tell himself grimly.

It so happened in the midst of his wanderings he drifted out to California, and on the same day Alexander Hamilton was reading the article in the papers in his room at the hotel, a dark-browed stranger was signing his name in the register, glancing furtively about him to see if, by any possible chance, any one had recognized him.

The man was Harold St. John. Beneath the same roof with Daisy — at last. Only heaven could have foretold how it would end.

As he stood there scanning the register, his eyes suddenly encountered the name of Alexander Hamilton and wife, New York.

His brow darkened.

"I had just as good a chance of being thought well of in the world as Hamilton did when we were college boys together," he mused; "now he is something very near a millionaire out there, while I——" A hard, bitter laugh burst from his lips— "I am a convict— a criminal— a nobody — whom the proud and mighty Alexander Hamilton would not deign to know now.

"I should like to crush him," he mused bitterly. "Why should he be happy in his love dream, while I am so miserable in mine?"

He had a curiosity to see what Alexander's bride was like. No doubt he would see her at luncheon.

It was rather a grim notion which seized him to ask to be seated at the same table with Alexander Hamilton, feeling sure that his disguise defied detection.

His eyes lit up with a savage gleam as, glancing at the farther end of the spacious dining-room, he saw Aleck approaching, and by his side a fair-haired young girl.

He would not stare at them, he thought, dropping his eyes— plenty of time for a quiet, thorough scrutiny when they were seated opposite him.

CHAPTER XII.

"My Sin Has Found Me Out."

For one moment after Aleck Hamilton seated himself there was silence, in that silence Harold St. John raised his eyes to the fair, girlish face beside him— she was just turning to him with a pretty gesture of impatience.

"I am so sorry your wife is not able to come down," she said, "we had arranged for a drive in the park."

"It is nothing more serious than a headache; I hope you will persuade her to keep that promise," responded Aleck— "I think a drive in the fresh air would benefit her."

Harold St. John turned away; this was evidently not Aleck's wife then. He had little interest in the conversation that followed which drifted on to other topics.

He noticed, with darkening brow, how happy Aleck looked. His dark, handsome face was the picture of contentment.

As St. John arose and left the room, Alexander Hamilton looked after him with a puzzled expression.

"Where have I seen just such a pair of dark eyes before?" he mused. "They seem strangely familiar to me."

Meanwhile Daisy had tied on her broad sun-hat and hurried down into the grounds.

"Food would choke me," she muttered, with a half sob— "but I must have air or die— my heart seems bursting."

A walk through the beautiful grounds refreshed her.

"How silly I am to give myself up to such horrible fear," she cried, throwing herself down on a pretty rustic bench by the fountain. "Harold St. John will never find me— the world is so wide— I am safe, safe."

The color drifted back to the pale, dimpled cheeks, and the light to the beautiful blue eyes.

"To think that Aleck should know him of all people," she murmured, with a cold shudder.

"If we should meet suddenly—Harold St. John and I— I feel sure that he would never recognize me— I am so greatly changed," she thought, leaning over the fountain's brim, and gazing intently down into the beautiful face the water reflected.

A slight noise directly behind her startled her, and glancing hastily around, she saw a gentleman beside the fountain, with both of his arms leaning lightly upon the railing.

"I beg your pardon, madam," he said, raising his hat respectfully — "will you kindly tell me the name of that flowering plant at your feet?"

A faint, choking cry broke from Daisy's white, stiffening lips. She tried to turn and fly, but heaven itself seemed against her; she had not even power to turn her face away, or to fall on her knees and bury it among the crimson blooms at her feet. Like one fascinated, her terrified, strained gaze never left the stranger's face.

His eyes were fixed curiously upon the plant he had been admiring. One moment more and he would raise his eyes to her face— and then—God pity her, what would happen then!

Despite the careful disguise, she had recognized Harold St. John at the first glance. While the sun shone, and the birds sang, and the perfume of the roses was wafted around her — her doom had fallen upon her — fallen suddenly and without warning. Her only hope was in sudden flight.

A wild prayer rose in her heart to heaven for help.

With energy borne of desperation, she sprung to her feet, wheeled abruptly away, and walked swiftly down the path.

Harold St John, who had not caught sight of the face beneath the broad sun-hat, looked after the retreating figure with a scornful laugh on his lips.

"By George, what a prude!" he muttered, "to take such offense at a natural, civil question. I suppose it would be the proper thing to follow and overtake the beauty, and humbly beg her pardon."

It was certainly a merciful fate which prevented him from putting this resolution into execution.

"There is time enough; I will see her again," he told homself, as he lit a cigar and threw himself down on bench she had so lately occupied.

Meanwhile Daisy had fled to the house in an agony of terror words are too weak to describe.

She never knew how she reached her own apartments; the earth seemed rocking beneath her feet, the light of the sun seemed blotted out, and a horrible darkness to reign.

Aleck sprung to meet her with a cry of alarm.

"You are ill, my darling," he said in affright. "In heaven's name, Daisy! what is the matter?"

She threw herself into Aleck's arms with the bitterest cry ever heard.

"Oh, Aleck!" she sobbed in an awful whisper. "If anything should ever happen to part us I should surely die, dear."

He took her in his arms in great alarm, caressing the beautiful golden head, kissing the white face, and colorless lips.

A System that Will not keep You waiting

Whether you want Painting, Paper Hanging, Decorating, Graining, or anything in our line, we will not keep you waiting. WE WILL NAME THE DAY, and that very day you will find us at your work, with an excellent staff of workmen—the very best mechanics that can be secured—workmen that we can rely on and that please our customers every time.

OUR WALL PAPER TRADE this year is so far the largest in the history of this house, and there are reasons behind the increased trade, and here they are—

FIRSTLY—Times are good, people have money and know where to spend it to advantage.

SECONDLY—By comparison with other lines our customers find our prices much lower and our styles of Wall Paper much higher than the ordinary.

THIRDLY—We give free two yards of bordering with each double roll of the Wall Paper it matches.

We hang our paper at very reasonable prices and always please our customers whether in papering, painting or anything else.

PAIN IN THE JOINTS.

may be muscular or rheumatic. The joints are hard to get at, and it requires a powerful, penetrating remedy to reach the affected parts. Polson's Nerviline exactly meets the requirements, for it is both powerful and penetrating. The pain is expelled as if by magic, for one drop of Nerviline equals in strength five drops of other remedies. You won't often call the doctor if Nerviline is in the house. Price 25 cents.

A Heretic.

"The man is a driveling idiot," said the trust magnate.

"A plumb fool," agreed the coal baron.

"An unmitigated lunatic," assented the steel king.

"Crazy as a March hare," asseverated the great financier.

"A hopeless imbecile," asserted the power in Wall street.

"Absolutely and utterly devoid of sense," chimed in the senator.

"As brainless as a barrel," added the corporation lawyer.

"But what has he done?" asked the ordinary citizen.

The crowd was convulsed with laughter.

"Why, he says," they replied, choking and gurgling, "he actually says that money isn't everything!"—"Smart Set."

SUITS FOR MEN

The Entirely Different Sorts.

Not satisfied with equaling in style, fit and excellence of workmanship the made-to-measure garments the best tailors produce, our makers are now fashioning their suits from the same fabrics which have heretofore been exclusive with the Custom Tailors.

Our showing of these suits is very extensive.

They are suits that the average man wants—they give him the style and exclusiveness he seeks without the extra cost of the tailors.

Even the most expert criticism will fail to discover that these suits were not custom made.

The broad showing we make including as it does every size for men of different propostions practically assurs a perfect fit for every man.

But in some cases an exact fit cannot be secured immediately and then we do as the tailors would do at a try on—make the necessary alterations that would secure perfection of fit.

Fancy mixed cashmeres—neat effects in Cheviots—three and four button sack styles including the new straight front.

$6.50 to $15.00

And by the way you can better judge the unassailable quality of these suits if you'll do a little comparing.

Top Coats $5.00 to $12.00

NEW CHURCH AT WOOLER

CORNER STONE WILL BE LAID ON EMPIRE DAY, MAY 22ND.

The people of Wooler are making preparations for an enormous crowd at the corner-stone laying of the new Methodist Church, on Friday, May 22. The new church is to be a modern structure, the main body being 40 x 54 ft. with front porch and tower each 12 ft. x 12 ft. and alcove 14 ft. deep, with small vestibule entry with alcove, auditorium and basement, length from front of tower to back of alcove 80 ft.

The basement is to have church parlor and class rooms. The building to be heated with furnace, lighted with gas, seated with modern seats and metallic ceiling and sides are to be used. The mason work on basement is completed.

A corner has been left for the corner stone, which will be laid at 11.30 a.m., with imposing ceremonies, by the Grand Master of Masonic Grand Lodge of Canada, His Honor Judge Harding, assisted by D. D. G. M., F. E. O'Flynn and others.

The ceremonies are under the auspices of Trent Lodge, No. 38, A. F. & A.M., and delegations from the lodges at Frankford, Brighton, Colborne, Warkworth, Campbellford, Ameliasburgh and Belleville, are expected.

Speeches will be delivered by Judge Harding, F. E. O'Flynn, Esq., Sir Mackenzie Bowell, J. W. Johnson, Esq. Rev. J. C. Wilson and others.

Died at the Hospital

Mr. Patrick Clark, an aged resident of this city, died at the hospital yesterday afternoon. Deceased was born in Ireland some 95 years ago, but had spent the greater portion of his life in this city. Previous to being admitted to the hospital Mr. Clarke was an inmate of the Home. He was a member of St. Michael's Church. The remains were interred this afternoon, services being held at St. Michael's Church.

Rolling Mills May Start Again

MR. KIRKWOOD'S AGENT SAID TO BE BUYING SCRAP IRON FOR HIM IN THIS VICINITY.

If what one hears is true, the rolling mills will soon be again in operation. Some time ago it was learned that the engines and machinery down there were being cleaned up preparatory to starting, but so many stories have been told that it was deemed wise to spread no more false alarms.

To-day, however, it was learned that Mr. Kirkwood's agent in this city had been instructed to purchase all the scrap iron available in the towns of this district, the intention being to start the mills in the near future.

Many people in this city had not by any means lost faith in Mr. Kirkwood, and it will be welcome news to them to hear that he means to carry out the pledges he made our citizens last December.

Here's hoping the rolling mills may start again, and make money for their owner, incidentally helping along this beautiful city.

LITTLE GEORGE THORPE'S MIRACULOUS ESCAPE

HIS TRICYCLE SMASHED BY A HORSE, BUT HE WAS UNINJURED.

A boy named George Thorpe, nine years of age, yesterday afternoon had a rather miraculous escape from receiving serious injuries. He was riding a tricycle on Front street, when, in front of the Anglo-American Hotel he was knocked down by a horse attached to a buggy, which was coming out of a gangway. The little fellow went beneath the horse in a heap, with the tricycle under him; and spectators expected to see him trampled by the animal, but he fortunately escaped without injury. The tricycle did not, however, come out of the mixup whole, but in sections, being badly broken up. No fault was attached to the driver of the animal.

A SHIRT BARGAIN.

ONE MONTH IN JAIL FOR JOHN TOPPINGS

DESERONTO ABDUCTOR GETS OFF WITH LENIENT SENTENCE.

Judge Lazier gave judgment this morning in the case of John Toppings, of Deseronto, who was charged with abducting a girl named Emma Clarke from her home in Deseronto. Whilst the accused was found guilty it was apparent that the girl did not make any objections to coming to the city with Toppings. His Honor, after reviewing the circumstances, sentenced Toppings to one month in jail.

DID HE BLOW UP THE S.S. NARONIC?

NEW YORK POLICE FIND A STARTLING NOTE IN EFFECTS OF MAN WHO SENT DYNAMITE.

New York, May 14.—Among the effects of the man who sent the infernal machine to the Cunard Line dock last week was a piece of paper on which was written in French: "The destruction of the Naronic was complete. Mr. Le Brun, who made the box, has this moment gone to Chicago."

The Naronic left Liverpool Feb. 11, 1893, with 4,000 tons of freight, a crew of 55 men, and fifteen passengers, who had gone to England on the previous trip in charge of a cargo of cattle. She was never seen after she left the Mersey.

G. Rosseau is the name of the man charged by the police with making the infernal machine and having it conveyed to the dock.

Because two time tables of steamship lines were found in his room, the police think that possibly he may have sailed for Europe, but they are not communicative as to their work. From boarders in the Currie house, however, was learned practically everything about Rosseau from the time he first went there.

His identity was established by Mrs. Currie, who discovered in his room two buttons like the pictures she had seen of the one which formed part of the infernal machine. She consulted Henry De Belmonte, one of her boarders, with the result that he went to police headquarters last Monday noon and gave Commissioner Greene all the facts about Rosseau. De Belmonte believes the mysterious lodger was either a French-Canadian or an Italian. "He showed that he was well acquainted in many cities in this country and Canada, and that he had a fair acquaintance in Montreal and Winnipeg," said De Belmonte. "He spoke of Chicago in a way that showed he knew it perfectly. On the day he brought the two boxes, which we believe were filled with dynamite, to the house, he unloaded them very carefully from a rig he drove himself, and perspired and puffed as he carried them upstairs."

On Wednesday and Thursday Rosseau was busy tinkering and hammering in his room. On Saturday morning he was busy writing a letter, and at noon went out. He did not again return.

After reading the accounts of the box in the Sunday papers, Mrs. Currie connected these facts with the man's continued absence, and on Monday, determined to wait no longer, she entered his room, which with De Belmonte she searched. They found many newspapers from cities in the west and Canada, shavings, pieces of the mechanism of a clock and parts of a powder fuse thrust away in a closet, besides the two buttons. This information was conveyed to the police, and when detectives made a further search, some clothing and a little camera, besides a paper on which was written "N'oblie pas de tout case," were found in his trunk.

HAS BOUGHT GLEN ISLAND

AMERICAN CAPITALISTS WILL BUILD A LARGE SUMMER HOTEL THERE.

Picton Times: Captain J. G. Jarvis, of Black River Bridge, has bought Glen Island. The captain just completed the deal yesterday, when the paid the first instalment, which gives him an option till the first of January. The captain is acting for a number of American capitalists of whom Col. C. S. Cutler, of Boston, Mass., is at the head. The syndicate intend erecting a large summer hotel on the Island and making other improvements to the extent of between fifty and seventy-five thousand dollars. They will also put a steamer on the route between Picton and the Island and to other points. Col. Cutler and party are expected to arrive about June first to make further plans of operation.

PEN PICTURES OF PEOPLE YOU MEET

ON A BELLEVILLE STREET.

REV. MONSIGNOR FARRELLY.

Naturally, for the subject of our first sketch, we must have a wearer of "the cloth," and who in this fair little city has worn the clerical black so long or with more dignity to himself and his sacred calling than the gentleman whose name appears above? Nobody, you say? Then, gentle reader, you are right. As he beheld him walking down Front St. yesterday afternoon, the writer could not help thinking that, like the "Friar of Orders Grey," Rev. Monsignor Farrelly exemplifies the fact that "He who leads a good life is sure to live well." With his strongly marked, rosy face; his benignant expression; his silvery locks surmounted by a shining silk hat; his erect form; his cheery nod and smile for all who know him, the Rev. gentleman is a notable figure—a typical "priest of the parish." If ever one of the immortal characters created by Charles Lever was incarnated in this world, he appears now in the person of Rev. Father James Farrelly. As he passes down the street Protestants and Catholics alike look after him with kindly interest, which in many cases deepens to affection. Where was he born?—well, if you ever spoke to him you'd never ask that question. Sure, can't you see the map of Ireland on that face? County Cavan, Ireland, has the honor of being the Rev. gentleman's birth place, and he first saw the light of day in this weary world some 76 years ago. Early in life he came to Canada, and in this Dominion he received his education, in the City of Kingston. Among the few things that Limestone City has to be proud of is the fact that within its gates was educated and ordained one who, for some 32 years now, has been guide, philosopher and friend to hundreds—nay, thousands—of Belleville people, many of whom differed from him in certain points of religion. On May 22, 1851, young James Farrelly was ordained a priest of the Church of Rome. His first charge was in Lindsay, and from there, 32 years and some months ago, he was sent to take charge of St. Michael's parish in this city. Everybody remembers how, two years ago on the 22nd of this month, the Rev. gentleman celebrated his golden jubilee as a priest. Dignitaries of his Church, as well as prominent laymen, flocked here to do him honor. Affectionate addresses were presented, accompanied by gifts of gold, and the occasion was one not soon to be forgotten by either the Rev. gentleman himself or his parishioners. So, in the peaceful eventide of his life, he is still a familiar figure on our streets, with here a smile for some faithful one and there a word of admonition for another who, perhaps, has been treading the "primrose way." And his parishioners will tell you that the Monsignor, suave as he is and a "Gentleman of the Old School," has a rather striking flow of language when occasion calls for words of correction to fall on the ears of some erring son or daughter. For a generation now the kindly priest has watched over his flock, christening babies, marrying the girls and boys and burying the dead. And long may he continue his good work. Many hearts will be sad in this city when another is called to fill the place so long and worthily held by Right Rev. Monsignor James Farrelly.

TRENTON ODDFELLOWS VISITED BELLEVILLE LODGE

PLEASANT FRATERNAL FUNCTION TOOK PLACE LAST NIGHT.

A number of the members of Trenton Lodge, I.O.O.F., last evening paid a fraternal visit to Belleville Lodge, No. 81. For the benefit of the visitors the degree team exemplified the degrees, doing the work in a most creditable manner, and were highly complimented by the visiting brethren. At the conclusion of the work the members repaired to the assembly room and partook of refreshments. The gathering was presided over by Bro. Ald. McFee, who made an excellent chairman. A number of appropriate toasts were proposed and ably responded to by the visitors and local members. The singing of the National Anthem brought the proceedings to a close at a seasonable hour.

In the Justice Shop

Vicious Dog.

William Diamond was charged with being the owner of a dog which bit a boy named F. Klein. The defendant claimed that he did not own the canine, but it followed him about. The Magistrate ordered that the dog be destroyed or sent away.

Alleged Assault.

John Orr and Wm. Mattise were charged with assaulting and inflicting grievous bodily harm on Manley Tripp, of Trenton. The affair occurred on Monday evening last, in this city. Tripp was apparently under the influence of liquor and it is alleged that the defendants assaulted him in a shameful manner. That Tripp was abused by some person is evident from the fact that he was cut about the face and his left eye was almost closed. After considerable evidence had been taken an enlargement was granted to secure other witnesses. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown and Mr. McMahon appeared for the defendants.

Another Dog Case.

Alexander Smith was charged with being the owner of a dog which yesterday attacked Mr. Geo. Vantassel and bit him severely on the leg. It cost Mr. Smith $7 and he has also to get rid of the canine.

What Does This Mean?

Picton Times: Arrangements are being made at Belleville for the reception and entertainment July 1 next of the executive committee of the grand council. A mammoth celebration will mark the presence in the city of the distinguished guests. All the district councils will participate in this celebration.

HOMELESS THROUGH FIRE

Over a Hundred Families Have Lost Homes and Stock.

Thousands of Acres of Government Timber Lands Around Lake Winnipeg Devastated by Flames—The Whole Country on Both Sides of the Lake Is a Smoking Ruin—All Buildings in Its Course Were Destroyed.

Winnipeg, May 15.—Word reached the city yesterday of terrific forest fires raging on both sides of Lake Winnipeg. The fires commenced evidently about three days ago. The district on fire covers thousands of acres of valuable timber lands, chiefly property of the Dominion Government.

The loss of personal property is tremendous, and over a hundred families have lost their homes and stock.

E. F. Stephenson, Commissioner of Crown Lands and Timber, returned yesterday morning from Selkirk and confirmed the reports of the forest fires. "The whole country on both sides of the lake," said Mr. Stephenson, "is either on fire or the fire has run through it, leaving nothing but ruins of trees and buildings.

"Valuable Government timber is being destroyed, but we are powerless to do anything to check the fire. The timber is parched dry and the undergrowth is very rank and like tinder owing to the scarcity of rain this spring.

"I should say that about 300 miles along the C.P.R. from Tyndall to Balsam Bay, from there to Gimli, and from Winnipeg right down to Selkirk comprises the territory which the fire so far has visited.

"Many homes have been destroyed in the German settlement, and all buildings where the fire has reached have been destroyed. Fences, barns, farm houses and valuable timber is burnt to an amount that I cannot estimate. The fire has been raging for three days. In just what territory it started I cannot say. So far as I know no lives have been lost, but many families are destitute."

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Santiago, Chili.—All the banks and business houses at Valparaiso have re-opened their doors. The strike is over.

Halifax, N. S.—King's College has invited Dr. Parkin to become its principal at a salary of $5,000. He will likely consider the offer.

Halifax, N.S.,—While fishing from a punt in Yarmouth Harbor Thursday, Jesse Amiro, aged 14, and Henry Deveau, aged 15, were drowned.

Canadians have been given a chance to tender for food and forage for the Imperial troops in Cape Colony, the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony.

St. John, N.B.—The Veronica mutineers, were convicted of murder, Thursday in the Liverpool court, and were sentenced to death. The prisoners numbered four.

Isaac Walter Romaine was Thursday sentenced in Toronto to four years in the penitentiary for shooting Louis Goldsmith and McGrain was given eight years in the same institution for stabbing Geo. Williams to death.

Hanging from a beam of an outhouse, with the fatal noose about his neck, the wife and sister of Frederick Le Bar, a young French-Canadian, came upon his dead body at 7 a.m. Thursday, in Toronto. Deceased leaves a widow and three small children. There will be no inquest.

A special from Norfolk, Va., says that the British steamer St. Oswald arrived Thursday with the crew of the British brig Bertha Gray. The brig was lost at sea. The brig Bertha Gray of Yarmouth, N. S., sailed from Jacksonville, Fla., May 2 for St. Kitts. She was of 320 tons register.

Winnipeg, Man.—The unions affiliated with the local Trades and Labor Council threaten to boycott the C.P.R., and the step, if carried into effect, will mean stagnation of business in almost every line. This proposition will finally come before the Trades and Labor Council at its next regular meeting.

Halifax, N.S.—William Gray, aged 60, an oiler, in the Consumer's Cordage Works at Dartmouth, was whirled to death Thursday afternoon. He was passing the big flywheel, which was moving at the rate of 100 revolutions a minute, and his body caught up by the belt. He was carried around several revolutions and then dropped.

Ontario Legislature.

Toronto, May 15.—In the Legislature yesterday afternoon Premier Ross, at the request of Mr. Whitney, explained some features of his power bill. He said that the Government would not undertake the proposition of supplying all parts of the province with power generated at the Niagara Falls. It would cost too much. He would leave it with private enterprise. Mr. Whitney in reply said Mr. Ross did not expect any municipality to take advantage of the permission to develop power. He also took objection to allowing the Chief Justice of Ontario to have charge of the working out of the bill. Mr. Davis' bill to extend the land grants to all veterans who served on the frontier during Canada's several wars provoked much discussion, but was reported without amendment, $282,920 of the agricultural estimates were passed, and the House adjourned.

Guelph Boy Killed.

Guelph, May 15.—The young son of John Carney, who fell between the front wheel and the box of a wagon yesterday morning, and was badly crushed, died in the hospital yesterday afternoon. Three years ago he was run over by a G.T.R. train and lost an arm.

Mr. McPherson said he had no more witnesses present, but two of them mentioned would be here today.

The Chancellor said they must close all this oral testimony today, and be ready for argument on Thursday next. Saturday would be left for the bank, and the case must be closed so far as evidence went, this week.

The Commission at 3.15 adjourned until to-day at 10 o'clock.

MR. JUSTICE NESBITT.

Well-Known Lawyer Appointed to Succeed the Late Hon. Justice Mills—His Distinguished Career.

Toronto, May 15.—Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., of Toronto, has accepted the appointment to the Supreme Court bench, as successor to the late Hon. Justice Mills, Mr. Nesbitt is a well-known Conservative, and the offer, coming, as it did, with the unanimous approval of the Liberal Government, is especially complimentary. As the Supreme Court is now in session, the new judge has been given short notice, and will enter upon the discharge of his judicial functions on Monday.

Mr. Nesbitt is a son of the late John W. Nesbitt, and his wife, Mary Wallace. He was born in Woodstock, Ont., in 1859, where he received his academic education. After being called to the bar, in 1881, he practised for a short time in Hamilton, and then came to Toronto. As a member of the firm of McCarthy, Osler, Hoskin & Creelman, he received his training as a corporation lawyer, and, on the deaths of B. B. Osler and Dalton McCarthy, his "foster-fathers in the law," he was fortunate enough to keep up to their standard, gaining almost a monopoly on the railway and insurance work of the Province. Later, he became a member of the present firm of Beatty, Blackstock & Nesbitt, and has engaged in many important litigations, both as general counsellor to the Grand Trunk Railway, and as legal advisor for other prominent railway and insurance companies.

Mr. Nesbitt has been president of the Osgoode Legal and Literary Society, and became a Q.C. in 1896.

He was prominent in Toronto social circles, and his numerous friends will be sorry to hear that his appointment will necessitate his removal to Ottawa.

TO CONSOLIDATE EMPIRE

Treaty of Preference and Reciprocity With the Colonies.

New Policy Propounded by Colonial Secretary Chamberlain—Foreshadows the Abolition of the Artificial and Narrow Interpretation of Free Trade—Emphasises the Securing of the Trade of Colonies as a Preservative of Empire.

London, May 16.—Addressing his constituents at Birmingham last night, Colonial Secretary Chamberlain made an important speech, which seems to foreshadow the direct raising of the question of free trade versus protection at the next general election, and propounds a policy of reciprocal preferential treatment to the colonies.

In the beginning of his speech, Mr. Chamberlain referred to his South African tour, and to his return home to find the minds of the people filled with local questions. He made light of the difficulties he had been told assailed the Unionist party. For him these local questions were comparatively unimportant, beside the great imperialist policy, upon which the fate of the Empire depended, namely, "whether we stand together one free nation against all the world, or whether we shall fall into separate States, selfishly seeking their own interests and losing the advantages that unity alone can give."

Get Trade of Colonies.

The Colonial Secretary proceeded strongly to urge the necessity in order to preserve the great Empire, that the trade of the colonies should be secured. Canada had offered exceptional advantages, he said, which Great Britain did not dare accept, because of the narrow interpretation of the doctrine of free trade, the policy of dictation, and interference by foreign powers. Mr. Chamberlain said he was justified by the belief that Great Britain was so wedded to its fiscal system that it could not defend its colonies.

This was a position not intended by the pioneers of free trade, who, if they were alive to-day, would agree to a treaty of preference and reciprocity with the Empire's children. The speaker said he believed that an entirely wrong interpretation had been placed upon the doctrine of free trade, but that the country ought not to be bound by this, and it should not hesitate to resort to retaliation, if necessary, wherever the interests between the colonies and the home country were threatened. Mr. Chamberlain avowed himself a free trader, but he objected to the artificial and narrow interpretation of free trade.

Do Away With Free Trade.

He pointed out that Cobden had made, and that Bright had approved, a preferential treaty with France, and said:

"There are two alternatives before you; first, to maintain the free trade policy in all its severity, although it is repudiated by every other nation and your colonies; second, to insist that we be not bound by any purely technical definition of free trade. While we seek the one chief object, the free interchange of commerce between ourselves and all the nations of the world, we will nevertheless recover our freedom, resume the power of negotiation, and, if necessary, our retaliation."

In conclusion, the Colonial Secretary said he desired that the discussion of this subject should be open. It was an issue graver in its consequences than mere local disputes. A mistake in legislation could be corrected, he said, but a mistake in the imperial policy was irretrievable.

Personally, he did not think a general election very near; but, whether near or distant, the issue would depend on whether the people have it in their hearts to do all that is necessary, even if it occasionally went against their prejudices, to consolidate an Empire which could only be maintained by relations of interest, as well as by relations of sentiment.

Would Draw Colonies Nearer.

London, May 16.—Premier Balfour, accompanied by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Ritchie, yesterday, received a large and influential deputation of Unionist members of the House of Commons, who protested against the remission of the grain duty. Mr. Balfour made a long argument in reply to the representations of the deputation, but did not give the slightest indication of conceding the demands. In the course of his remarks he said:

New conditions had arisen since the old free trade policy was adopted, and he could imagine circumstances under which Great Britain, by way of retaliation, would no longer consent to be made a passive target for other countries living under different conditions.

Mr. Balfour concluded with saying he would welcome a closer fiscal union of the Motherland and the Colonies. The movement, however, would be extremely difficult to carry out and must come from the heart, conscience and intellect of the great masses of the people.

He believed in universal free trade, but at present every country except Great Britain was protected.

Everyone Praying For Rain.

Kingston, May 16.—As a result of the forest fires in North Frontenac, the Catholic Church on the Snow Road, and adjacent to Ompah, was burned. Tales of narrow escapes with life and property come in from all sections of the country, and everybody is praying for rain.

Away With the Lumber.

Ottawa, May 16.—At a public meeting in the City Hall last night from which scores were turned away, the piling of lumber in the city limits was roundly condemned, and a motion carried calling on the City Council to forbid its continuance.

BILLS ADVANCED A STAGE.

Purely Routine Work Accomplished by the Legislature in a Short Session on Friday—Questions.

Toronto, May 16.—The Legislature held a short session yesterday and advanced a number of bills a stage.

Mr. Ross' bill to amend the Municipal Act by removing the disqualification of persons enjoying exemption privileges from running for municipal office was read a second time.

The Attorney-General's bill to amend the Children's Protection Act of Ontario was given its second reading. Magistrates must provide for children's detention, but must not send them to jail.

A number of private bills were read a second time.

Third Readings.

The following bills were read a third time: To amend the Public Libraries Act (Harcourt); respecting the Necropolis Burying Ground, South Dorchester (Brown); respecting St. James' Cathedral, Toronto (Pyne).

In committee, the House agreed to several bills, with some amendments.

Questions by Members.

Replying to Dr. Nesbitt, Hon. Mr. Latchford said that J. A. McMaster was appointed overseer on Markstay and Warren road in May, 1902. The sum of $180 was sent to him on May 20, with a bond for execution. About one and a quarter miles of road were improved.

Replying to Dr. Jessop, Hon. Mr. Dryden said there was at present one experimental fruit station in the County of Lincoln, and one in Wentworth. It was, therefore, not the intention of the Government to establish an experimental fruit farm in Lincoln County.

Receipts of Algoma Registrar.

To Mr. Matheson, the Attorney-General said the receipts of the registrar of the District of Algoma at Sault Ste. Marie for the years 1900, 1901 and 1902 were as follows: $3,094.73, $2,013.24, $2,618.53. The registrar also receives a grant of $800, but the Government was considering the advisability of withdrawing the grant if the fees keep up to the figures of the last few years.

In reply to Dr. Barr, Mr. Stratton said the cost to the province of the smallpox epidemic of 1902 was $5,664.78.

No Dominion Subsidy.

Mr. Latchford informed Dr. Nesbitt that no subsidy had been granted by the Dominion Government to the Temiskaming Railway. There had been no correspondence between the Governments, but there had been personal interviews on the subject.

To Mr. Taylor, Mr. Dryden said John Darrach was still Clerk of Municipal Statistics.

CANADA'S BISLEY TEAM.

The List Has Reached the 44th Man Making a Record.

Ottawa, May 16.—The Canadian team for Bisley will sail on May 20 by the SS. Tunisian. The team has been completed, with the exception of two men who are yet to hear from. The list has reached the 44th man this year, further down than it ever went before. The complete team will be as follows:

Pte. E. C. O'Brien, 30th, Guelph; Capt. J. Crowe, 30th, Guelph; Staff-Sergt. J. H. Simpson, 10th R. G. Toronto; Capt. A. Elliott, 12th, Toronto; Sergt. W. D. Annand, 43rd D. C.O.R., Ottawa; Pte. J. W. Smith, 21st Fusiliers; Capt. J. M. Jones, 82nd, P.E.I.; Armourer Sergt. H. Morris, 13th, Hamilton; Pte. J. T. Peddle, 5th Royal Scots, Montreal; Capt. W. C. King, 45th, Durham; Major R. J. Spearing, 53rd, Sherbrooke; Lieut. G. V. Room, 69th, Middleton, N. S.; Capt. J. Duff Stewart, 60th D.C.O.R., B. C.; Pte. R. McGregor and Pte. G. W. Russell, G.G.F.G., Ottawa; Staff-Sergt. T. H. Hayhurst, 13th, Hamilton; Staff-Sergt. J. White, 69th, N. S.; Pte. George Brooks, 48th Highlanders, Toronto; Col.-Sergt. W. H. Sproule, 43rd D.C.O.R.

The last two have not been heard from, and the following are waiting men: Sergt. W. Drysdale, 1st P. W. R. F., and Col.-Sergt. E. Skedden, 13th, Hamilton.

New York.—John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers, is in the city gathering material for his new book.

OFFICIALS MIX IN POLITICS

Offensive Partisanship Rouses Ire of Roche of Marquette, Man.

Violation of Liberal Principle—Sir Wilfrid Laurier Says He Adhered to It and Promises to Investigate Specific Cases—House Divided on Amendment—Army a Social Reserve—Will Adjourn Over Holiday.

Ottawa, May 16.—In the House yesterday Sir Wilfrid Laurier introduced a motion to adjourn from May 20 to 26. This was carried.

Army Is a Social Reserve.

Mr. Charlton called attention to a cable report of the court-martial in Dublin over the case of "ragging" in a regiment of lancers. It was stated that General Roberts was taking a great interest in the case. The victim was Lieut. Willows, a "ranker," and a colonial. Mr. Charlton entered a protest on behalf of Canadians.

Minister Borden said there was undoubtedly some prejudice against rankers, though it did not prevail generally in the army, and not against colonials.

Officials Mix in Politics.

On motion to go into supply, Mr. Roche (Marquette, Man.) called attention to the interference of Dominion officials in the Manitoba local elections, and concluded by moving an amendment, regretting that the Government had allowed so gross a violation of the principle laid down in 1896.

Mr. McCreary, Mr. Lancaster and Mr. Scott (Assiniboia) continued the debate till 6 o'clock.

After recess Sir Wilfrid Laurier said there was no province in Canada where the political axe had been so active as in Manitoba. He challenged the accuracy of the statement that there had been 150 dismissals between 1896 and 1903, and asserted there had been no dismissals without cause. He promised to investigate any cases which came under his declarations, made in 1896, to which he said he strictly adhered.

The House divided at 11.30, when the amendment was defeated on a vote of 22 to 71.

REDISTRIBUTION PLANS.

Proposals Regarding Ontario To Be Exchanged in a Day or Two.

Ottawa, May 16.—The Redistribution Committee had a private conference yesterday morning in which several propositions were made and left over in most instances for further consideration.

Proposals with regard to the division of Ontario counties are to be exchanged within a day or two, and a conference between the members of the committee representing that province will be held early next week.

It has been suggested that the Townships of Clara, Maria and Head in North Renfrew be added to Nipissing, and that the County of Northumberland shall not include the Township of South Monaghan, but shall include the Town of Trenton.

Toronto is to be divided into five ridings, to be called North, East, South, West and Centre Toronto, but no agreement has been reached as to whether this shall include Toronto as constituted for electoral purposes or Toronto as constituted for municipal purposes.

Proposals were exchanged with regard to the redistribution of British Columbia, and it was found that there is very little difference of opinion as to that province.

It is proposed that the City of Ottawa shall include New Edinburgh, and that the County of Carleton shall not include the Townships of Gloucester and Osgoode, but that they shall remain, as at present, a part of the electoral division of Russell.

AUSTRALIAN STRIKE OFF.

Drastic Bill Before the Legislature Made Strikers Knuckle Under.

Melbourne, Victoria, May 16.—Premier Irvine announced in the Legislative Assembly yesterday that he had received a letter from the officials of the Engine Drivers' Association, declaring the strike off and submitting unconditionally. The president of the Engine Drivers' Association in an interview, said the surrender was due to the drastic nature of the strike bill, which was sure of adoption.

Car Lines Tied Up.

Bridgeport, Conn., May 16.—The conductors and motormen employed by the Connecticut Railway and Lighting Company here went on strike yesterday, tying up all the lines in the city. At a meeting early yesterday the Trolleymen's Union refused to accept a proposition of the company, granting a slight increase in wages. The company refused to recognize the union. About 225 men are out.

1,000 Added to Denver Strikers.

Denver, Col., May 16.—The Joint Executive Committee of organized labor called out 1,000 additional union men yesterday, increasing the total number of strikers in this city to more than 4,000.

Go Back to the Factory.

Chicago, May 16.—Six thousand employes of the Deering Harvester Company, after a strike of three weeks, returned to work yesterday.

ASKED WITNESS TO FORGET

Approaches by Hon. Mr. Stratton to Globe Reporter.

SOME STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Provincial Secretary Requested Globe Reporter to Neglect to Remember What Occurred Relative to the Newspaper Interview—Statement to Counsel Destroyed—Evidence to Be All in This Week—Mr. Johnston's Fear.

Toronto, May 16.—At the opening of the Gamey bribery Commission yesterday morning Chancellor Boyd asked Mr. Gamey to hand into court the memo. book he spoke of Thursday. He asked Mr. Johnston to inquire into the deposit of the $900 in the bank by Mr. Gamey. Mr. Ritchie said he proposed to call the receiving teller in connection with that.

To Break the Alibi.

Mr. John Loughrin, ex-M.P.P., the Registrar of Deeds and Stipendary Magistrate for Nipissing; Mr. C. A. McCool, M.P., of Mattawa, and Dr. James, M. P. P., of Mattawa, were brought here because Mr. McPherson said he had positive information that they had an interview with Hon. J. R. Stratton on Sept. 11. They testified that they had no such interview, the first two saying they had not seen Mr. Stratton at all during Exhibition week.

Mr. Hammond Recalled.

Mr. McPherson then recalled Mr. M. O. Hammond, The Globe reporter, to give fuller details as to one or two points in his evidence. On the day before Mr. Gamey gave The Globe interview, he visited Mr. Stratton's office after three o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Myers told him that Mr. Stratton wanted to see him. Entering the latter's room, the Provincial Secretary asked if The Globe would like to publish an interview with him about the Carnegie Library proposal. Mr. Hammond telephoned the city editor with Mr. Stratton's private 'phone, and ascertained that The Globe did not desire an opinion on this topic. Mr. Stratton then handed him a typewritten interview to read. Mr. Hammond could not remember the exact words used, but formed the impression that he was going to get Mr. Gamey to give that interview. The interview which Mr. Gamey handed him next day was on different paper, and contained some alterations.

"I understand that you have stated privately that you could give evidence on one or two material points had you been asked the questions?" said Mr. McPherson.

Mr. Hammond said he had said something to this effect. The point he alluded to on which he had not been examined was the fact that he had seen Gamey go into the vestibule leading to Mr. Stratton's private office after giving him the interview.

In cross-examination by Mr. Johnston, Mr. Hammond said that, in the interview published in The Globe he prefixed the typewritten copy by an introduction of his own, and some general questions about Manitoulin.

Asked Gamey's Signature.

To Mr. McPherson, Mr. Hammond told again how the interview for The Globe was obtained from Mr. Gamey. There had been no discussion about the interview, and Mr. Gamey signed it after witness had read it at Mr. Gamey's request. Mr. Gamey added the words, "In matters that I am satisfied with," while they were seitting at the table before the interview was signed. These were the words Mr. Stratton wished him to strike out afterwards.

Q.—What did Mr. Stratton say to you at any time about this interview, after it was signed by Mr. Gamey, after he wanted you to strike out those words? A.—I think he asked me not to send it up to the typesetters too soon as it might leak out to the other papers.

A Fair Question.

Q.—I ask you expressly, did Mr. Stratton at any time ask you to suppress your knowledge regarding this interview? A.—Any particular part, Mr. McPherson?

Q.—That is a fair question and cannot be misunderstood. I would like you to answer it as fairly as I have asked it? A.—We had a discussion respecting it—we had a discussion about what took place a few days after Mr. Gamey made his charge in the House. He asked me my recollection of what took place on the day of the interview or the day before. I recalled some of the things I remembered, and he said then that he didn't remember one or two things which I had mentioned, and the next day he said to me that I was right.

Q.—Anything else? A.—A few days after that—I think at that time he asked me to prepare my statement and give it to Mr. Johnston. I did so. A few days later on I met him in the corridor after the House rose, at 6 o'clock.

Stratton Asked If He Couldn't Forget.

We walked along the corridor together and he asked me if I couldn't forget some of the things and I didn't go beyond that at all. I don't know what he referred to in particular.

Q.—Anything else, Mr. Hammond, besides that? A.—No, I don't remember anything else.

Q.—Is this a perfectly fair relation of all that took place between you and Mr. Stratton then, full and complete? A.—There may have been other details said. That is the purport of it all.

Q.—What was your reply to his request to forget part of it or some of it? A.—I think I said I might forget things I wasn't asked about.

Q.—Anything besides that? A.—No, I don't think I said anything more than that.

Q.—Did he say anything else than that? A.—I think he repeated the remark a moment later, but I didn't go any further than that.

Q.—What remark? A.—The remark which I gave you previously, "Can't you forget some of the things."

Q.—Then as to the statement that you prepared for Mr. Johnston, did you write it out? A.—Yes.

Q.—And sign it? A.—I don't think it was signed.

Q.—Did you deliver it to Mr. Johnston? A.—Yes.

Mr. McPherson asks for the production of this statement.

Mr. Johnston Destroyed Statement.

Mr. Johnston—The answer to that is, first, it was a statement prepared for counsel, and, second, the statement is not now in existence because as each witness was heard in the box his statement was at once destroyed.

Mr. McPherson—Is there a copy of it?

Mr. Johnston—No copy of it.

Mr. McPherson—My learned friend ought to produce anything he has under the circumstances.

Mr. Johnston—There is nothing.

Mr. McPherson—I think I should be entitled to anything further from Mr. Johnston in the absence of the statement.

The Chancellor—Mr. Johnston says it is destroyed.

Mr. McPherson—What is the substitute for it?

Statement and Evidence Conflicts.

Mr. Johnston—I have no substitute. I have the evidence. The moment I got each witness' evidence I destroyed the statement, for the simple reason that statements on the one hand, and evidence given in the box on the other, are apt to be conflicting.

The 11th September.

The last witness of the morning was Mr. W. E. Buckingham, barrister, of Guelph, who was examined with reference to a cheque for $1,900, drawn to his order on the Ontario Bank on Sept. 11 by the Trusts and Guarantee Company. Mr. Buckingham explained that on that day he had obtained a cheque for $2,300 on a stock transaction from O'Hara & Company, brokers. He then went to see Mr. T. P. Coffee, manager of the Trust and Guarantee Company, and closed up an old partnership account for $400 by exchanging the O'Hara cheque for the company's cheque in the amount of $1,900. The latter he cashed, depositing $1,200 with A. E. Ames & Company and taking $700 away with him.

At Variance With Stratton's Evidence.

He testified that he saw Mr. Coffee in his office at 10.45 on September 11, and found him closeted with Mr. Stratton and Mr. Boland. They had been there some time, and left the office as he went in. He remained with Mr. Coffee for twenty minutes, and they did not come back.

This is at variance with evidence given by Messrs. Stratton and Boland, who said that they arrived at the office at 11 o'clock, and that Mr. Stratton remained there until after 1.

In cross-examination, Mr. Buckingham stated that he could not say whether Mr. Stratton left the building when he went out.

This closed the evidence for the day, and the court adjourned until this morning.

Mr. Johnston said that there was an impression abroad that an effort was being made to prolong the enquiry until after the Legislature was prorogued. The Chancellor and Mr. Ritchie both disclaimed any such intention.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The proposition of Messrs. Dolan et al. in regard to the gas works, which was submitted to the Council last night, looks reasonable and fair, and it is hard to believe that any disinterested person in this city will oppose the by-law when submitted to the people. Opposition in light matters must be maintained, and unless our citizens are prepared to submit to the tender mercies of a monopoly there does not appear to be any good reason for opposing the proposition submitted last night.

* * *

The promise to extend the fuel gas system would mean much to many householders in this city, and would certainly make the prospects of the company brighter. The Intelligencer sees no good reason for anyone to throw obstacles in the way of the proposed agreement, especially as the wiping out of the company would mean a loss to this corporation of $25,200 in stock. En passant, it may be pointed out that, if the Gas Company's mortgages are consolidated on a 4 per cent. basis, the City's guarantee would amount to about $1400 per year, considerably less than it would be if matters remained as they are at present. Under the management of the gentlemen whose names are mentioned, the works should be run at a profit, and we don't think the city would ever be called on to make up any deficiencies.

* * *

The action of the Council, in giving Mr. Kirkwood to understand that, should he operate the rolling mills, he might expect the return of his $2500 forfeit money, will, we believe, meet with the approval of the great majority of people in this city. Nearly everyone, when it was learned that the forfeit money had been paid over, said: "yes, the city has got the $2500, but that's a small matter in comparison to the operation of the rolling mills."

* * *

And that seems about the right way to look at it. The money should be allowed to remain where it is for a reasonable time, and then, if Mr. Kirkwood operates the mills, according to the terms of the by-law, he should receive fair and courteous consideration.

THE TORTURE OF BACKACHE.

It ages the young—cripples and enfeebles the old—incapacitates a man for work—unfits him for pleasure.

There is no need to endure the agony of an aching back—to be crippled with a sore, stiff, lame back.

DR. PITCHER'S BACKACHE-KIDNEY TABLETS

Take away every bit of pain, stiffness and soreness—quickly and completely. Here is some convincing evidence:

FREE FROM PAIN.

Mr. Wm. Smith, Pinnacle St., Belleville, says:—"Before using Pitcher's Kidney Tablets, I was very much afflicted with lumbago. Since I used a bottle, I am not only free from that but I am sleeping better. The nervous restlessness has ceased. The dull aching in the small of my back has disappeared. I can vouch for Pitcher's Tablets being a reliable remedy for pain and lameness in the back."

IT HURT TO WALK.

John Histed, 71 Barton St., Hamilton, says:—"Just after a hard lift some three years ago, a severe pain started in the small of my back and over the right hip. It bothered me badly to walk. I was induced to try Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets. I got a bottle and they were just the thing; they cured the pain and soreness completely."

There is no remedy in the world to equal Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets for curing, not only backache, but also Bright's disease, diabetes, dropsy, scalding or irritation of the urine, frequent calls during the day or night, blood impurities, skin eruptions, rheumatism, neuralgia, dragging pain in the loins and all kidney, bladder and urinary troubles of young or old.

The White Lies of Society.

IN the white lies of society, women who are otherwise scrupulously truthful, are amazingly proficient, writes Geraldine Bonner in the "Argonaut;" they lie to be agreeable, to please. I have often heard women, who could no more have borne false witness against their neighbor than they could have robbed a church, say they would always send down the message "Not at home" rather than the honest but inhospitable "Engaged." "Not at home" was untrue, but hurts nobody's feelings. "Engaged," which accurately stated the case, was impolite and ungracious, and no one, if they could help it by a little judicious suppressing of facts, would ever be sent hurt from their door. I never shall forget some early lessons I received in the house of a lady who was a social leader and a famous charmer, although well on in years. On her day at home she used to sit where she saw the visitors as they came toward the entrance. One day a young woman appeared, and she exclaimed in a high key of annoyance:

"Good gracious, here's Miss So-and-So, just when I wanted to talk to you"—this to my companion, with a bewilderingly sweet smile. "What a bore she is, and always coming here."

The next moment Miss So-and-So entered, and was greeted with the most flattering air of delighted surprise.

"Why, my dear Miss So-and-So! How good of you to come! What a charming surprise! It's a hundred years since I've seen you," etc.

And Miss So-and-So beamed with the deprecating pleasure of one who feels herself appreciated.

When we had left and were descending the steps, I said somewhat ruefully to my companion:

"I suppose she said just the same about us before we came in, to the people who were there before us."

"Of course she did. Why shouldn't she? She's so charming; and one of the most charming things about her is that she's such a transparent liar. Everybody knows that she doesn't mean a word she says, but likes it just as much as if she did."

Ladies of this type will tell you that good manners are founded on a groundwork of amiable insincerity. If one were perfectly sincere, how horribly rude one would sometimes be! Imagine greeting the familiar remark, "Oh, I'm so sorry; I'm afraid I've disturbed you," with the truthful answer: "You have, and I'm not at all glad you came," or, instead of employing the old reliable "So sorry I couldn't get to see you last Friday," substituting the aggressive uprightness of "I had plenty of time to come round on Friday, but I didn't want to go." White lies do certainly grease the wheels of life, and personally I have the greatest possible respect for them. Anything that makes people more agreeable in the society sense ought to be encouraged. In one's social and domestic relations one should cultivate whatever promotes harmony and lessens friction. There is enough of that in the world outside; and, after all, the Recording Angel is not really on the lookout for white lies. The commandments only stipulate that we refrain from bearing false witness; they do not concern themselves in the least about polite falsehoods.

The Romance of a Necklace.

GREAT animation reigns just now on the blue shores of Corfu, where all the fishermen of the coast are busy trying their chances for a big catch. But up to now they have not succeeded in smoothing the capricious temper of Dame Fortune, and night after night they go back home very much downhearted. Why? Well, perhaps the story as told by a European correspondent is worth repeating.

At the moment when the news of her son Archduke Rudolph's tragic death was brought to her, the Empress of Austria was wearing a necklace of big pearls which was almost priceless. At night her chamberwoman saw with dismay that the lustrous pearls had become dull and opaque; she ventured to hint as much to her august mistress, who, however, only shrugged her shoulders with a weary gesture, and would not listen. A few weeks later the Empress asked for her pearls, but on opening the case she uttered a cry of surprise. There were her beautiful dewdrops resting on the white satin lining, which now looked brilliant and lovely compared with the dull and greyish pearls. "This is not my necklace!" she said angrily. But she soon knew that, like true old friends, her beloved pearls had gone into mourning with their mistress. She called to her aid all the jewelers of the world to try and bring back the splendid "Orient," which had made her pearls marvelous to look at. But in vain. At last a professor of chemistry at the Vienna University told the Empress that the only remedy for the pearls was to dip them into the sea and leave them there as long as possible. So one day, accompanied only by an old monk, she rowed into a certain little bay round the island, and, with his aid, hid the necklace in a little cranny in the rocks below the waves, and swore him to secrecy over the matter.

The secret, alas, was too well kept, for on hearing the news of his august mistress's tragic death, Father Ambrosia fell dead in the cloister as he was going to early mass; and now both the Empress and her confidant are buried, the one in a damp vault, and the other under the rose bushes at Corfu, while the precious necklace is resting somewhere among the seaweeds, its location unknown to any living being.

"Hello" Before Prayers.
